Labor Chief

John Lynk, president of the Nova Scotia Federation of Labor, declared at the federation's annual convention in Halifax that he couldn't care less if Pictou county's newest industry, Michelin Tire Corp., failed to sell a single truck tire if its workers could not be brought into a union. Mr. Lynk admits that his stand is going to be unpopular and he is not going to back down.

Traffic Tangles Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — The death of the Spadina Expressway will result in massive traffic tie ups in the next few years as more lanes are added to the Don Valley Parkway, Sam Cass, city roads and traffic commissioner said today.

He said a study now being completed will recommend spending $10 million to add lanes next year to the most congested section of the north-south freeway in the city's east end.

"Our studies indicate that within five years the effects of growth of Metro will show us in no uncertain terms", he said in an interview. "It will mean that the Spadina will have to be completed as originally planned and the Gardiner Expressway will have to be finished through Scarborough."

The Spadina, which would have run from north Toronto to the downtown core, was stopped by the Ontario government after a massive campaign by local residents who would have been affected by the multi-lane expressway. About $70 million has been spent on it.

Warm in Ontario

Above normal temperatures are expected to cover Quebec and Ontario with below-normal temperatures on the Prairies and in British Columbia according to the 30-day outlook of the United States Weather Bureau. Light to heavy perciptiation is expected to cover the country except for parts of Ontario and Prairies where it will be heavy. This is not a specific forecast and changes may occurr.

Nuclear Device Exploded

U.S. Says Only Adverse Effects from Amchitka Blast Minor

AMCHITKA ISLAND (CP-AP) — A United States government spokesman says the only initial adverse effects from the Amchitka underground nuclear blast were minor ones. Scientists now look forward to the use of underground blasts to tap new sources of natural gas.

Atomic Energy Commission officials said they were pleased with the results of the Amchitka explosion and plan no further nuclear tests on this bleak Aleutian Island between the Bering Sea and Pacific Ocean.

It is conceivable, AEC officials say, that a new test of the use of nuclear explosions in the production of natural gas could come as early as late next year near the small mountain community of Rio Blanco, Colo.

Hundreds of similar explosions could follow beneath the hills of Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico and Utah.

AEC officials also expect that this peaceful use of atomic energy will meet with many of the same protests that met Saturday's Canikhik explosion here, a test of a warhead for the Spartan anti-ballistic missile.

Although the test went off without incident, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp of Canada noted it "will be some time before we can be sure there has been no venting of radiation and no harm to the environment."

Sharp said apart from possible danger to the environment, Canada also opposed the test because it sustains the nuclear arms race.

"The Canadian government will continue to do all it can—directly with the nuclear testing powers and in the UN and in the Geneva disarmament committee—to bring all testing to an end," Sharp said.

Thousands of Canadians demonstrated Saturday against the blast. Most were peaceful and the most serious incident occurred in St. John's, Nfld., where air crowd of about 200 gathered in front of the U.S. consulate. Three persons were arrested after several consulate windows were broken and some members of the group clashed with police.

The AEC said that post-detonation examination of the island has discovered only "minimal" environmental damage.

The only casualties discovered thus far, the AEC said, were an injured sea otter, several dead birds, a destroyed nesting area and a small fresh-water lake.

The otter, the birds and the nesting area—of either bald eagles or peregrine falcons—were apparent victims of rock slides touched off by the United States' most powerful underground explosion.

The small lake near ground zero drained away when the nearly five-acre basin blast ripped a crack in the lake bed, the AEC said.

Henry Vermillion, an AEC public affairs officer, stressed that the AEC's findings were incomplete. "...said the search for more subsurface environmental damage — which the AEC hopes it won't find — will continue for at least a year.

Environmentalists, who fought a long battle against the test all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court before losing, was a possibility the explosion would touch off natural disasters and further damage to the environment and wildlife.

The Supreme Court refused by a 4-to-3 decision Saturday to halt the blast. The court ruled less than five hours before it went off.

The blast gave birth to an earthquake registering 7 on the open-ended Richter scale, but it was felt no farther away than an island some 200 miles distant. No seismic sea waves developed. And the AEC said scores of monitoring devices on the finger-shaped island showed no trace of radioactivity.

James Ramsey, AEC chairman, took his wife and two of his children to the barren, uninhabited island to demonstrate his faith in Canikhik's safety. He later said the test was "amply justified."

The ground shuddered on Amchitka, a barren island 1,400 miles from Anchorage, as the bomb created a churning molten mass of radioactive rock beneath the surface.

As the rock settles into the huge underground cavern over the next few weeks, the ground is expected to subside, forming a crater hundreds of yards wide and eventually about 40 feet deep.

Maj. Gen. Edward Giller, AEC assistant general manager for military application, remarked: "It's a big hole. We will have no reason to require a second test."

Information chief Vermillion said several small structures were scattered by the force of the explosion, though a larger building which housed gear for the calorimeter in the shaft construction appeared in surprisingly good condition.

Swarms of aftershocks were recorded after the blast and some surfaced Saturday continued throughout Sunday at a diminishing rate.

To Your Good Health

Chronic Bronchitis Is Often Associated with Emphysema

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dr. Thosteson: I have read quite a bit about emphysema and have known two people who suffered from it. One died.

But nowhere have I seen anything on what, a reasonably healthy middle-aged person like myself can do so my chances of contracting it are lessened.—Mrs. N.J.

You have a head start by being a woman, because emphysema is more common in males. I have noticed, though, that women with a strong asthmatic tendency are more prone to develop emphysema—as such women do well to use medications which control respiratory distress. Desensitization to limit allergies causing asthma also can help.

Specifically, we cannot say we know exactly what causes emphysema, so an exact prevention can't be specified. In general, though, it is observable that chronic bronchitis very often accompanies emphysema.

Coughing, infection, irritation of the lung tissues seem to be an unholy alliance in the emphysemic's picture. Among known lung irritants, cigarette smoking is at the top of the list. Cigarettes alter the structure of the bronchial tubes, cause cough and irritation, all of which can lead, eventually, to some extent.

A history of heavy cigarette smoking almost invariably is found in emphysema patients, and there is little if any point in trying to treat such patients unless they quit smoking. Heavy cigarette smoking is a term often heard but seldom defined... Let's say that more than 10 a day is heavy.

Obesity is a factor in some patients.

Occupations doubtless are factors if they expose people to fumes or particles that irritate the lung tissues. Emphysema was sometimes called the glass-blower's disease, but how accurate a name for it that was, I do not know.

Anyway, the things you can do to make emphysema less likely are to avoid heavy use of cigarettes; use what measures you and your doctor can to minimize asthma or bronchitis; If you are fat, reduce.

But do not worry about emphysema solely because you are 45 or older.

Dr. Thosteson: Is it true that a person who has no gall bladder must watch his diet? My father's doctor refused to see a doctor. He complains of brown spots showing up on his face and arms, and we are concerned about his yellow complexion.

Could eating foods he shouldn't cause this? He eats nuts and chocolate and butter and such. We are afraid of a liver condition. If you wrote about it, he might take warning, as he believes everything he reads on any medical subject. —Mrs. G.R.D.

Mos. folks without a gall bladder tolerate a well-balanced diet, and I don't see why the foods you mentioned should bother him.

I can't comment on the brown spots (unless they are liver spots) but the yellow color could be jaundice, meaning a liver disorder.

Such yellowness also can come from excessive eating of yellow vegetables (a condition called carotenemia) but it isn't common and it takes a whopping lot of yellow vegetables to do it.

My serious advise is that he see his doctor and thereby perhaps forestall serious liver trouble.

Dr. Thosteson: Why do I have so much gas in my stomach, particularly when I drink milk? I am 70 and in good health. I love milk.—B.H.

One possibility is that you may have acquired an allergy to milk and milk products. Another is a deficiency of enzymes necessary to digest milk.

New York Times Urges U.S. Confer with Canada

NEW YORK (CP) — The New York Times says in an editorial under the heading "Do we care about Canada?" that if there "is any country on earth which the United States could afford to consult as a matter of settled policy it is this important neighbor."

Canadian-American relations have reached the lowest point in many years, The Times says. "Canadians resent ways in which they are regularly ignored or taken for granted by the United States." These long-standing American "habits" have become more serious at a time of growing nationalism everywhere.

"They have become intolerable for a neighbor that is now the world's 10th largest industrial power," The Times says.

Following is the text of the editorial:

During a September press conference, President Nixon casually dropped an unfortunate remark that still reverberates in Canada. He had discovered that "Japan is our biggest customer in the world and we are their biggest customer in the world."

In fact, Canada remains this country's biggest customer by a wide margin. In the first six months in 1971, the United States sold 2½ times as much by value to Canada as it exported to Japan. For Canadians, already deeply concerned about the impact of Mr. Nixon's economic measures on their economy, the remark was all too symbolic of a chronic ignorance of—and indifference toward—this northern neighbor and ally. Their suspicion that nobody in Washington cares is heightened by the fact that Mr. Nixon's 10-percent surcharge could cost Canada $3 billion in a year and boost an unemployment percentage already the highest in a decade.

The president's decision to go ahead with the massive nuclear test on Amchitka in the face of strong protests from the Canadian Parliament and people has in the last few days greatly intensified this rising climate of resentment.

Pierre Trudeau in office has always eschewed the anti-American antics that come naturally to many Canadian politicians. Yet, the prime minister was moved by recent events to say of Americans: "I don't think they know much or care much really about Canada." He added that, if the United States is indeed as a permanent policy to "beggar its neighbors," Canada would be forced into "a fundamental reassessment" of its trade economy.

Such words, coupled with the Amchitka affair, signal the lowest point for many years in Canadian-American relations. Blame for this condition doubtless falls on both sides of the border: in her differences with this country Canada is not always right. Nevertheless, in their own interest, it would be well for Americans to understand why Canada believes it merited exemption from the Nixon economic actions and the threat they pose to Canadian political and economic stability.

Canada "floated" its dollar a good 15 months before Washington demanded currency revaluation by its trading partners—and the upward revision of nearly seven per cent hit some Canadian exporters hard. Washington demands that other countries lower tariffs and other trade barriers; but Canada insists that it maintains no discriminatory trade curbs against the United States.

For the last three years Canada has enjoyed a favorable trade balance with the United States but prior to 1968 it traditionally ran deficits. Canadians therefore wonder Washington now contends that the United States must always have trade surpluses, even if one result is a continuation of the buying up of Canada's enterprises with American capital exports.

Apart from these arguments on economic practices, Canadians resent the way in which they are regularly ignored or taken for granted by the United States. These American habits long antedate the Nixon Administration, but they become more serious at a time of growing nationalism everywhere. They have become intolerable for a neighbor that is now the world's 10th largest industrial power and that ranks sixth or seventh in per capita international trade.

These American practices are usually unnecessary as well as self-defeating. If there is any country on earth which the United States could afford to consult as a matter of settled policy it is this important neighbor. What the noises from Canada clearly indicate is that the cost of indifference neglect is escalating dangerously.

Weary MPs Welcome Two-day Vacation

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs wearied by the tedium of tax-law technicalities are taking two days off this week, but will work a few hours overtime today and Tuesday on the government's tax bill.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen encountered no dissent when he proposed that the Commons should follow up its Remembrance Day holiday Thursday with a day off Friday.

All parties agreed to sit an hour after the usual lunight and to meet Tuesday morning for an additional two hours. The House normally assembles in the afternoon on Tuesdays.

The government has been sitting as a committee most days since Oct. 13 to examine the government's big tax bill part by part, often word by word.

Assiniboia Vote Significant Test

ASSINIBOIA, Sask. (CP) — Voters in this rural area go today to elect a member to the House of Commons, but there's more at stake than a single Western seat.

The Assiniboia riding has been the scene of a heated by-election campaign by all three parties, each with their special reasons for desperately seeking victory.

The Liberals, represented by farmer Jim Hooker, 61, took the seat from the New Democrats in 1968. A defeat would mean loss of prestige, especially after weak showings recently in provincial elections in Saskatchewan, Ontario, Newfoundland and Alberta.

A Liberal win would be contrived a vote of confidence in the federal government's western agriculture policies.

The Progressive Conservatives, represented by former Lawrence Watson, want to add to their score in three of the four recent provincial elections to show the country that they can once again win on the Prairies, even without the leadership of John Diefenbaker.

Bill Knight, the NDP candidate, is a school teacher from Weyburn and, at 24, the youngest in the race.

The Commons seat became vacant earlier this year with the death of Liberal A. B. (AB) Douglas.

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
Dble	Redble	3 NT

Opening lead — two of diamonds.

This deal occurred in the World Pair Olympiad in Deauville, 1962.

Most of the South players opened with a club, but when Philadelphia's Robert Jordan (playing with Arthur Robinson) held the hand he opened with a notrump. The bidding proceeded as shown, and when West led a diamond Jordan made ten tricks for a fine score.

Without arguing the merits of the notrump bid, which must be regarded as substantial, the fact remains that in the actual case the bid was highly successful. Robinson's double of two clubs covered the one-weak spot of Jordan's hand, and he got to three notrump without once mentioning his spades.

East's redouble was SOS and in effect told West that any suit but clubs was preferable as trump.

At another table the bidding went:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
Pass	Redble	Pass	2 ♦
Pass	Pass

Gardener and Rose, of England, were East-West and defended exceptionally well to beat the contract by two tricks.

Sensing that his partner was probably void of clubs, Rose led a club. If he chose the deuce, thus indicating by this selection of a high card that his entry for further ruffs was in the lowest side suit, diamonds.

After declarer had finessed the queen, East ruffed and returned a diamond. As a result, the declarer went down one in diamonds, losing a heart, two diamonds and two club ruffs before he could even get started.

Tortured Girl Set Up Friend For Gang Rape

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — Cathleen Ann Gilbert, the 17-year-old girl who authorities say was tortured and murdered as a group of young persons looked on, was killed in revenge for setting up a girl friend and fellow "club" member for a gang rape, says an account in the Detroit Free Press.

The newspaper quotes a man it identified only as a witness to the murder as saying the actual killer is still at large.

A Vietnam veteran and his onetime girl-friend have been charged with the murder. But the Free Press says the unnamed witness exonerated them and laid the blame on a man who, according to the witness, claimed he contracted a venereal disease from Miss Gilbert.

The paper also quotes the witness as saying he and other members of a "social club" called Satanical Angles (pronounced angels) were present when the Flint girl was tied, abused, beaten and shot by a man who, the witness said, "was laughing when it was all over."

The newspaper says the witness had named the man he said was the killer, but he was not identified in the story.

Authorities were unavailable for comment on the newspaper's account.

Miss Gilbert's nude and decomposed body was discovered Thursday in a rural district in Livingston County about 15 miles southwest of here, and officials said she had been killed around Oct. 19.

Three Space Missions Near Mars Rendezvous

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Three space missions from earth—one American and two Russian—are nearing a rendezvous with Mars that might help answer a century-old question: Is there life there?

The United States spacecraft, Mariner 9, arrives Nov. 13, orbiting Mars and dipping to within 750 miles of the surface on each revolution. Because it will not be landing on the planet, Mariner will be able to tell scientists only whether conditions seem to favor the possibility of life.

But the Russian craft, Mars 2 and 3, whose arrival dates are not certain, are almost five times heavier than Mariner. This has led some U.S. space experts to speculate that the Soviets may attempt to land a capsule or remotely-controlled rover on the Martian surface, as they did on the moon.

Fire Is Set At Paper

BROCKVILLE (CP) — A man in his mid-20s was arrested Saturday night after a cab driver saw a man dousing a rear door of The Recorder and Times, Brockville's daily newspaper, with gasoline before setting it on fire.

The cab driver brought police from a nearby station, and a Brockville man was arrested after attempting to flee on foot from the rear of the building.

Fireman doused the fire and the only damage done was to the door which had a small hole burnt through it.

Police have not released the name of the man who was to appear in court today charged with arson.

Girl Is Found

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — A missing Collingwood girl was found safe by police in Sudbury, a police official said here Saturday.

About 200 searchers had been looking for Sarita Uptall, 11, who was located after being missing from school since 10:30 a.m. Friday.

Police were questioning the girl to determine how she got to Sudbury.

Hundreds of Elephants Die in Kenyan Drought

NAIROBI (Reuter) — Hundreds of elephants are dying in a drought at Kenya's Tsavo National Park which officials there say is the worst on record.

A cameraman who visited the park's eastern section, where hardly any rain has fallen for 18 months, reported seeing more than 70 carcasses in one day.

Other elephants stand alone under parched trees, apparently waiting to die, while vultures crowd the sky, he said.

Officials at the park—Kenya's largest and the country's greatest elephant sanctuary—said dozens of rhinos and a few buffalo had also died.

Elephants most affected are babies and older cows who die mainly from starvation because of the drying-up of the trees and bushes on which they feed.

Tito Concludes Visit

HALIFAX (CP) — President Tito concluded his Canadian tour Sunday with pledges of greater economic co-operation and the possibility of freer travel between Canada and Yugoslavia.

On the final day of his five-day tour, which also included visits to Ottawa and Quebec City, the Yugoslav president was honored with a degree from Dalhousie University and a state dinner.

A communique issued before the presidential party left for London expressed "deep satisfaction" with the visit by both Canada and Yugoslavia and assessed future prospects as encouraging.

It said both countries "look forward to a properly-prepared conference on security and co-operation in Europe, with participation of all European states, Canada and the United States.

The two countries also agreed to ease travel restrictions and update trade relations as well as work toward closer contacts and exchanges in science and technology.

The Communist leader was protected by the lightest security this city has seen since the Second World War, with RCMP and city police taking every precaution against the possibility that expatriates might embarrass or harm him.

Living Costs Index Rises

OTTAWA (CP) — Food prices continued their fall season decline last month, but higher dentists' fees, home insurance, and some higher clothing prices pushed the consumer price index up a notch, Statistics Canada reported today.

The October index stood at 134.9 compared with 134.7 in September, but still a tenth of a point below its August high of 135.

The index, based on 1961 prices equalling 100, meant that it cost $13.49 last month—instead of $13.47 in September—to buy what $10 bought in 1961 for a wide range of consumer goods and services.

Food prices on average declined so that the 1961 bag of $10 worth of groceries cost $12.30 last month, instead of $13.37 as it did in September. That food bill was $13.59 in August.

The over-all increase of about one-tenth of one per cent in consumer prices last month wasn't sufficient to make any appreciable change in the purchasing power of the dollar, the statistics bureau said.

It still reported the consumer dollar had a purchasing power of 74 cents last month, in terms of the 1961 dollar, unchanged from September.

Statistics Canada also reported that while food prices declined and the prices of other commodities rose, there was, in balance, a slight reduction in commodity prices as a whole. The cost of services, which make up about 30 per cent of the total index, continued to rise.

The statistics bureau said the September-to-October increase in the over-all index this year duplicated the amount of increase in the same month last year. In percentage terms, the index last month was 3.5 per cent higher than a year ago.

The drop in food prices was seasonal, the bureau said. The fall season's harvest of fresh fruits and vegetables usually pushes food prices down at this time of year. Food prices account for more than one-quarter of the total index.

Synopsis: The cold air which brought record low temperatures to a number of localities in Ontario Sunday and Monday now is moving eastwards into Quebec. A southerly flow of milder air will raise temperatures into the low 50s in western Ontario today and to between 35 and 40 in northern regions. Little change in temperature is expected on Wednesday. Snow is spreading eastward across the province this morning and will change to rain in a few southern localities during the day and then move eastward out of Ontario overnight.

5½ Pct. Limit Put On U.S. Wage Boosts

He Says No

Judge George Boldt, chairman of President Nixon's Pay Board, tells a Washington news conference Monday night that pay raises granted after the wage freeze expires at 12:01 a.m. next Sunday may not exceed 5.5 per cent a year. The board's vote was 10-5 with the public and business members combining to outvote labor members. (AP Photo)

No Retroactive Raises Allowed

WASHINGTON (CP-Reuters) — President Nixon was armed today with some of the teeth he wants for the second phase of his new economic program — a 5.5-per-cent limit on wage increases negotiated after the current 90-day wage-price freeze ends at 12:01 a.m. Sunday.

The government's 15-member pay board, set up by the White House to work out guidelines for the wage policy sector of the president's program, voted Monday night to permit the increases contained in existing agreements, with certain provisions.

But it slapped a ceiling on those that still have to be negotiated.

It also provoked a confrontation with organized labor—including the five trade union members of the board—by banning retroactive payment of increases blocked by the 90-day freeze, which was ordered by Nixon Aug. 15.

The vote on retroactive payments was 10 to 5 with the five management and five public members of the board lined up against the five labor members.

Nixon imposed the wage-price freeze, ordered a 10-per-cent surcharge on dutiable imports into the United States and severed the dollar's link with gold in a dramatic announcement aimed at reversing the chronic U.S. balance-of-payments deficit and curbing inflation in the domestic economy.

The pay board's labor members, who include George Meany, president of the giant AFL-CIO labor union confederation, had threatened to quit the board unless they were satisfied over their demands for retroactive payments and for assurances over the pay increases promised in existing contracts.

They appeared to have backed off Monday night from their walkout threat. But Meany, who still claimed the board has "abrogated our contracts," was understood to have delayed a decision until after the AFL-CIO annual conference starting in Miami Nov. 18.

The board did bow to labor's other key demand in addition to retroactivity—approval of deferred pay increases scheduled under union contracts already in effect.

India Denies Border Crossed

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Indian officials have again reported a series of exchanges of fire between Pakistani troops and Indian border forces along the East Pakistani borders, but denied that Indian troops had ever crossed into East Pakistan.

"Instructions to our troops are not to cross the border and there are no instances of their having crossed the border," a government spokesman told a news conference Monday.

The denial came despite persistent reports that Indian troops did cross into East Pakistan Oct. 31 to silence Pakistani guns, which had shelled the Kamalpur area of Tripura territory.

The delegation members are expected to transfer at Shanghai tonight to a scheduled Air France flight and fly to New York via Paris.

French Vessel Lost in Atlantic

LA ROCHELLE, France (AP) — The French freighter Maori apparently broke in two in the Atlantic today, and a French air force pilot reported seeing some of her 39 crew members in the sea.

The 8,900-ton freighter sent out a distress call from about 200 miles west of La Rochelle. First reports said an air force search plane sighted the ship, but then it apparently disappeared.

Ulster Premier Fears Britain May Impose Direct Rule

LONDON (CP) — Battling to preserve the remnants of Northern Ireland's political order, Prime Minister Brian Faulkner says any move to impose direct rule from Westminster is "certain to lead to an even more violent holocaust."

The troubled Ulster leader is said to be deeply concerned over widespread reports that the British government is considering tightening its hold over the Stormont, the Northern Ireland Parliament.

Faulkner said on British television Monday he only hope of defeating the clandestine Irish Republican Army in Ulster lies in maintaining the Northern Ireland Parliament.

There is a political system established by an act of the British Parliament and this must be preserved at all costs," he said.

British Home Secretary Reginald Maudling is believed ready to visit Northern Ireland and consider possible changes if the situation does not improve quickly.

Faulkner later told a political rally in Ulster the IRA is suffering severe "organizational difficulties" as a result of stepped-up security efforts by more than 13,000 British troops in the area.

Dief Racks Up Lang

OTTAWA (CP) — While voters were casting their ballots in the federal byelection in Assiniboia Monday, former prime minister John Diefenbaker was regaling parliamentary reporters with his version of a campaign incident.

Mr. Diefenbaker said that while he was out in the Saskatchewan riding working for his party, he was approached by Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board.

Mr. Lang, he said, told him to quit telling people that he (Mr. Lang) didn't know anything about wheat.

"I've been in the wheat fields all my life," said the minister.

"I just told him," said Mr. Diefenbaker: "So have gophers."

Officials at Leghorn said they were searching for the plane's flight recorder to find what went wrong.

The crash was confirmed by the British embassy in Rome, which said that all the parachutists were Italian and the crew British.

The aircraft was taking part in an air exercise named Cold-stream.

The plane had left San Giusto airport at Pisa north of Livorno and was on its way to take part in the combined operation with other aircraft in Sardinia.

LEGHORN, Italy (AP) — An RAF transport plane crashed into the Ligurian Sea off northwest Italy early today with 46 Italian paratroops and five British crew members aboard. There apparently were no survivors.

It was Italy's worst peacetime military air disaster.

A search party of 10 helicopters and half a dozen tugs and navy ships found wreckage of the four-engined DC-130 Hercules but no bodies or survivors.

The wreckage was found off the island of Meloria, a few miles from Leghorn.

The RAF plane was in Italy for an Anglo-Italian military exercise.

The paratroops were from Italy's Lightning Brigade stationed in Pisa.

Young School Teacher, 24 Wins Assiniboia Byelection for NDP

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — Bill Knight, who got his feet wet in politics at 15 and will be the youngest member in Parliament at 24, Monday scored a solid victory for the New Democratic Party in the federal byelection in Assiniboia.

Mr. Knight, in capturing 39.5 per cent of the popular vote, defeated two strong contenders to wrest the seat from the Liberal government of Prime Minister Trudeau.

Complete results gave the Weyburn, Sask., high school teacher 9,566 votes compared with 8,172 for Conservative candidate Lawrence Watson and 7,041 for Liberal Jim Hooker.

The victory gives the NDP its 25th seat in the Commons and fits seventh MP from Saskatchewan. It also is the party's fifth win in the 11 federal byelections held since the 1968 general election.

Standing in the Commons now is Liberals 150, Conservatives 71, NDP 25, Social Credit 12, independent two, independent Liberal one and vacant two.

The result left Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, as the only Liberal from Saskatchewan in the Commons.

There were 32,850 eligible voters in the Assiniboia riding which spreads over almost 16,000 square miles of hilly farm and ranchland 180 miles along the United States border and north-far 80 miles.

About 78 per cent—25,502—of the eligible voters cast ballots in the byelection. The lists included 18-year-olds for the first time in a federal vote.

The decisive defeat of Mr. Hooker was considered to be a demonstration against federal agriculture policies. Much of the blame for the stunning upset of the former Saskatchewan Liberal government last June by the NDP also was placed on those policies.

The controversial prairie grains income stabilization bill became the focal point of discontent throughout the riding. Along with that was snubbing resentment of the 1970 Low Inventory For Tomorrow program.

Unpopular proposals by Finance Minister Edgar Benson to institute a capital gains tax and to increase taxes against co-op eratives also cut deeply into Liberal support. Assiniboia is extremely co-operative oriented and contains two of the largest rural credit unions in the world.

Speaking of his victory Monday night, Mr. Knight said:

"The results denote in no uncertain terms that the government bring in a grains income stabilization plan as amended. Furthermore, they have rejected increased taxation of co-operatives."

Premier Allan Blakeney's reaction was much the same.

"The result is a clear and devastating repudiation of the farm policies of Trudeau and Lang," he said.

"Let's hope that Ottawa finally has the message that farmers do not want LIFT, they don't want a poverty stabilization bill and they don't want the task force on agriculture."

Mr. Knight, a social studies and economics teacher at Weyburn collegiate, took the lead after the first three polls out of a total of 216 had been heard from and never relinquished it.

"The most important aspect of the outcome is that it is not just a victory for the NDP; it is a victory for the farmers of the West," said Mr. Knight, who got into politics at 15 when he became a member of the Souris-Estevan CCF executive and chairman of the executive policy committee.

His age won't hinder his effectiveness in the Commons," he said, "It didn't in the byelection."

The bespectacled, articulate young man is not the youngest person ever to be elected to the Commons—Lorne Nystrom, now 25, was the successful NDP candidate in Yorkton-Melville in the 1968 election — but he will be the "youngest sitting member.

A native of Estevan, he holds a bachelor of arts degree in history and political science and a bachelor of education degree with distinction in social studies.

Library Extension Raises Question

The advisability of the Belleville library board constructing an addition to the downtown library instead of a branch library in the city's west end was questioned yesterday in city council.

The board is proposing construction of library addition at an approximate cost of $100,000 claiming that the need for expansion at the Pinnacle Street library was greater than for another branch.

The committee which studied branch library in the city is premature and notes that no other city in Ontario with a population of under 50,000 has a branch library.

But Alderman Donald Souter told council some additional thought should be given to a branch library.

He said some school board members would be delighted to see a branch library built on Centennial School property in the city's west end.

He asked council to keep an open mind on the subject.

Mayor J. Russell Scott agreed the alderman raised a good point but said the library board had already checked into the second branch idea but had decided an addition to the downtown facility was needed more.

He said, however, that future plans of the board still called for two more branch libraries, one in the west end and the other in the north end of the city.

Alderman Gerald Joyce suggested that some city benefactor might be persuaded to donate a branch library in the west end.

Council received the library report and referred it to the city manager for report at the next council meeting.

Bayside Completion Uncertain

The $64 education question in Hastings county surfaced again Monday night.

"Will Bayside Secondary school students be in their new school by Jan. 1, or won't they?"

Until now, trustees have been assured that the $4-million school will be ready for occupancy by the completion date of Jan. 1.

But Monday night, director of education Eric Runacres hedged his bets with the rider: "It depends on what percentage of completion we are willing to accept."

He told trustees that other arrangements are being planned for the students in the event they can't move in on their return from Christmas holidays.

Bayside students now share Trenton High School with Trenton students on a split-shift basis, with both Bayside and Trenton students attending school three days a week.

Alderman Says Committees Too Numerous

City council is rapidly getting away from the principle of city manager form of government in that it has too many committees.

This was brought to the attention of council yesterday by Ald. Donald Souter, who said council now had 12 council committees without taking into consideration boards or commissions.

"We are devisting too much from the city manager form of government," he said.

He suggested that council might meet every week instead of the present every two weeks as one way of eliminating some of the committees.

He asked that the matter be given consideration and suggested jokingly — formation of still another committee to determine if council could do without some of the present committees.

Three-day Christmas Holiday

Belleville residents are going to enjoy a three-day holiday this Christmas.

Christmas this year falls on a Saturday but with Sunday following, the observance of Boxing Day will be extended to Monday.

City council briefly discussed the matter at its regular meeting yesterday with Alderman Jack Ireland stating that union agreements normally called for Monday observance of Boxing Day when Christmas fell on Saturday.

The motion for Monday observance was passed without further comment.

Stolen Cars Recovered

Police discovered an automobile parked in the intersection of Station and Emily Streets at 11:47 p.m. last night.

The car had been reported stolen 17 minutes earlier by owner Sheila McQuaid of 52A Front Street North. The vehicle had been parked in the rear of the Canadian Hotel on Dundas Street at Church.

A second vehicle, owned by Sandra Sandquist of 413 Bridge Street, was reported stolen from a parking lot at 170 William Street, sometime between 3.30 and 9 p.m. yesterday. It was recovered at 11.8 a.m. today by city police.

No damage was reported in either instance.

Spilled His Formula

A fire which apparently started in the wheels of the Smith Transport truck travelling on Highway 401 last night spread to the interior of the tandem. Flames shot through the truck's sides, spilling the cargo of canned baby formula onto the roadside. This morning Department of Highways and Smith Transport officials surveyed results of the $20,000 blaze, which occurred at 9.45 p.m., east of the Aikens Road.

Firemen Busy Last Night

Fire departments from Belleville, Sidney and Thurlow Townships were kept hopping last night in response to four fires.

Shortly before 6 a.m. today, John Hart of 141 George Street, woke up to the smell of smoke and the sound of what he told The Intelligencer might have been "a small explosion".

Alerting his family to the danger, his wife and three sons vacated the residence. One boy, Peter Hart, had to escape from the second-storey bedroom in which he had been sleeping, fireman Jay Ross disclosed.

"The doorbell had been shortcircuited and was ringing when I got out of bed," the homeowner said this morning, while surveying extensive damage in the basement of his home.

"It was fortunate something woke us up. It was pretty bad. My wife was the only one bothered by smoke."

When asked if Mrs. Hart had been taken to hospital, Mr. Hart said her speechless was not serious enough to warrant it. He said she was resting at another home.

Although the family thought their pet chihuahua had perished in the flames when it ran upstairs, firemen found the dog alive and well in one of the bedrooms.

Fire Chief Leo Culhane said his men were able to extinguish the flames within 15 to 20 minutes. He praised their success in isolating the flames in the basement.

"Flames were shooting out of the garage door when we arrived," one fireman noted.

The blaze destroyed a pool table, a bar, a television set, the washer and dryer and much of the ceiling. A freezer and camper in the garage, were also damaged.

Although Chief Culhane said the exact source of the fire has not been determined, John Stoneham of the Department of Energy and Resources has been called in to examine the furnace and ducts. Inspector Paul Stephenson of the Belleville Fire Department reported the "dimpled pipe and the stack were blown off."

Smoke damage was minor in the house, but extensive in the adjoining garage. Firefighters were required to wade through six inches of water following the blaze.

Units from the second Belleville firehall were called out at approximately the same time, to a small fire at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Blake on 127 Murray Street.

At 6.16 a.m., Mr. and Mrs. Baker discovered flames in a wall by their fireplace. The blaze was contained in the living room.

At 9.45 p.m. yesterday, a Smith Transport driver discovered flames and smoke coming from his tandem.

The ensuing fire burst through the sides of the truck, spilling its shipment of canned baby formula onto the roadside.

Firemen from the Sidney Township volunteer fire department responded to the first call, east of Aikens Road on Highway 401.

Damage has been estimated at $20,000.

Earlier last night, Thurlow Township firemen were called to Highway 37, north of the 401.

A burning tire on a Bird's Transfer truck from St. Catharines was extinguished some time after 7.30 p.m.

Marchers Needed For Santa Parade

Santa Claus will be supported by his most colorful array of assistants ever at this year's Dec. 4 parade.

But while they'll be sure to dazzle the eye, there's some doubt as to how many walkers will be available.

George and Pat Grant, responsible for importing St. Nick's helpers, insure that there will be a variety of configurations for the walkers to wear. They recently obtained sixty costumes, space suits, a Gay 90's dress and even a genie's robes as well as the usual clown, animal and cops and robbers outfits seen in past years.

They were forced to drop the idea of a Christmas Around the World theme when local ethnic groups declined to participate. There will still be marchers representing French Canada, Mexico, China, Spain and old England to lend an international flavor to the parade.

Mr. Grant says he is having some difficulty recruiting walkers, particularly those of a larger size. "There's no shortage of youngsters to walk in the parade but how can you put a clown's suit on someone four feet tall?"

What is needed, he said, are more high school students, volunteers and anyone wishing to help out can give him or his wife a call.

Transportation For Handicapped Now Provided

Deaf and blind children in Hastings county now can obtain transportation to their schools through a transportation system worked out between the county board and the institutions where they are educated.

Provincial grants are available to pay all but $172 of the annual cost of bringing six blind children home from Brantford every other weekend during the school year.

In addition, six of the seven resident students from Hastings county at the Ontario School for the Deaf in Belleville are now day students because of a new transportation schedule.

The county board Monday night approved the new arrangements that implement department of education policy that handicapped pupils should negotiate closer family ties.

Because of similar decision by other Ontario boards, a special bus can be arranged to bring the children home from the school for the blind in Brantford and return them to school 20 weekends a year.

Ottawa Announces Loan for Housing

More low-income housing will be built in Belleville early next year.

A $271,282 loan to the Ontario Housing Corporation for a 20-unit housing development on North Park Street, north of North Park Gardens, was announced in Ottawa by Urban Affairs Minister Robert Andras.

But, says Maurice Rollins, president of Rollins Construction Inc. the contractor who will build the project — the development is only part of a $1,100,000 contract for housing with rentals geared to incomes.

The remainder of the contract, now being drafted by government officials, involves 54 more housing units to be built on Elgin Street and Tripp Boulevard.

Mr. Rollins says a start on North Park and Elgin - Tripp projects will be made in early January.

The North Park development, where rentals also will be geared to incomes, will consist of six two - bedroom, 10 three - bedroom, three four - bedroom and one five-bedroom two-storey row housing.

The loan to OHC is for 50 years at 7½ percent and covers 90 per cent of construction; says the federal government announcement. The province pays the remaining 10 per cent. The federal government also will bear one-half of any operating losses, OHC 43½ per cent and the city of Belleville 7½ per cent.

City council yesterday approved an earlier traffic committee recommendation which will make it illegal for eastbound traffic on Dundas Street West to make left turns into Reid's Dairy property, a driveway opposite the Bay Bridge Road.

The committee recommendation had been before council several weeks ago but was referred back to determine if the city had made any commitment to Reid's Dairy with respect to the driveway.

At last week's meeting it was determined the city had been no commitment and yesterday the resolution was back for council decision.

Alderman Donald Souter felt prohibition of left turns would create difficulty for the dairy operators and questioned whether the traffic movement had resulted in accidents.

Ald. E. A. Orr said the committee was convinced the left turns would create a danger and council accordingly approved the resolution.

Arts Council Seeks Support

The many and varied activities of the Quinte Arts Council and its need for support from service clubs and the public were discussed by Manford Koechlin, the council's treasurer, at a meeting of the Rotary Club yesterday.

Only in our time, said Mr. Koechlin, had the arts been recognized as a community concern, along with libraries, museums, hospitals and schools.

The Quinte Arts Council has some 2,000 members representing many organizations in the Quinte area, of which Northumberland, Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington.

Among the council's functions are sponsorship of the performing and visual arts, and, in an advisory role, coordinating capacity for organizations wishing to bring such groups to the area.

Mr. Koechlin said the council is seeking wider support of its work as a balancing factor in a scientific and technological age and for the satisfaction of man's emotional, intellectual and esthetic needs.

Painting of Site To Hang in School

When Stirling's new senior elementary school is built, its pupils will have a reminder of what the site looked like before the school board took it over.

Students in the Senior Drama Club commissioned the reminder — a painting by local artist Madeline McIntosh — and presented it to the Hastings County board of education to hang in the new school.

The money came from the profits from a play the club presented last year. With the $200 they made from three productions, the students commissioned Mrs. McIntosh to paint a landscape of the site before construction begins.

Trustees viewed the painting at Stirling last Monday night when the board met at the present senior elementary school.

"This typifies the kind of school spirit and community support we have in Hastings county," commented director of education Eric Runacres.

Natural Shelter From Gusty Mountain Winds

Mount Washington Climb Was Cold

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Over the past weekend, members of Loyalist College travelled through four seasons of the year to climb one of the highest mountain peaks in the Appalachians.

Packed into a charter bus, the 30-member Outward Bound group, with enough supplies for the four - day weekend stored in back packs, left the city Thursday afternoon, to arrive at Mount Washington in New Hampshire early Friday morning.

Outward Bound brings people together and teaches them to work harmoniously under adverse conditions.

The brainchild of a teacher in the U.S., these groups have been growing in popularity for both recreational and educational purposes.

To give the group a chance to get to know each other, coordinator of the group Hugh Pepper, decided that the best way for this to happen was for all to get off the bus on the outskirts of Montreal, and in smaller groups, make their way to designated parts of the city.

"This sort of thing makes all pull together to find a way of transporting themselves in a strange environment," said Mr. Pepper, staff member of the college.

After a short stop in the Quebec city, the team loaded back onto the bus to start the final leg of the trip into New York State, then to Vermont and finally to New Hampshire. Between sending a letter to president of the USA in reference to the Amchitka blast and trying to explain to the customs officer that you left all your identification at home, most of the group took advantage of the time to catch up on some sleep and ponder on the trip up the mountain.

By 1 a.m. Friday the crew had unfolded themselves from the confinement of the bus and began adjusting straps and balancing loads in preparation for the first climb, 2.4 miles up the mountain to the base camp at Hermit Lake.

The trail leading to the lake meandered up the face of the mountain at varying degrees of steepness from 45- to 60-degree grades.

Trail is a kind word for the path that more resembled a rock slide, but onward and upward became the motto of the team of 10 girls and 20 boys as they worked together to pass over the foot path.

The trip, lit by moonlight through a crystal clear sky, took some three hours to complete and by the time the first had made it to the lean-to, morning light had begun filtering through the heavy mountain forest.

The lean-tos, which became the homes of the group afforded little protection from the near zero night temperatures on the mountain.

On the face of the mountain, when climbing, the wind chill factor lowered this reading to about 20 below.

Food, cooked over portable stoves, which frequently broke down on the trip, and sleep were first on the list of priorities once all became settled in their camps. By noon, some adventuring souls had started the remaining 1.5 mile, 75 degree ascent to the summit of the mountain.

Hampered by ice and snow and clouds, six of the crew made the entire climb, while another 10 came within a tenth of a mile of the summit, lowering over 8,000 feet.

As the weekend progressed, weather became poorer and by Saturday, many of the group had elected to remain in their sleeping bags which offered the most comfort.

The night of merriment ended early, as had the previous evening, and all were in bed long before the clock struck 9.

With the coming of Sunday morning, came the reminder that it was time to once more bear their loads of equipment and tramp back down the mountain to the chalet at its bases.

There had been a weather warning Saturday afternoon of 40 per cent chance of precipitation and 90 per cent on Sunday.

Sure enough Sunday morning brought with it rain which turned into snow as the winds picked up.

The going became somewhat more treacherous, but all managed the reutrn trip down the mountain without injury.

Once back in the chalet, Fred the bus driver, reunited himself with the group and began recollecting the warmth of both the bed he had slept in and the vodka he had drunk.

"I have a great feeling of loss, leaving the mountain," said one student as he climbed aboard the bus. "The mountain makes you feel so good, you just hate to leave it."

Most of the group shared the reflection of the student except for Dorlan, who had left the mountain almost as soon as he climbed it.

Dorlan, who entertained the bus load on its way by reliving the tale of Big Sam, had lost his food supply on his way up the mountain and rather than going hungry, joined Fred in the hotel.

Back into the night, the bus full of boys singing bawdy songs and girls sitting sleeping, it was homeward bound for the 30 who had hung together under the hardships of the mountain.

Cruises for Students To Be Annual Events

The ultimate in school excursions was approved on an annual basis Monday night for all Hastings county's fourth year secondary school students.

Beginning in 1973, every grade 12 student in the county's eight secondary schools will have the opportunity to take a two week Mediterranean cruise for an all-inclusive fee of about $400.

The scheme, was approved by the board of education Monday night after trustees heard a report of the experiences of the first group to take the cruise last winter.

Lloyd Jones, co-ordinator of the cruise, presented a travelogue of the voyage of about 70 of Centennial Secondary School's students on a school ship.

He has now arranged for half a school ship to be reserved annually during the Easter break and another week either before or after the holiday for Hastings county students. He expects about 600 students; 75 per cent of the grade 12 population, to take the trip each year.

The cruise is a self - financed enrichment program, Mr. Jones told the board. The Centennial history department head said such cruises are regularly undertaken by English schools, with space on the two ships operated by British India booked on an annual basis.

The cruise in 1973 will begin at Naples following a flight from Toronto. The ship will stop in Crete, Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia and Italy, with two days in London before the students fly back to Canada.

A federal government grant of $75 a student may be available to defray part of the expenses. Some schools are looking into means of paying all or part of the expenses of students who cannot afford to raise their own fares.

Major Works Projects Approved by Council

Works projects scheduled for construction next year, with an estimated cost of more than $400,000 were approved yesterday by city council.

Major items in the program are the reconstruction of Sidney Street to four lanes from Catherine Street to College Street at a cost of just over $325,000 and construction of a storm sewer to serve the Avondale Road area at a cost of $111,000.

Other capital items are the construction of sidewalks on the east side of Sidney Street from Dundas to Bridge Street, and on the north side of Bridge Street from Farley Ave. to Haig Road.

Council agreed that cost details of the two sidewalk construction proposals should be provided to abutting owners.

The advisability of reconstructing Sidney Street when many other streets in the city were in need of rebuilding was questioned by Alderman Ellen David.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell agreed other streets needed rebuilding but noted that construction of the Sidney Street by-pass was to be proceeded with and suggested reconstruction of the street would provide continuity.

Alderman Ben Corke questioned the advisability of constructing a walk on the east side of Sidney Street rather than on the west where the new 14-storey apartment and most of the homes were situated.

The city engineer, however, said an east side walk would be of more benefit to school children. The majority of whom came from the area east of the street.

Council was told that the construction of the proposed storm sewer for the Avondale Road area was intended to correct a spring flooding condition which had been exaggerated as a result of the Earlscourt subdivision with its own internal storm sewer system.

Total cost of the sewer is estimated at $111,500, which is to be reduced by a provincial subsidy and subdivider's contribution leaving $67,100 to be debentured by the city.

Provincial subsidy on the Sidney Street reconstruction is estimated at $121,500.

Population Up By 500

The city of Belleville has gained more than 500 permanent residents in the past year.

A communication from the Hastings and Prince Edward Assessment office received at city hall shows the city's population to be 34,488 excluding those residing in the municipality on a season basis only.

From this total is deducted 133 persons living in institutions and another four in defence establishments, leaving a total of 34,351.

The above figures are the result of the annual enumeration done by the assessment department in March of this year.

A preliminary report from Statistics Canada, showed a city population 34,498 as determined by the June census.

But Mayor J. Russell Scott said neither total compared with estimates of Bell Telephone.

Mayor Scott said that on the basis of telephone installations, Bell estimates the city's population as being between 38,000 and 39,000 people.

Rail Service

The Canadian Transport Commission's recommendations for an integrated transcontinental passenger train service, trimmed of wasteful duplication and scheduled for introduction by late 1972, makes sense.

CP Rail and Canadian National are now losing $30 million a year on their transcontinental routes and only government subsidy keeps them going. Since complete abandonment of such an essential route is not possible, Ottawa is exercising wisdom in attempting to reduce costs and therefore the amount of subsidy necessary to maintain the service.

Nor is job security being forgotten, for the transport commission is offering to consider this issue as an expense item in railway claims for subsidy. Use of CP and CN routes by each company on alternate days, as well as common ticket and reservation offices, are among other proposals being considered. Summer service, meanwhile will be maintained at the same level, since it is the railroads' busiest period.

Competition of the airlines and private cars have been the main cause of the railroads' near downfall. Economic reality seems to dictate that this form of travel should be dispensed with. But counterbalancing this thought is the railroads' great prestige, their almost legendary hold on the public and the communities they serve. The railroads are also indispensable carriers of freight.

Youth Program

Melanie Laptuta, 18, is a girl to be admired. She is the Grade 12 student behind the Youth Helping Youth program in Oshawa and we ran a picture of her recently. YHY is an information centre, a referral centre and a crisis intervention centre. It came into being with the aid of Opportunities for Youth program funds after Melanie was turned down as a volunteer at the Oshawa Distress Centre — because she is still in high school.

Miss Laptuta is a very attractive looking young woman and her drive and determination might well be emulated by other young people. Clearly she is not one to wait around for others to take the initiative, although it must be said that initially she sought the aid of the community consultant at the Addiction Research Foundation and was in turn referred to someone who helped her form a committee. The latter recruited an adult advisory board and obtained $7,600 from Opportunities for Youth.

And her philosophy? Well she says the peer group influence is quite effective in problems. "We hope to solve problems by giving suggestions and relating to our own experiences. We're not here to be a crutch, but to make responsible people out of people with problems.

"One thing I really dig about this. It really brings people close together. I kind of think if everyone were close and wanted to do something for the community, we would have a better place to live. But everyone wants to put up barriers."

Hooray for Melanie! She is a young person with her head and heart in the right places.

Manners Count

Maybe if parents and authorities put a little more bite into their discipline there would be more respect among people generally, and starting with the young. Certainly Police Chief Roch Bergeron of Templeton, Quebec, was not tolerating any cheek when he detained a bus load of high school girls after one had called him "a dog" and the other "barked" at him.

"I don't think I have to stand for such abuse," said the chief. He is absolutely right. This is all very much in contrast to the story of Melanie Laputa, the 18-year-old Oshawa girl whom we have spoken of and who talks about her efforts to make responsible people out of people with problems.

But there is this mischievous, not to say insolent, streak in the young and it does no harm to urge them to mind their manners. We recall an incident at Expo 67; we were taking pictures of a high school group from Hawaii; it was an unposed shot — the kids were just walking along — when one girl stuck out her tongue. It captured things just right for us but not the kind of gesture one would have expected from such a touring group, let alone one from a region of such charm and good manners. But then of course there is always the exception which proves the rule.

As for Chief Bergeron's "prisoners," he had them call their parents to pick them up. It was nearly three hours before they had all left the station. Maybe next time they will remember their manners!

P.M.'s Wife Celebrated Birthday Alone

The Very Private Lives of the Pierre Trudeaus

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The National Capital never has seen a Prime Minister's wife like Margaret Trudeau — quite literally, for the one big reason, the city so seldom sets eyes on her.

In many ways, the 53-year-old Prime Minister's petite, 21-year-old wife, now eight months pregnant, are a strange couple.

She celebrated her 22rd birthday since, the night of last September 23, in the lonely quiet of the Prime Minister's lodge, crouched down in the stillnects of the pine - scented hills, 3 miles north of the Capital in the Quebec Gatineaus.

He was busy that night 150 miles away, speaking in the charming old town of Port Hope on a two-day barnstorming tour of Ontario supermarket plazas.

And he was busy too, the night of October 18, when he turned 53 and might have been expected to be home to cut a birthday cake. After all, it was the second such birthday Trudeau had in the first year of their marriage to enjoy a just-the-two-of-us birthday celebration.

But he was at work that night trying to make Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin feel welcomed in Canada.

Eight months of marriage appear to have made no little change in the public life style of the Prome Minister that perhaps going home to 24 Sussex Drive for lunch seems to be the biggest break from his bachelor days routine.

Margaret Trudeau seldom appears in public — and when she does, it is usually — unannounced and as unexpected and a surprise, with the result that even fewer people manage to see much less talk to her.

There have been no interviews nor statements, so nobody could see the Prime Minister and a very select circle of intimates know what she thinks or says.

As a result, not much more is known about the stunning sadurn - haired girly from Vancouver than when she wed the then world's most talked - about bachelor.

The wedding was private, you will recall, the next thing to secret, fu ther underlining the continuing of the Prime Minister's self-contained and inward-by-withdrawn life - style.

Margaret Trudeau has refused — or perhaps it was the Prime Minister who is responsible for the refusal — to board the National Capital's non-stop merry-go-round of cocktail parties and formal dinners, diplomatic and not-so diplomatic.

There have been exceptions, very rare, when she has asked friends — almost all of them from her student days at Simon Fraser University — to drop in, informally, at the Harrington Lake lodge.

Last spring she put in a small vegetable patch back of the lodge and daffodil spreads in the gardens at 24 Sussex and tended the small crop during the ripening summer.

In the spring, too, before the announcement, not by the Prime Minister himself but his PMO office, that Margaret was expecting a baby in December — Margaret and Pierre did a bit of biking, with a plainclothes security guard bringing up the rear at a discreet but still protective distance.

Biking, since National Capital Commission Chairman Douglas Fullerton closed the 75 miles of Ottawa's manKured parkways to motor traffic Sunday morning, and built some 50 miles of cycle paths, has become the in sport.

JUST EVERYBODY who is ANYBODY bikes.

And in those Spring months, too, she was spotted twice queueing up with the Prime Minister at the box-office of sell-out cinemas.

Then there was the one time a photographer focussed her as she came padding, barefoot, out of a hot-pants boutique on the Minister Mall.

But you can count such appearances on the fingers of one hand and they have been so few.

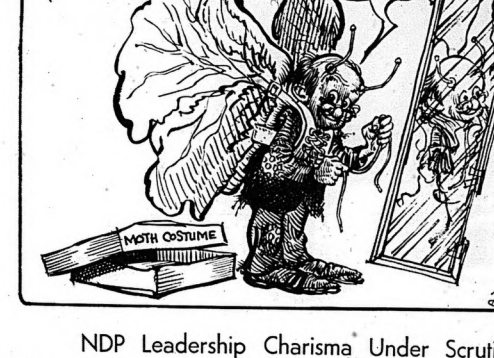
Anyone asking the Prime Minister why they have made almost an obsession of privacy can expect a non - answer of chilly silence. So few, if anyone around here, ask any more.

You have to go out of town with the Prime Minister to the places where the press is not so acutely aware of the domestic affairs before you can pick up perhaps a clue as to the reason why the Trudeaus are so much their own private people.

How comes the Prime Minister was asked in Peterborough, there is "this wall" between his private and public lives.

His answer:

"I don't wish to be judged by the length of my hair or whether I wear beads or not, or for that matter, by the shn of my pocket book.



"And I don't want to be judged by whether my wife is a jet-setter, or lives for her retired or, not, or whether she has a passing personality.

"I think we want to be judged, and by and large the Canadian people want to judge us on whether we have been doing a good job or not.

"These are important considerations, and I suppose the main justification for keeping my private life and that, generally, is the way wife, private."

So now you know.

Or do you?

NDP Leadership Charisma Under Scrutiny

Queen's Park
By DON O'HEARN
Would the NDP have done better in the election under the leadership of either Donald MacDonald or Walter Pitman?

During the election campaign a surprising number of people unimpressed by the low key approach of the party under Stephen Lewis, volunteered that it would be better off under MacDonald.

Now after the let down of the election, and with a leadership convention coming up, second guessing on the campaign is a fervid political practice of the moment.

It seems that possibly those who thought a MacDonald leadership would be better could be right.

A great lack of the NDP campaign was a sense of excitement.

The most acclaimed political assets of Stephen Lewis are super organizational ability and a sharp mind.

Both were at work in the campaign. But though the party will probably the best organization of workers we have seen in the province, this didn't bring it success.

And the Lewis mental capacity didn't set sleeves in the general public. It registered only with those close to the campaign: workers and some sections of the press.

If MacDonald had been Premier at the party front there would certainly have been excitement.

This was always guaranteed with the former leader.

And if he had been able to command the same party strength the party quite well might have done better.

A key point though is whether he would have been able to lead from this same strength, for there is no question that Lewis did a lot to develop the party in the months ahead of the election, and there is a question whether MacDonald would have been able to build as well.

Most of the time it was the MacDonald name that was mentioned and still it is the one you hear most.

Personally I feel that Walter Pitman might have done better than either.

This election really came down to a question of who had a nice guy image and could be trusted.

On this battle-ground Pitman would have been a strong opponent for Premier Davis.

He comes through as every bit as nice a guy as the premier and his strong background on security invites trust.

The post election analyses have made it quite clear that a good number of people who voted for the PC's weren't really sold on the party. They rather were voting for Davis.

Pitman might have picked up a good share of these votes. I don't think MacDonald would have.

As for Lewis, he was a double loser in his campaign.

Its focus was on credibility.

If he didn't manage this the fringe voters he needed to persuade didn't buy him.

And the restraint he had to exercise took away excitement and the votes this might have gained for him.

Ontario Election
A Vote for Prosperity and Stability

Montreal La Presse

The Conservative party now has been in power for 28 years. In the last two years the governing party has been defeated at the polls in six Canadian provinces. Some observers felt that without going so far as to change governments. Ontario might give the opposition parties, the New Democrats in particular, an interesting position in the legislature.

Let us risk an interpretation: Ontario being a rich province, the temptation to change is doubtless less strong than elsewhere. Prosperity—the word being, obviously relative—would contribute to making Ontario a politically stable province.

Mr. Davis did not fail to mention throughout his campaign the accomplishments of his government. In an already Conservative population for whom a government must above all give administration flawlessly and with brilliance, if possible, he presented himself as the man of safety and the centre of the road—

Drapeau Wants Curbs On Queries by the Press

Montreal Gazette

It is going to be rather difficult to carry on any kind of serious dialogue about public affairs in Montreal if mayor refuses to take part. Mr. Drapeau is never subjected to rigorous questioning in city council and now he has informed the press that he is not going to put up with any profane or unauthorized queries from it either.

Here are the three rules for press conferences given by the mayor of Canada's largest and most sophisticated city, a city with a population and budget larger than those of most provinces, rules confirmed by Mr. Drapeau when he met reporters last Friday: 1. The mayor will never answer hypothetical questions; 2. He will never comment on remarks made by other public officials; 3. He will answer questions only on subjects of his own choosing.

Even for Mr. Drapeau, that is a very lofty ivory tower. A press conference should be part of the process of two-way communication between the mayor and the people of the city. It is either that, or it is a simple propaganda forum. Under Mr. Drapeau's rules, it is a propaganda forum. The propaganda may be good; it may be important, that is not the point. The only topics that are permitted to arise at the press conference are those on Mr. Drapeau's mind.

What about the problems and anxieties and wishes that are on the minds of the citizens of Montreal and, which would inevitably be reflected in questions that reporters ask on their own initiative?

Mr. Drapeau is not an easy man to accuse of being out of touch. His record of political success seems to proclaim the opposite. He seems to know the will of the people far better than any of his critics. No serious candidate has been willing to run against him since 1950.

There can be no guarantees, however, that such a situation is permanent. Mr. Drapeau does not have to like the press. That also is on irrelevant consideration. Journalists attend his press conferences not for, themselves but to ask the questions that are on the minds of their readers, the people of Montreal. The mayor is giving the impression that he does not care what is on the minds of others and this will hurt him in the end.

As for comments on remarks by other public officials, the public may often have a need to hear from Mr. Drapeau, if they are municipal officials, they are subordinate to Mr. Drapeau and he is the man to set the record straight whenever there is anything strange, unclear or contradictory in what they say. Even if they are provincial or federal officials, there is still no need for Mr. Drapeau to be shy. He has to represent the interests of the metropolis, which are not always served if the last word is left to the higher levels of government.

Homecraft Enterprise

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

In a recent copy of your paper you printed an article on the Homecraft Shop I opened Oct. 1.

I appreciate very much the interest shown on my behalf, but feel that your article — by stating that I am against women going out to work — is misleading and detrimental.

In a way I too have gone out to work. Many women are unable to leave home for employment for a host of reasons and this is partly where I cater for Homecrafts.

If it is a way the girls at home can make some spending money of their own and realize a little profit from their many hobbies. It also helps to make us feel a little more independent and equal to our working sisters. Sisters — among whom, I must admit, I am hoping still to some of my best customers.

KATHERINE PUTMAN

Sandbanks Issue

Letter from Ontario provincial minister in The Kingston Whig - Standard:

In your issue of Saturday, Sept 25, entitled "The Sandbanks" you have identified an important issue in regard to the operation of Lake Ontario Cement at the Sandbanks — that all parties concerned cooperate in locating a suitable alternative source of minerals for the company's operations. The Government and the company are pursuing that course of action, and we are hopeful of a successful conclusion to the search in the near future.

Two other points which you made, however, need to be clarified. First, I must emphasize that there is mining activity in provincial parks in Ontario. The operation at the Sandbanks is not inside the park, nor will it be. This is the policy for all provincial parks. Mining is not allowed in provincial parks.

Second, the crown lease the company holds was issued in 1960 for the purpose of giving 15.6 acres, which it owned, to the Crown; in effect, this was the price of the lease. The $1 per year is necessary for the legal clarity of the deed.

Knicker Suits Are Knock-outs

Striking Ski Fashions Shown at Quinte Mall

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

Whether you're a champion skier determined to step into Nancy Green's ski boots; a jet set type a la Jackie Onassis whose exploits in some glamorous ski resort were perhaps preceded by a swim in the Mediterranean and followed by a swinging party in Monte Carlo; or an average, happy-go-lucky fun loving gal, out there for the fun of doing things with the gang and the thrill of whizzing through the crisp, clean snow, not to mention the warmth and romance of apres ski parties — there's fashion news hot enough to warm your heart this year.

Gone are the days of the conventional ski pants with the inevitable striped sweater. The spirit of individuality and freedom from hard and fast rules which blew into the fashion scene like an exhilerating winter wind has hit the ski slopes too.

Ski wear fashions offer a wide choice ranging from cord jeans to suede hot pants and knickers. Colors range from deep African violet to shocking pink to help the wearer out-dazzle the beauty of the landscape around her. The 'total look' is the keynote to high fashion on the slopes with accessories including over the pant boots, under the pant boots, mukluks, knitted toques and jaunty berets. In ski jackets the waistline is back, with neatly defined belted. Knicker suits are 'in' not only for women but for men too.

In keeping with other evening styles, apres ski wear heralds a return to feminity with soft, sensuous lines, clinging fabrics and bold colorful match the combination of gaiety, warmth and romance that characterize apres ski parties.

All the above points were demonstrated at a fashion show co-ordinated by Pamela Eves held recently at the Quinte Mall, with many Mall merchants displaying their offerings in high fashion.

With most of the models being students at the London of England Modelling Academy, the show set a precedent, both in the professional quality of the modelling and by the wide variety of high fashion looks displayed.

Besides ski wear and apres ski wear, dresses, footwear and accessories were shown. The commentator was Miss Eves, a former fashion model and at present fashion co-ordinator of the Mall and freelance commentator.

Another show along similar lines will be held at the Mall towards the end of November. Fashion shows will be held from time to time at the Mall to keep the local public informed of the latest fashion trends.

Loneliness At Epedemic Proportion

TORONTO (CP) — Loneliness has reached epidemic proportions among modern urban dwellers, says Prof. Vello Sermat, 44 - year - old psychologist at York University.

"In most people the drive to escape loneliness is stronger than the sex drive. In order not to be lonely people will do almost anything — go broke, tell lies, steal or engage in sex."

For the last six years he has been exploring the dimensions of human loneliness. By personal interview and questionnaire, he has amassed hundreds of loneliness histories from men and women of all ages. His findings won't be published for at least two or three years.

Last year, the Toronto Distress Centre, a telephone service for troubled people, received 16,000 pleas for help. Apart from their immediate problems, nearly all complained about their extreme loneliness.

As counsellor at York University student health service, the psychologist has noted that most of the men and women who consult him are neither mentally ill nor seriously disturbed.

"They tell me they feel isolated; that they're having trouble breaking down the barriers that separate them from other people.

"There're lonely."

Volunteer Bureau In Need of Drivers

The Central Volunteer Bureau of Belleville and district is in constant need of volunteers but the primary need at the moment as announced by Mrs. F. E. Burrows, director of the Bureau is for volunteer drivers.

Many of the programs as provided by the service depend on transportation. This means that many people with no means of transportation simply cannot attend groups designed to help them, unless they are driven. It is felt that drivers must be provided to continue a number of community services.

These services include 'Meals on Wheels' luncheon club for the elderly; a day hursery for handicapped children: English classes for new Canadians, and other self help programs.

Anyone interested in volunteering for this worthy community effort is asked to please call the Central Volunteer Bureau at 962-5511.

Joining Army Poses Serious Problem for Man with Unusual Inhibitions

Dear Ann Landers: I am praying that you will fix up my letter so it will be fit to print. I just don't know how to put it in better language and there is nobody I can talk to, I am a boy 19 who is getting ready to go into the service. My problem is that I cannot urinate in a public place if there is anyone around. This might not sound serious but it is. All the way through school I managed by waiting till I was alone in the boy's room. In the army there is no such thing as being alone. . .

Sometimes waiting for privacy can be uncomfortable and painful. What can I do? Is there a cure for my problem? Please help me. You are my only hope. —19 And Holding

Dear 19: Yours is a psychological problem rooted in early childhood. Your mother probably made you feel ashamed of any activity related to the genitals and now you are tragically inhibited. When you take your physical tell the doctor about the problem. You may be ineligible. If you're ineligible or rejected by the army psychiatrist promptly, I'm betting you will conquer the hang-up before you leave the service.

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you printed assorted facts to imply that women are superior to men. Like most women you present only those facts which support your position and conveniently ignore the rest.

You state that women live longer than men. True. But are you aware that the American male ranks 37th compared with the males of other nations? This would tend to suggest that there are socio-cultural factors involved in this comparison. You also state that more men die from heart disease than women. True. But more women die from cerebral strokes. And we know that even though more men die from lung cancer this disease has increased among women nearly 50 per cent in the last 20 years.

Dr. Estelle Ramey states that more men commit suicide than women. True. But she neglects to mention that more women ATTEMPT suicide. And according to the present National Health Survey's report, Selected Symptoms of Psychological Distress, women had significantly higher rates than men for every symptom. The symptoms investigated were insomnia, nightmares, perspiring hands, head aches, dizziness, heart palpitations, and feelings of impending nervous breakdown. I am sure glible. If you are inducted see you won't print his letter but I feel better having written it. —Nearee, La.

Dear Nearee: Thanks for the facts. And now may I suggest the reason so many women suffer from insomnia, nightmares, perspiring hands, headaches, dizziness, heart palpitations, and feelings of impending nervous breakdown is MEN. And I'm not kidding.

Dear Ann Landers: I want to congratulate the person who left that "drop dead" note under the windshield wiper of the woman who did a lousy job of parking and spoiled it for two other drivers. I've been tempted to write such a note myself.

I drive a small car and can get into almost any space if the people who park ahead and behind are not slobs. Sometimes I get pinned in by rotten drivers and this makes me furious. It not only happens on the street but in parking lots. More than once I've had to climb through the sun roof because the hog next to me didn't leave enough space to open the door. How come you didn't side with the note writer instead of taking a safe, non-committal position? No guts?—California Driver

Dear C. D.: Me . . . no guts? You must be a new reader. Welcome aboard.

More Help for Cheese and Beverage Party

By DORIS CLARK

Dot Turcotte suggests that some of our Cheese and Beverage Party planners would be glad of more variations to the cheese ideas. She has worked out a couple of recipes for a Nutty Cheese Ball (one large ball) and Crispy Cheese Balls (one-inch) and a Cranberry punch which will go well with pre-Christmas celebrating.

Takes a little more work than just setting out assorted cheeses and providing beverages, but she points out the effort is worth it when you want to spring something different on your friends!

Dear Doris: My parents have been living common law for 20 years and I am wondering if they could be married.

My Dad was married in England during the war. His wife would not return to Canada with him so he took his young son and came by himself. Later, my Mom moved in (she had been engaged to Dad before the war) and that is how they stayed. This other woman will not give Dad a divorce.

My mother signs her name as if she were married but just recently her name was entered on the election sheets as her maiden name and occupation "housekeeper". She got tears in her eyes when she told me.

Mom does not take communion and that also bothers her. — Common Law Problem

Dear Common: A good deal of divorce legislation has recently gone through. There is a part which says that a divorce is obtainable if two marriage partners have been separated for at least three years.

In this case, notification would have to be served to the wife in England, if she can be found. If not, the judge may waive the service of a paper to the lady personally, and accept notice as being given by publication of the divorce proceedings in the last place the wife is known to have lived.

Whether or not the partner agrees to the divorce is then immaterial. Divorce is not base his decision on the fundamental fact of a definite marriage breakdown.

Dear Doris: A Japanese lady told me: "Us Japanese wives have no delusions about our husbands. Western wives are always afraid of their husbands cheating on them.

"Husbands are no guess to be put in a wooden box where they are not free to spread and wander. So you must let him go.

"Yes! He will have many girls sexually and often he come for some time or maybe years, but as you are his wife he will always come back to you. So it is foolish to worry."

Nothing complicated about the way she thinks. The husband, though, didn't give the wife the same break! — Mrs. R. S.

Dear Mrs. R.S.: I have known very fine Japanese who have given all respect and love to their mates, and never a suspicion of the wandering eye.

But hasn't the double standard been with us for a good long time, too? And is a woman supposed to remain completely serene over those empty years? Think of what happened to Poor Butterfly!

We now have some understanding of why people act as they do. Write to Doris about your particular human problem, enclosing a stamp for private reply.

Woman Lawyer Says Society Can Be Changed from Within

RED DEER, Alta. (CP) — There is only one female lawyer in this city of 27,000, but she doesn't complain of male chauvinism, prejudices or outward women or male domination of society.

Olga Dobrowney, 28, believes in the reasonable and rational approach to problems. She says this is something that women's lib doesn't always use.

These attributes suit a lawyer who has just taken a position as junior solicitor with a Red Deer law firm.

Miss Dobrowney says she doesn't feel that being a woman lawyer made it much more difficult for her to find a job.

"There are some men who are a little dubious about hiring women in a legal capacity," she says, seated behind a huge desk that dwarfs her. "But I think you'd find that in almost any profession, although it's true even now there are not that many girls who seek careers as lawyers."

She admits that women are not favored by firms seeking crack courtroom lawyers. Men, however, have admitted there are some legal situations better handled by a woman, she says, especially problems dealing with family relationships.

The women seem to be capable of more tact and empathy in such matters.

Miss Dobrowney insists that a woman must take a greater interest in her own rights, know what business transactions her husband makes, and be able to handle matters if the husband should die.

"There are a few women who become widows and have no idea what business deals the husband was involved in, and his lawyer was—nothing. A wife need not be insistent or aggressive about it, but she should not just let herself be taken care of like a child. She should want to know what's going on in the family."

Miss Dobrowney's firm ideas are reflected in her background. She says she has always been single-minded about her goals in life; she's wanted to be a lawyer ever since Grade 6.

When you are raised in a small town in Saskatchewan — Swan Lake—where the accepted careers for most girls are nursing, teaching or being a housewife, that ambition makes you something of a curiosity.

She set her sights on the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon and graduated with her arts and law degrees in 1969 after taking time off for a job as a social worker for the Alberta government.

She continued as a social worker for more than a year after graduation, then articled with an Edmonton law firm and was admitted to the bar in August of this year.

"Friday, Aug. 13," she adds with a laugh.

Miss Dobrowney says the question of women's liberation versus male domination doesn't trouble her much.

"Many of the points they bring up are good ones," she says about the women's lib. "But they have got to the point where a lot of people don't take them seriously. Burning bras isn't going to do a thing about changing the laws or the attitudes of society.

"I believe that if a woman is concerned and has any ability at all, she'll put herself in a situation where she can change whatever she feels is wrong with society. I'm not for the status quo, but I think that working within the system—not against it, means you're more likely to change things faster."

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONNELL

Are parents 'doomed' if a child irritates them?

NO, although a mother and father will have to do some skillful maneuvering if their youngster knows precisely how to irritate them. First, they are going to try to live with the irritation to show it doesn't bother them. Second, in trying to do this, they may discover what causes their child to be irritated in the first place and, by correcting this, they may solve the entire problem for everybody.

Does everyone enjoy being known for his wit?

UP TO A POINT, YES; as long as the individual's real values are not buried in his reputation as a wit. For instance, Lefty Gomez, the great New York Yankee left-handed pitcher of the '30s, is rapidly seeing his chances for inclusion in baseball's Hall of Fame slipping away. Fewer and fewer people remember that Vernon's (yes that is Gomez's first name) fast ball was sharper than his wit when he was blazing them in his heyday.

Will a yen for romance help a fat girl reduce?

NOT if a girl has some personality or emotional problem that keeps her home or forces her to go to the movies alone. But a girl who has a well-ordered outlook—in spite of her ability to tilt the scales—might find that her liking for romance will be just the ticket that will enable her to stick to her diet, or the reducing regimen worked out by her doctor, and slim down to the dress size she wants to be.

Tips on Buying Velvet

EDMONTON (CP) — If you are considering buying a garment in the new, fashionable, crushed or flocked velvets, you should be aware that the wearlife may be short, says Marilyn Hemsing, clothing specialist for the Alberta agriculture department's textile laboratory.

These new velvets differ from the conventional velvet, she said. They are made either by drawing rayon flock to a woven background fabric coated with an adhesive or by attracting rayon flock to the surface of a urethane foam bonded to a knit or woven fabric.

There are three common customer complaints about these fabrics, Mrs. Hemsing said. They may lose flock from abrasion or rubbing action during wear, there may also be a problem of the foam from the base fabric or color may change because of distortion of the flock reflection in certain lights.

All fabric wear is related to how the material is made, she said. The new velvets offer an exciting new look, but she suggested the buyer should balance a desire for appearance with a knowledge of the amount of wear and cleaning that may be needed.

Canada May Balk at Space Objects Agreement

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada has indicated it may not be able to sign a proposed international convention designed to provide compensation for victims of falling man-made space objects.

Paul St. Pierre, parliamentary secretary to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, said Monday the proposed convention, product of eight years of debate, falls short in two ways.

He said Canada believes that the convention is not sufficiently "victim-oriented" in that it does not guarantee full compensation for the victim of a falling object launched by a country.

He also said it is possible that no compensation would be paid at all.

The Vancouver Liberal mentioned what perhaps is the main Canadian concern about the convention is that it could establish a precedent that would affect future international treaties dealing with pollution of the sea and atmosphere.

In this area Canada has been working hard to establish that a country that causes the pollution must also be responsible for compensation paid to its victims.

St. Pierre said because of the weakness of the outer space treaty Canada may not sign it.

The "convention on liability for damage caused by objects launched into outer space," is expected to be approved later this year by the 131-country General Assembly. After that it will be opened for signatures and come into effect when five countries have signed it.

It now is being discussed in the assembly's main political committee. St. Pierre said Canada will abstain when it comes up for a vote.

The convention was drawn up largely by the United States and the Soviet Union. It commits signatory countries who launch objects into space to pay reparations to restore property damaged by those objects to "the conditions which would have existed if the damage had not occurred."

It provides for arbitration in case there is no agreement on compensation, but that arbitration is not binding. That is one of the Canadian objections for it makes it possible for a victim to get insufficient compensation or even none at all. The only weapon provided to force a country to pay full compensation is public opinion brought about by widespread publicity.

St. Pierre said Canada is unable to persuade itself "that victims are adequately protected if arbitration awards can be ignored by the state causing the damage."

"We continue to believe that states which are willing to create risks, by launching objects into space, should be willing to be bound by any decision reached by a fair system of international arbitration."

Environment Policy To Be Given Scrutiny

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's first runner-up was Patricia Bain, 18, Thunder Bay, Ont.; second Dianne Wainman, 18, Mississauga, Ont.; third Denise Poirier, 22, Quebec City; and fourth Linda Windslow, 19, Saskatoon, Sask.

The 10 semi-finalists who were selected during the program after all had been introduced and participated in a dance number also included: Deborah Dunseith, 18, Edmonton, Alta., Deborah Kennedy, 19, Montreal, Que., Brigitte Prince, 19, Winnipeg, Linda VanTassell, 19, Burlington, Ont., Elizabeth Blench, 21, Oakville, meeting on the provisional Canadian position paper.

The paper has already been under fire in the Commons where MPs queried Environment Minister Jack Davis about reports that it stresses economic growth more strongly than environmental protection.

Mr. Davis denied that Canada has placed economic growth ahead of a better environment and said the two can be resolved.

Amchitka Blast Assailed

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The secretary-general of the World Peace Council asserted Monday the United States no clear explosion on Amchitka Island in Alaska was "inhuman, barbaric and ought not to have taken place."

"The United States has no right whatsoever to endanger the lives of so many people of the world," said Romesh Chandra of India.

Chandra and three other leaders of the council met with correspondents.

Kitchener Girl Is Miss Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Donna Sawicky, 18, of Kitchener, Ont., was crowned Miss Canada 1972 Monday night and responded accordingly to the Crown of Tears headpiece placed on her head.

The crowning was the grand finale of the 90-minute Miss Canada Pageant which cost a record $100,000, the most ever spent on a single television show geared to a Canadian audience. It was televised on the national CTV network.

The five finalists weren't chosen until the last 10 minutes and the actual crowning was only two minutes before the conclu-

Oilmen Skeptical Of Alaska Oil Find

WASHINGTON (CP) — A report of a vast new Alaskan oil find that could disrupt oil industry pricing and revive opposition to the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline has been greeted with skepticism by the industry and a number of observers here.

The report, released Sunday by Senator William Proxmire, said the oil deposit in the Cordova area of southern Alaska "is understood by some to be larger" than the big North Shore deposit.

The report says the interior department had done a preliminary assessment of the area but had not made it public.

An interior spokesman said he knew of no report suggesting a Cordova find similar to the North Slope deposit.

There have been no discoveries, he said, and interior regulations have prevented test drilling and other more sophisticated explorations. Some seismic tests had indicated oil was present.

The spokesman suggested, however, that "severe and complex environmental considerations there would delay further investigations.

Bell Probe Is Blocked

OTTAWA (CP) — The government stonewalled opposition attempts Monday to establish a parliamentary inquiry into Bell Canada's latest application for a rate increase.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) presented a motion for an inquiry by the Commons transport committee into Bell's application for a 9.5 per-cent increase in rates.

He said the committee should examine all Bell operations in relation to the public interest.

The rule cited by Mr. Peters for presentation of his motion required unanimous Commons consent for an investigation to go ahead. The government declined this consent.

Later, during the question period, Mr. Peters renewed his request for an investigation into Bell.

Acting prime minister Mitchell Sharp said the Canadian transport commission will deal with the application as usual.

Dief Likes Tenth Decade

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker says the television series The Tenth Decade could make Canadians more aware of the political history of their country than any other event.

The CBC series, which started two weeks ago, is about the 1957-1968 period when Mr. Diefenbaker and Lester Pearson were the prime ministers of Canada.

Naked Youth Breaks Toronto Woman's Leg

TORONTO (CP) — A naked youth jumped on the back of a 56-year-old woman walking her dog in a park Monday night and then fled, yelling:

"Help me. Help me."

The woman said she saw a youth peering through some bushes at her, walked on, and saw the youth naked on the ground.

He jumped up and started yelling. They tried to rig me," she said.

The youth chased her, jumped on her back and knocked her to the ground. She broke her right leg in the fall.

Police later found a blue turtleneck sweater, a gold T-shirt, a pair of socks and a pair of desert boots. They are looking for a six foot youth with light brown hair.

Theatre Guild Opens Tomorrow Night

Wednesday night will be a crucial night for Ted Hairstow, director of the Belleville Theatre Guild. When the curtain rises at 8 p.m. on Harvey, a comedy by Mary Chase, a Belleville audience will be seeing for the first time a play directed by him. The success of the play will not only be to the personal advantage of the director and cast, it will also give a new lease of life and vigor to the Guild itself.

Mr. Bairstow is quite optimistic about the whole thing. He is confident that the acting is of a high standard and feels that Ernst Knieset is perfect for the part of Elwood Dowd, the main character of the play. He also feels that the Guild's choice of Harvey to open its new season is a "Harvey is a lighthearted, fanciful comedy and has in it some of the funniest lines ever written for the stage and should go over well with the audience," he says. "The whole play is geared to let people relax and have an evening of entertainment. What we're trying to do is put the fun back into theatre."

Harvey is set in the American far West in the 1940s. The plot concerns a six-foot rabbit called Harvey with magical powers who is invisible to all except to his chosen friends. A whole series of funny incidents occurs because Harvey is real and visible to the main character Elwood Dowd but not to his sister and other members of his family who decide that Elwood is crazy and send him to Dr. Chumley the psychiatrist.

The stage set will be one of the assets of the production. Mr. Bairstow says that the set, designed by Ken Graham and built by Ken Ross, is one of the best box sets he has seen. He also pointed that the costumes and hair styles by Vi by Mary Rozman have captured the look of the 1940s. Some of the humor he says stems from the costumes and the way people look.

Barbed Wire Problem Again Before Council

What to do about the city's double standards with respect to barbed wire fencing is a problem still before city council.

A city bylaw prohibits the use of barbed wire as a protective measure around commercial and industrial property and as recently as two weeks ago council brought the regulation to the attention of a Quinte Mall store which had installed the fencing.

But the city itself contravenes its own bylaw and a report tabled yesterday showed that two city properties—the public works yard at Wallbridge Crescent, and recently purchased industrial land in the northeast industrial park — as well as seven utilities' commission properties were protected by barbed wire.

The utilities commission has advised council that most of the barbed wire fences were erected to prevent the public from getting into trouble where there is high voltage. At other locations the fence was to prevent entry of unauthorized persons who might steal stock.

The commission said it was aware of the city bylaw prohibiting erection of barbed wire but in many cases city permission had been received to erect the fencing.

In addition to the city-owned and commission barbed wire fencing, the city parks board has about 1,650 feet of barbed wire fence at the exhibition park.

Mayor J. Russell Scott agreed that high voltage installations must be protected but at the same time said the city must spell out what it to be allowed and not carry on with two sets of laws.

Alderman Jack Orr noted that it was to discourage theft and vandalism that industry asked to erect fencing.

And Alderman Donald Souter said this was the very reason for Simpsons-Sears erecting their fence which the city had directed be taken down.

As for Ald. Souter was concerned, the city had only one option and that was to direct the engineer to remove all barbed wire from the fairgrounds, the public works yard at Wallbridge Crescent, city industrial land and from on College Street.

But Alderman Joyce didn't agree. He said he was not particularly alarmed about the dangers of barbed wire, suggesting that with crime on the increase the protection might be necessary.

He was not convinced the city should take another look at the matter and moved a tabling motion which was later approved.

Workworth Renovation Announced

WARKWORTH (Staff) — A Toronto firm, Canadian International Construction Ltd., has been awarded a $70,000 contract for maintenance work at Warkworth Medicm Security Institute here.

A spokesman for the solicitor-general's department told The Intelligencer today the contract is a routine one designed to keep "physical plant in optimum condition."

Involved in the contract are a series of minor renovations — buildings to be demolished complex and the laying of some new electrical wiring.

Chief Issues Yule Warning

In the wake of a rash of recent thefts from parked cars, Belleville Police Chief Doug Last T. Crubie has issued a Yuletime warning.

He emphasizes that thefts from parked autos increases during the Christmas buying season. Valuables should be locked in trunks and doors should be secured. Otherwise age would-be thieves, he advises,

Mall Bus Cancelled

Quinte Mall Merchants Association has cancelled its $200 per month subsidy for express bus service to the Mall and direct service to the North Front Street plaza has been cancelled.

But to compensate for the cancellation of the direct mail service, the Belleville Transit Commission will increase service on the Avondale - Parkdale route by about 20 hours per week.

Permission for the increased service to commence November 15 was granted yesterday by city council.

Meeting Called On Trailer Park

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce, acting as a catalyst, is calling a luncheon meeting this Friday to explore the possibilities of constructing a trailer park in the city.

"We are trying to invite all people or agencies who would be instrumental in setting up a service of this kind," said Frank Murray, president of the chamber.

Among the group will be Mr. Meda Rivers Conservation Authority, the Parks Board, the Mayor, and city recreation spokesmen.

"Our objective for this meeting," said Mr. Murray, "is to discuss the tourist (not residential) trailer park, its practicality, feasibility and possible location."

To provide the most advantageous effect on the city, members of the chamber hope that the park will be set up in or close to the city so that campers will take full advantage of the shopping facilities in the city.

The Parks Board, for the past two months, has been researching the prospects of such a facility, "and we hope that this meeting in some way, will help them to air their findings," said Mr. Murray.

As evidence of the need of such a service, Mr. Murray, manager of the chamber claims, "through information gathered by our tourist booths last summer, we have found that as many as 18 carloads of tourists a day wanted camping accommodation in the city for at least one night."

During the summer, the nearest spot campers could use for overnight stay was Carleton Cove, Foxboro.

"If we are to push the city and the Quinte area as a tourist region, it seems obvious that we have facilities for easier to tourists," said Mr. Houston.

A big impetus for starting this project now is the availability of government funds to back the program.

"Now is the time to take action, when money is being poured into make-work programs from the federal government," said Mr. Murray.

The group will also discuss the self-liquidating properties of the plan.

"We could take out a debenture on any land purchases that are necessary, and this debenture could be repaid through fees paid by the campers," said Mr. Murray.

Members of the chamber, who agree that the meeting be held soon, concur that the need has become urgent and that the service be ready for the beginning of June.

If the group plans to take advantage of the federal make - work schemes, their plans must be completed before the beginning of December when make - work projects will commence.

There is no indication of the size of the trailer park but Mr. Murray and Mr. Houston agree that it would be large enough to accommodate at least 50 trailers, and have showers and electrical services.

The two also agree that it should be municipally owned so that revenue from park would be spread across the community.

"The facility will cater to any type of camping vehicle including a small area for tenting," said Mr. Houston.

Cars on Plaza Broken Into

Three cars were broken into overnight. Loss totals approximately $110.

David Hadley, RR5, Belleville, discovered his stereo tape deck, valued at $60, stolen from his car some time between 6.00 p.m. and 9.05 p.m. The vehicle was parked in the west portion of the Belleville Plaza parking lot.

In the same lot, Nick Lintini, 192 Jordan Street, reports the theft of a three-shot shotgun, valued at $25 from his car.

And a lover of country and western music broke into a car owned by George Flanagan of Grand Valley, Ontario. The three tapes, valued at $25 were all country and western recordings. The car was parked at the rear of the Belvedere Hotel.

Frazier May Help Ohio Convicts to Fight

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Joe Frazier, self made with his explosive fists, wants to help convicts set up a boxing program in Ohio Penitentiary.

The heavyweight champion chatted with more than 200 prisoners Monday on a television talk program broadcast live from the prison's Roman Catholic chapel.

"That would be a good idea," Frazier responded to a convict's suggestion he help establish boxing in the 134-year-old maximum security prison.

"I'd like to come back, get up a little boxing team and work out with you guys if I can," the champion said.

Another convict wanted Muhammad Ali along. Ali lost a 15-round decision to Frazier March 9 in New York and the two are scheduled for a rematch.

"Fine, I'd like to have Ali with me. I'd be glad if he comes, too. Right on, men," said the champion, raising a clenched fist in the air.

"These guys asked a little different questions than you newspaper fellas, but I could handle them all," said Frazier, a dropout in Grade 9 who has worked in cotton fields in the South, a New York auto repair shop and a Philadelphia slaughterhouse.

Frazier, who hasn't fought since the Ali match, said he would like to meet his prime challenger next year. But he doesn't expect the rematch until 1973 or 1974 because of legal and contract problems.

The champ predicted another victory. "No matter when it is, it'll be an instant replay," he said.

The champ said he was up to 225 pounds. "I should be about 215. I've put on weight travelling with my musical group (the Knockouts). There's not enough gyms to work out."

Chasing These Birdies Not Just Girls' Game

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Anyone who thinks badminton consists of graceful young girls flitting around on a grassy lawn should take up five or ten minutes of intense sweating with the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club.

The first court session isn't bad, but one certainly finds the hot bath and epsom salts after the rounds, much better. In fact, by the time of the second game, a week later, the aches begin to disappear and the bruises actually mellow.

A sissy game, they say.

Club president Richard Danziger says many people have this mistaken impression. "It's unfortunate, but it's achieved the reputation of being a girls' game."

It's really good, active exercise in the winter when you tend to get stale."

Between 50 and 60 Bellevillians wholeheartedly back up this statement.

Tuesday and Thursday nights and Sunday afternoons, players can be seen on the courts at Centennial Secondary Sch[illegible] beaters or so of shuttlecocking. It's an informal and sociable club, although many take the game seriously.

Muscles tone up and agility improves as players chase a plastic "bird", travelling at speeds of up to 30 miles per hour.

"I'll double, whatever he's paying you. I don't want any messes ashtrays cluttering up the den!"

Occasionally returns are so fast and furious that one tends to employ a left hand grab rather than a right hand racket to stop the flittin' thing.

More experienced members are all too willing to rally to the aid of a novice. Whether one is interested in a leisurely feathered exchange or a perspiration-inducing round is of little importance to the executive.

"It's more sociable," the club president added, resting between games.

To this end, the club moved from their former game sessions at the Belleville Armouries to the high school, with its improved lighting, cafeteria and increased warmth.

"That's pretty important to the girls. I guess they found the armouries pretty chilly."

Most men and women wear tennis-type shorts.

Membership is open to singles for $12 annually; couples for $20; families at $25; high school students, $5, and youngsters, $2. Although not generally used a 50-cent fee is available for occasional players. However, visitors are welcome to try the game without paying fees.

For those interested, the club sends players to tournaments throughout eastern Ontario. On Dec. 11, Belleville will play host to the Central Ontario Badminton Association championships, and in February, there is the annual Dear Great Invitational tournament. Mr. Grant is a former Canadian badminton champion.

Tremendously popular in Asia, badminton is the national game for Malaya. Area badminton buffs have a chance to see Asian adeptness at the sport Nov. 16 when a two man team from Communist China will be playing at St. Lawrence College gym in Kingston as part of their Canadian badminton tour.

Once A Knockdown Artist, Now Walcott Picks People Up

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Jersey Joe Walcott has had two careers. In his first he was required to knock people down. Now, he is picking people up.

Walcott was the heavyweight boxing champion of the world at 37, the oldest man ever to hold the title.

"When I was a fighter it was understood that the fellow who can knock the most people down is the fellow who will reach the top the fastest," says Walcott, who after 21 years in the ring, flattened Ezzard Charles in 1951 to win boxing's most coveted title.

Now, Jersey Joe is sheriff-elect of Camden County. He has a different philosophy.

"The fellow who can pick up the guy who is a fallen human being and help him to find his way, I think that is as great a challenge as boxing."

Walcott, who lost his title to the late Rocky Marciano in 1952, never forgot his humble beginning. He was born Arnold Cream, the third of 10 children. His father was a laborer and Arnold had to quit school at the age of 14 to help support the family.

Born in poverty—and black—he learned early the necessity of self-defence. He turned to boxing, took the name of Jersey Joe Walcott and won his first fight for a $7.50 purse.

In 1951, when I won the title, I made a promise to myself and to God," Walcott recalled. "I said that if I became champion I would dedicate my life to serving people, young people."

That's exactly what Jersey Joe has done.

After losing his crown to Marciano, Walcott returned to Camden and took a job as a juvenile aid officer at $10 a day.

"I have been trying to help young people ever since, doing my thing my way, trying to prove to people that this is a land of opportunity for those who are willing to pay the price. When I say pay the price, I mean make the sacrifices, have faith and work hard."

Walcott, 57, is credited with playing a major role in preventing in Camden the racial outbursts which have raked a number of American cities.

What does Walcott tell the kids who walk the mean side of the street?

"My best approach, and most effective, is to try and sit down with one or many and explain to them the type of things that I've experienced, the life that I lived, the conditions that I lived under, the faith that I had, and the realization that there aren't any shortcuts to success. This way I developed a good relationship with young people."

Walcott led the Democrats to their first victory in many years, carrying several candidates into office with him.

Walcott was named head of the department of community relations in 1969 by Camden Mayor Joseph Nardi at a salary of $13,500. The mayor once described Walcott's success as due to personal character.

"He's simply a good man," the mayor said.

In the recent campaign for sheriff, Walcott made all his speeches off the cuff. He wouldn't allow any of his supporters to say a derogatory word against his opponent. The day after the victory, he took the Republican loser out to lunch.

Walcott feels he has been blessed in every area of life, despite the death about a year ago of his wife. He notes proudly that his oldest son, Arnold Jr., is a lieutenant on the Camden police force; two daughters are school teachers, one a beautician and another an executive secretary, while the youngest son is a Baptist pastor.

"Life has just begun," says Jersey Joe Walcott, who turned hands of devastation into helping hands.

Wrong Net, Barry!

Barry Cuikin displays great net form at Centennial Secondary School during badminton games, but it looks like he's trying for the wrong net. The Belleville Garrison Club meets Tuesday and Thursday nights and Sunday afternoons at Centennial Secondary School with players of all ages playing in pairs and double pairs.

Name Didn't Change Game

The name was changed but the game remained the same at the defending Gas House League hockey champions opened the season with a win last night.

Jim's Pizzeria, which operated last season under the banner of the Downtown Merchants, took a 5-2 decision from the high school teachers, while in the other contest Mead Johnson blanked Stewart Warner 7-0.

Carl Boomhower paced Jim's with a pair of goals with the other going to Allan Ray. Wayne Brown and Steve White. For the teachers it was Al Mott and Dave Sneeden counting markers.

Vern Whalen turned in a shutout performance for Mead Johnson in their first Gas House League outing.

Bob Mulvihill provided two-goal support with single markers going to Tom Gill, Ken Lessels, Bill Sopha, Leroy Mc-Brien and Garnet Adams.

Tiremen Get Rolling

Western Tire Juveniles finally got rolling in the third period to take a 6-1 verdict over Pictau last night.

Five goals in the final frame salted away the win for the Belleville all-stars after the teams had battled to a 1-1 deadlock over the opening 40 minutes.

Bob Foster had counted for Belleville with Chris Conder netting the equalizer before Western's closing burst.

Final frame goals went to Russ Herrington, Kevin Jourdwa, Rick Meagher, John Bowen and Joe Watson.

Preston Rink Best of 30

Jack Preston's rink may not be one in a million, but they proved to be at least one in 30 in the Quinte Curling Club's Opening Mixed Bonspiel.

Preston's foursome, consisting of himself, his wife Ev and Jim and Jean Sisler defeated 29 other entries in the week-long event to take possession of the Charles Lovejt Trophy.

In the B event, the rink of Charlie and Joan Cox, Ron and Betty Caswell emerged as top trophy winners. Honors in the C event went to the foursome of Art and Doris Bannon, Bob and Doreen Rolston.

Canadian Equestrians Not Resting on Yesterday's Laurels

NEW YORK (AP) — The Canadian equestrian team was basking today in the glory of its first National Cup victory of the year and first at the National Horse Show since 1962.

But the Canadians will have another major problem in tonight's final session of the 85th edition of the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden. They are four points behind the Americans in the battle for overall honors.

The United States equestrian team leads Canada for the team title, 78-72, with Argentina, the third team in the competition, trailing with 36 points.

The Nations Cup is the most important international class in horse shows around the world. Each country, with the exception of the U.S., is permitted only one Nations Cup. The U.S., because of its numerous shows, is permitted two.

The U.S. team won the other at the Pennsylvania National Show in Harrisburg two weeks ago. That was the first time coach Bert de Nemethy's riders won the event this year. They also triumphed in France and West Germany last summer.

One Nations Cup remains for both the U.S. and Canadian equestrian team. That is scheduled for the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto next week.

In the cup competition Monday night, the Canadian team finished with seven faults and the U.S. team had 12. Ironically, all the faults incurred by both teams took place in the first round during the afternoon session. Both teams had clean performances—only the scores of the top three of the four riders on the team are counted—in the final round during the night session before a crowd of about 8,000 in Madison Square Garden.

The Canadian performance was paced by Torchy Millar of Ste. Marguerite Station, Que., riding Le Dauphin, who produced the only clean performance in the first round among the 12 international riders competing. Millar repeated the feat in the second round as did Barbara Simpson of Calgary, riding Catibrd. Anchorman was third Olympic medallist from Hornby, Ont., riding Sundancer. Day was the last rider up and his flawless performance clinched the title for the Canadians.

In the first round, Day had three faults and Miss Simpson four.

The U.S. riders were Neal Shapiro, on Sloopy, Joe Fargis on Sun Lucas, Frank Chapot, on White Lightning and Bill Steinkraus, on Fleet Apple.

Sloopy, Sun Lucas, and Fleet Apple all were charged with four faults in the first round. White Lightning had 11, but that score didn't count.

The U.S. rallied in the second round with four faultless rides by Shapiro, Fargis and Chapot. After Day's faultless round, Steinkraus scratched Fleet Apple when it became obvious that the U.S. team couldn't win.

"This is a good feeling—beat the Yanks on their home grounds," said the jubilant Day, a 25-year-old salesman who rode in the cleanup spot the first time.

Brig. Dennis Whitaker of Toronto, chairman of the Canadian team, was more somber in his analysis.

"We were very thrilled because Tom Gaylord and Jim Elder, for many years our mainstays, were unable to accompany the team," he said.

"I think it also proves the program we have been following has given depth to the team, not only in riders, but in horses as well."

The individual standings were not affected by Monday night's team event. Neil Shapiro of the U.S. leads with 20 and Miss Simpson is second with 20. Day is fourth with 16.

North Stars' Goalkeeping League's Best in 18 Years

MONTREAL (CP) — Two veteran goaltenders — Lorne (Gump) Worsley and Cesare Maniago of Minnesota North Stars—have provided the National Hockey League with its best early-season netminding mark since 1953.

Statistics released by the league show both are after limiting the opposition to only two goals in three Minnesota victories in the season's first six games in 14 games.

Worsley's 3-0 shutout over the Flyers in Philadelphia last Sunday—the only one of the 21 goals in 14 games.

This is five fewer goals than any other team has allowed and it lowered the Worsley-Maniago combined goals-against average to 1.50 from the 1.72 figure the pair had compiled one week ago.

Not since the 1953-54 season when the late Terry Sawchuk and Dave Gatherum teamed up with Detroit Red Wings for a combined 1.73 goals-against mark after 14 games has an average been lower.

Worsley and Maniago also share the lead in shutouts with three, the same number as the combo of Tony Esposito and Gary Smith of Chicago Black Hawks. Esposito has two of Chicago's three shutouts.

Worsley, 42, has a goals-against average of 1.00 while Maniago, 32, has two shutouts and a 2.00 individual mark.

Each has played seven games. After the same number of games last season, Minnesota netminders had allowed 32 goals for a goals-against average of 2.29, had not recorded a shutout, and the club was in fourth place.

Today the Stars have a share

GUMP WORSLEY

of the West Division lead with the powerful Hawks. Both clubs have 22 points, but Minnesota has a game in hand over Chicago.

Only one game is scheduled tonight when Montreal Canadiens visit the Blues in St. Louis.

In the individual scoring race, right winger Bill Gilbert and linemate Vic Hadfield of New York Rangers each collected seven points last week for totals of 21 and 22 respectively. Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins dropped to third spot with 21 points, two more than Jean Ratelle, who centres Gilbert and Hadfield.

Boston defenceman Bobby Orr is on a level with Ratelle's 19 points. Orr leads the league in assists with 15. Another sixth place with 18 points each are the leading goal scorers, frank Mahovlich of Montreal Mtl. and rookie Richard Martin of Buffalo Sabres with 13 goals.

The line of Gilbert, Hadfield and Ratelle has amassed 66 scoring points in 14 games this season and is in a good position to break the record for most points by a line set last season when Phil Esposito, Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman of Boston combined for 336 scoring points.

If they continue at their present rate, the New York trio could finish with 368 points.

NHL Considers Early Expansion

NEW YORK (CP) — Governors of the National Hockey League struggled today with the question of expansion at their meeting for more than six hours Monday without coming to any decision.

The 14 governors are considering a report by a committee on expansion headed by president Clarence Campbell.

Campbell said late Monday night that the governors sought Monday to resolve "procedural matters" on the expansion issue.

Under consideration are a number of franchise applications with Atlanta and Hempstead, Long Island, rated to have the best chance to have their bids approved.

Originally the league had not planned to expand before 1974 but there were indications this could change with new teams being accepted for play as early as next season.

Campbell indicated last week that any speeded-up expansion timetable would require a unanimous vote of the board. But there were reports Monday night that the 14 governors were discussing the possibility of a 12-vote majority as requirement for approval.

"That is a matter of debate," said Campbell.

How to get around the self-imposed limitation of a unanimous vote was believed to be the "procedural matter" mentioned by Campbell.

If they obtained franchises, both Hempstead and Atlanta would have stadiums ready for next season. The Nassau County Coliseum, with seating capacity of 15,500, will be ready to receive a team by next fall.

Atlanta will have a new stadium this fall with seating capacity of 17,000 for hockey.

NHL vice-president Don Ruck expressed hope a decision can be reached today.

Eliminating the need for a unanimous vote would sidestep objections to immediate expansion by one or two dissenting governors such as Oakland's Charles O. Finley, who indicated he would be unhappy with having his club surrender any players to stock new teams proposed.

Then there is the matter of how to handle a 16-team league. Some sentiment exists for splitting the teams into four divisions composed of four teams each. Naturally, the makers of those divisions was not a simple issue to resolve.

One solution offered was dividing up the NHL's four most powerful teams, Montreal, Chicago, New York and Boston, and putting one in each of the proposed four divisions.

Another problem for the NHL governors to consider was the new World Hockey Association, which has announced plans to play in cities next season. One of the WHA franchise holders, Gary Davidson of Woodmere, N.Y., has threatened suit should the NHL expand to Long Island and place a team in the new Nassau Coliseum complex.

Awrey Joins Green on Sidelines

BOSTON (AP) — X-rays disclosed Monday that veteran defenceman Don Awrey of Boston Bruins suffered a broken right ankle in Sunday's National Hockey League game with Montreal Canadiens.

The Bruins also reported that another veteran defenceman, Teddy Green, has been ordered to hospital for tests for an extended abdominal ailment.

Awrey injured his ankle in a wrestling bout with Montreal's Phil Roberto. He is expected to be sidelined for about eight weeks.

Green has been ailing since the start of training camp in September. He has made just a couple of brief appearances in one regular season game.

Boston coach Tom Johnson said Matt Ravlich, obtained from Los Angeles Kings on waivers last week, will fill one defence position.

Bob Stewart of Boston Braves of the American Hockey League will be called up by the Bruins, possibly for Wednesday night's game with the Black Hawks in Chicago.

Duke Snider Back on Diamond

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Former Dodger great Duke Snider, for the last three years a broadcast commentator for San Diego Padres, will manage the National League team's class AA minor league club in Alexandria, La., next year.

In announcing the appointment Monday, the Padres noted that Snider, 44, has won pennants in previous stints as a minor league manager—with Tri Cities, Wash. of the North west League in 1966 and with Albuquerque N.M., of the Texas League in 1967.

The Padres also announced that Jerry Coleman, an infielder with the New York Yankees from 1949 to 1957, will broadcast the San Diego games next season.

NEW YORK (AP) — Each Pittsburgh Pirates player will receive $18,164.58 for his role in beating Baltimore Orioles last month for baseball's World Series title.

Each of the Orioles will get $13,906.46.

The biggest financial pie in World Series history will be shared by players on 13 major league clubs, according to a player pool announced Monday by commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

The total player purse from the exciting seven game series amounted to a record $1,742,325.31—$28,006 more than the 1969 pool in which the Orioles got the biggest share.

Over-all receipts for the World Series and the playoff series of the two leagues amounted to $4,604,566.26.

Players of the Oakland and San Francisco clubs, who won division titles but lost in the title series, cut up $217,790.66. The Athletics received $6,365.50 each, the Giants $6,198.29.

The four second place teams sliced $41,380.22 and the third place teams carved up $10,889.53. New York Mets and Chicago Cubs, tying for third, receive $5,444.77 each.

KYOTO, Japan (AP) — The Japan series champion Yomiuri Giants, teaming with the Pacific League champion Hankyu Braves, erupted for 12 hits off four Baltimore hurlers today and snapped the American League champion Orioles 8-2.

It was the first loss in Japan for the Orioles, the 16th U.S. major baseball club to visit this country on a barnstorming tour. The Orioles have won eight games and tied three others.

Hisashi Yamada of the Braves, the Pacific League's top pitcher in the 1971 season, outclassed Jim Palmer in a duel between two 20-game winners. Yamada held the Orioles to seven hits, including a home run and two doubles.

Palmer gave up three homers and two singles in the first four innings, and was relieved by Pete Richert in the fifth.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (AP) — Allie Reynolds, former New York Yankee pitching star, resigned as president of the American Baseball Association Monday, effective immediately.

Reynolds said he was quitting because of pressing business interests and he wants to devote more time with his family.

Reynolds had been president of the association since it resumed operation in 1969 following a seven year suspension.

Under Reynolds's leadership, the American Association experienced a 28 per cent increase in attendance in 1971, with a total draw of 1,680,000, tops for all Triple-A baseball leagues.

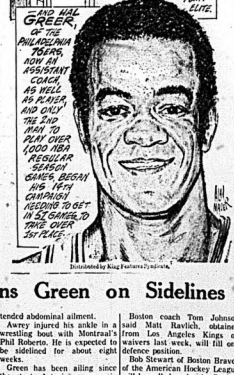
WBA Advises Reversal

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Ramon G. Velazquez, president of the World Boxing Council, said Monday he would recommend that Mando Ramos of Los Angeles be recognized as WBC lightweight champion, thereby reversing a decision by Nigerian referee Samuel Odoom.

Ramos was clearly ahead of Spain's Pedro Gomez in the title bout Nov. 5 and sent the Spaniard to the canvas four times when Udobee disqualified him.

Velazquez said the referee's decision "was a disgrace and an injustice."

"I am only waiting for the report of the council's representative at the fight to make my formal proposal that Ramos be recognized as the world champion," he said.



Ken Buchanan of Scotland is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association.

Sweden Midgets Win

HAMMERHY, Sweden (CP) — Aurora Midgets, with half a dozen players weakened by flu, were shut out 3-0 Monday in the second game of their five game Swedish hockey tour.

The Canadian team, from a small town just north of Toronto, is the first to take part in an international tour since the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association relaxed its total ban on such travel. They won their opening game against Soderhalje 7-3 Sunday.

Mother of Three Applies as Jockey

LONDON (AP) — Judy Goodhew, a 31-year-old mother of three children, has applied to become a jockey—to the dismay of the all-powerful British Jockey Club.

The Jockey Club, one of the last men only institutions and often considered staid and reactionary, promptly turned down the application.

But then, apparently looking over its shoulder at the havoc caused by the women's lib movement elsewhere, it had second thoughts.

In a cautiously-worded statement, the Jockey Club, which controls British racing from top to bottom, said it was going to consult horse-owners, trainers, male jockeys and racing executives.

The only official race that women can ride in now is the New Market Town Plate, a centuries old event that carries no prize money and is considered a joke.

If girls were granted full licences to ride, they would technically be able to enter the Grand National, Britain's most spectacular steeplechase over more than four miles and "some of the toughest jumps in the world at Liverpool.

"Girls are all right providing they are doing the donkey work in stables, or paying the bills as owners," Peter Hern of the Jockey Club doesn't want to know." Judy declared.

Cast Helps Colts

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mike Curtis will have two metal pins removed from a mending broken thumb today, and he hopes the operation will give him more football mobility.

But the bulky cast worn by Baltimore's middle linebacker may have restricted his play just enough Monday night to produce a 24-17 victory for the Colts over Los Angeles Rams.

With his right thumb in a rigid position and unable to grasp properly, Curtis used his arm as sort of a club to jar the ball loose from Larry Smith of the Rams in the fourth quarter.

Fellow linebacker Ted Hendricks snared the ball in full stride and romped 31 yards into the end zone for a touchdown which snapped a 10-10 tie with 9:03 to play.

Scores by Baltimore's Tom Matte and Matt Maslowski of the Rams were added in the closing two minutes, but it was the fumble popped free by Curtis which turned the tide in the nationally-televised game.

Hendricks first saw the ball about seven feet in the air, and grabbed it about a foot off the ground.

"It was a freak thing, and I just happened to be there," Hendricks said.

Just 82 seconds before Hendricks scored, a 35-yard field goal by Baltimore's Jim O'Brien had tied it 10-10, overcoming a Los Angeles lead that had existed since just before halftime.

Matte, Baltimore's 32 year old workhorse who gained 97 yards, had given the Colts a 7-3 lead with the first of his two touchdowns with 5:26 to go in the second quarter.

But the Rams, who opened the scoring with David Ray's 20-yard field goal, struck back quickly. They drove 60 yards in seven plays to go in front 10-7 on a 12-yard TD pass from Roman Gabriel to Les Josephson.

The victory pulled Baltimore to within a half-game of first-place Miami in the American Conference East, while the Rams fell 1½ games off the pace from front-running San Francisco in the National Conference West.

Celtics Stop Rally

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Boston Celtics turned back a Cincinnati rally in the fourth quarter to defeat the Royals 120-109 in a National Basketball Association game Monday night.

Dave Cowens scored 30 points to lead the Celtics, who stayed on top in the NBA Atlantic Division with their ninth victory against two defeats.

Cowens got 16 of his points as the Celts built a 63-50 halftime lead. Boston made it 93-70 during the third period. Jo Jo White finished with 24 points in the only pro basketball game played Monday night.

Cincinnati trailed throughout but Nate Williams came off the bench to lead a Royals' comeback try. He pumped in 26 points and Cincinnati came within 12 points early in the fourth period.

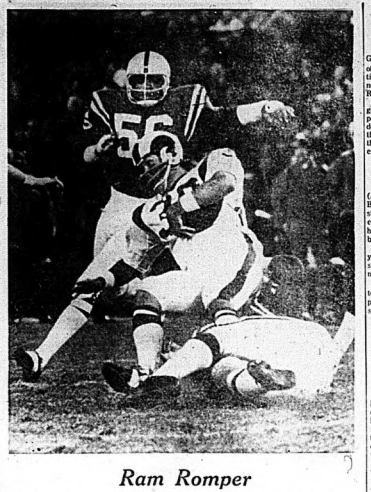
Ali Prepares For Mathis Bout

HOUSTON (AP) — Muhammad Ali planned a workout today that he hoped would knock a couple of pounds or so off his 224¾ pound weight.

Ali went eight rounds with four sparring partners Monday in preparation for his scheduled 12-round bout Nov. 17 against Buster Mathis.

Ali arrived in town Sunday weighing 228 but dropped that to the 224¾ mark with the Monday sparring session.

Mathis, hoping to hold his weight at 255 to 260, did no sparring Monday.



Bad Bet

EDMONTON (CP) — Richard Normandin, a harness racing driver from Quebec, has been suspended for two years by the Alberta Racing Association.

He was charged with betting on horses other than his own in a quinella race at Northlands Park here in October.

The suspension applies to all recognized races in North America. He will be denied all privileges of the grounds, including the grandstand area and none of his horses may be raced until sold or transferred.

The suspension was announced during the weekend.

Ram Romper

Good Reason for Cool Kicker

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Toni Fritsch was the target of St. Louis taunts when he trotted on the field Sunday with 1:53 left to play.

"You're gonna choke," yelled Cardinal linebacker Larry Stallings at the Dallas Cowboy kicking specialist, who is a soccer hero in Austria.

Fritsch lined up his 26-yard field goal while Cowboy linebacker Dave Edwards yelled back at Stallings: "Save your breath. He can't understand a word of English."

Fritsch, playing in his first regular season game, belted the field goal true—his third of the game—to give Dallas a 16-13 National Football League victory.

Resting at his apartment Monday with his wife, Sonya, Fritsch said he doesn't feel pressure.

"I played soccer before 100,000 fans in all the countries of the world for seven years as a pro," Fritsch said. "All shots go in one ear and out the other."

Fritsch said the only difference between kicking in American football and playing soccer is "you have more chances to kick a goal in soccer."

A national hero on the Rapid Wien side in Vienna, Fritsch was on the verge of leaving the Cowboys two weeks ago until he was activated off the taxi squad when Mike Clark missed three field goals against Chicago Bears.

Gotta Hasn't Gotta Go!

OTTAWA (CP) — Coach Jack Gotta is expected to get a vote of confidence within a short time and then begin scouting for next year's edition of Ottawa Rough Riders.

Gotta, who still has a year to go on his Rider contract, appeared to be in trouble when Riders threatened to end up for the second straight season as the last-place team in the Eastern Football Conference.

They recovered to win three straight games and a place in the EFC semi-finals, only to lose to Hamilton Tiger-Cats over the weekend in the sudden death game.

Owner David Loeb had said that he and general manager Frank Clair would "reassess" team personnel and policy soon after the season ended.

If Gotta's job was in danger, he probably wiped away the doubts with a third-place finish in the second year of a rebuilding job.

Shortly after the loss to Hamilton, Gotta outlined his scouting plans for next year.

"First of all, we'll bring in some quarterbacks!" he said. "The greater percentage of our recruiting has centred around quarterbacks."

The job now belongs to Rick Cassata, who took over from Gary Wood late in the season.

The Ottawa offence this year also suffered from bte lack of outside running. Filling that gap also is high on Gotta's shopping list.

Gotta also wants to bolster his defensive backfield. All of the jobs now, with the exception of Al Marcelin, are held by Canadians.

Hole in Heart Won't Keep West Bromwich Star off Field

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Asa Hartford, one of Britain's brightest young soccer stars whose career appeared to end when two specialists said he had a hole in his heart, went back into training today.

A third specialist gave the 21-year-old West Bromwich Albion star a go-ahead to train Monday night.

Dr. Paul Davison, one of the top heart experts in Britain, promised to give a statement soon on his reasons for disagreeing with the other doctors.

For Hartford, Dr. Davison's verdict was a reprieve from a life sentence on the sidelines. Leeds United agreed last week to pay £177,000 ($442,500) for Hartford but backed down when a routine medical checkup turned up the hole-in-the-heart diagnosis.

The trade still is off, but Hartford is a new member of the Scotland national squad to play against world teams and he still has a spot with West Bromwich in the English League.

Two weeks ago, Asa put an engagement ring on the finger of 18-year-old Joye Francis of West Bromwich. "When Asa came back from Leeds," she said, "he gave me a kiss and cuddle and told me not to worry."

West Bromwich football officials said the same thing:

"Whatever happens his future is secure. We will look after him."

Jonas A Winner Without Bombers

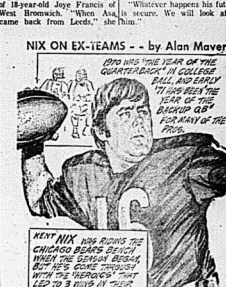
WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers announced Monday that quarterback Don Jonas has won the Jeff Nicklin Memorial Trophy, given annually to the Western Football Conference player considered most valuable to his team.

The trophy, determined by a vote of sports writers, was donated in 1961 by the Canadian Paratroop Battalion in memory of its commanding officer, Lt.-Col. Jeff Nicklin, a former end on Winnipeg's Grey Cup championship team of 1935.

Jonas, a place-kicking quarterback, also has won the Dave Dryburgh Memorial Trophy, given annually to the WFC individual scoring race winner. He is the western nominee as the most outstanding player in the Canadian Football League.

Too Much High School Football ?

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A top United States authority on football injuries says the game ought to be abolished at high schools which can't afford physician coverage and don't have many players.



"It's definitely not safe to play a football game with just one or two players on the sidelines," said Dr. Carl S. Blyth, who is chairman of three national research committees and head of physical education at the University of North Carolina.

Blyth said inadequate equipment and playing facilities increase the chances of football injuries.

"The large number of head and neck injuries, which caused almost 90 per cent of contact fatalities last year, can be connected to equipment, he said.

"Although some very good helmets are available, they are not always used," he said.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L N G P E A L O P

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Beaten Prisoner Says Accused Assisted Him

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A prisoner beaten by convicts during the April riot at Kingston penitentiary testified that one man is charged with murder helped him escape worse ill treatment.

The prisoner gave testimony at the start of the second week of the trial of 13 prisoners charged with non-capital murder in the deaths of convicts Brian Enser, 25, and Bertram Robert, 34.

The witness said Harold St. Amour intervened to have him removed from the circle of "undesirable" prisoners who were being beaten.

Prison officials found Enser's body in a corridor when the four-day rebellion ended and Robert died in hospital a month later.

More than a dozen prisoners, many from cells in Block 1-D, were injured. The cellblock housed informers and sexual offenders, known as "undesirables" to the general prison population.

The witness said he had been convicted five years ago in London, Ont., on two counts of indecent assault on a female, one of breaking and entering with intent to commit an indecent assault and one of prowling at night.

He said while the general prison population treated sexual offenders with "animosity," St. Amour treated him as a human being.

When the riot broke out, he said, he was with 80 prisoners who were detained at gunpoint in the recreation hall by two hostages for about 2½ hours and then permitted to join the rebels.

The witness said when he entered the small area the prison was in a "shambles." Knives went to St. Amour's cell because "in the last five years St. Amour has helped me a lot in a lot of ways."

He spent the first night in St. Amour's cell but by the second night it was crowded and he went to another.

Eventually all prisoners were given an ultimatum to get out of the cells and go to the domed area where the beatings later took place.

The witness said he saw several prisoners housed in 1-D dragged from their cells and tied to chairs with sheets. The chairs were placed around a circular radiator.

He said St. Amour advised him to climb up to a higher level but other prisoners pushed him back into the ground floor area.

The witness said Brian Beaucage, 23, London, Ont., one of the accused, told him "I've been waiting for you for 4½ years."

The witness said Beaucage pushed him into the circle and struck him with a steel spoke taken from one of the prison's rocking wheelchairs.

He said Beaucage and David Shepley, 24, of Windsor, kicked him before he was tied to a chair on their orders.

He identified three more of the accused as among the assailants: Donald Guy, 20, and his brother James, 24, both of London and Edward Fowler, whom he did not identify by name.

MPs Demand Changes in Tax Bill to Keep Farmers on Land

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons farm spokesmen rose in force Monday to demand changes in parts of the government tax bill which they said would drive farmers off their land.

They said farmers and ranchers would shoulder an unfair tax burden in trying to build livestock herds and in leaving their farms to sons to carry on.

The debate—part of clause-by-clause study of the 707-page bill—was marked by opposition predictions of government defeat in Monday's byelection in the Saskatchewan farm riding of Assiniboia.

The MPs learned as the debate closed that New Democrat William Knight had defeated Conservative and Liberal opponents.

Jack Horner (Crowfoot), a conservative rancher from Alberta, stated the case for continued tax concessions for cattlemen under the basis-herd concept. It was one of the special privileges farmers need for survival, he said.

A basic herd now is considered a capital asset, which can increase in value and produce income from sales without being taxed.

Under the proposed bill, it would be considered inventory. Farmers could write off the cost of buying a herd, but would pay tax on the profit earned in selling the herd just as with any other income.

Mr. Horner, fellow Alberta rancher Clifford Downey (Battle River) and economist John Burton (NDP—Regina East) said the herd should be considered a capital asset.

Only half the profit earned on a capital asset would be included as taxable income.

Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar), a wheat farmer, led off the appeals for changes in the proposal to tax as capital gains farms willed to heirs. He said farmers would be crippled in developing their businesses and passing them on to their children.

Harold Danforth (PC—Kent-Essex), an Ontario farmer, said farmers already are forced to tell their children to find a livelihood in another career. Farming just did not pay.

Bruce Howard, parliamentary secretary to Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said there was a loophole that could benefit farmers. Farmers could hand over one-tenth of their farms to heirs each year for 10 years. That way, heirs would not be faced with a bulky tax bill all at once.

Jerry Pringle (L—Fraser Valley East) supported opposition calls for a change in the rules for basic herds.

And he noted the plight of farmers whose land value is raised by proximity to cities. That would unfairly raise his capital-gains tax, he said.

Gordon Blair (L—Grenville-Carleton) and Mr. Downey called for a distinction in the bill between the hobby-farmer — who earns most of his income away from the farm and would not be allowed to discount farm losses against other income—and small farmers trying to make a living at other work while they build a farm.

They said legitimate small farmers should get a tax break for struggling to establish their farms as going concerns.

As for the bill as a whole, Mr. Horner said it was another of the government's attempts to force two-thirds of farmers off their land.

He said the government has quietly accepted the suggestion of a 1968 report that small, inefficient farmers get out of the business, leaving it to the big money-makers.

The report suggested that Canada's rural population, now about 10 per cent of the total population, be cut to three per cent.

He and other MPs also attacked the bill's proposal to count no difference between the depreciated value of farm machinery and the price a farmer gets for it on trade-in as a capital gain.

The stiff opposition to the farm clauses stalled the slow but steady pace the House has made in previous days in moving through the 333 subclauses of the bill.

To date, 25 subclauses have been passed.

CFB Curling Death Brings Widow $65,000

OTTAWA (CP) — The widow of a Royal Canadian Navy veteran killed while curling at a Canadian Armed Forces Base in Montreal last February has been awarded $65,000 damages against the federal government.

James Martin, 49, died as a result of injuries received when the roof of the Longue Pointe curling club collapsed while he was curling with his wife and half-brother.

The government admitted responsibility in the new Federal Court of Canada to which all actions against the Queen must be addressed.

Judge F. U. Collier devoted a 12-page judgment fixing the amount of damages which was

Long Treatment Is General When Thyroid Underactive

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dr. Thosteson: I noticed a small, soft enlargement along one side of my windpipe. It doesn't show at all on the other side.

I went to the hospital and had what they call a thyroid scan. The doctor said it showed nothing, which is good.

Just what did he mean by that, because two weeks later he said my thyroid was very underactive. What are the symptoms of that?

What is Proloid? If one has to take medication, do you have to continue with it for a lifetime? —W.M.N.

By the scan showing nothing, he meant that there was no confirmation of an active tumor of the thyroid gland—which is good, certainly.

Other tests and observations could indicate an underactive thyroid which, it appears, was the case. Symptoms of that are loss of fatigue, dry skin and hair, low blood pressure, slow pulse, possibly a tendency to gain weight.

Proloid is a thyroid extract used to treat that condition. The length of time you have to take it depends on how you respond to the medication, but usually it is continued for a prolonged time.

Dr. Thosteson: I have had constant headaches for 12 years. I also have a low blood sugar count. Ear headaches be due to this, and will a controlled diet have any effect? Please discuss hypoglycemia. I understand it is a rare condition—Mrs. M.McD.

Hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) can contribute to headaches, but I would look elsewhere for causes of constant headaches that last 12 years.

Hypoglycemia (low blood sugar) is far from a rare condition. In varying degrees, it is quite common, and has varying causes. Diet that is low in carbohydrate and high in protein helps a great many patients. I see no reason why you shouldn't try it and see whether it helps the headache.

Dr. Thosteson: My husband is 60 and has been taking medication for over a year because of his high cholesterol count which shows little or no improvement even though he faithfully follows his diet pretty well.

He has been a heavy drinker for the last 15 years, consuming two to three fifths of scotch a week. He has an extremely large stomach yet has had no substantial increase in weight in 20 years.

Is there any connection between the liquor and high cholesterol? Should his doctor be informed? He is not aware of the drinking.—Mrs. J.T.

By all means his doctor should be informed, but for more reasons than just the stubborn cholesterol level. That's a substantial alcohol intake, and the liver can tolerate only about so much alcohol. Further, the liver has a big role in cholesterol production.

The large stomach could be due to fluid accumulating because of cirrhosis of the liver—although cholesterol may be either high or low with cirrhosis.

I repeat, his doctor should be told about the drinking because of the high probability that there is some liver involvement.

Dr. Thosteson: Is it at all possible to father a child at 70? What are the odds? Could it happen—G.C.

I don't know the odds, but the male does not, like a woman, lose the ability to have children. There are cases of men much older than 70 siring children.

Opening lead — king of spades.

They say that necessity is the mother of invention, and certainly this adage can sometimes be applied at the bridge table.

Consider this hand where West leads the spade king against six hearts, South wins with the ace and cashes the A-K of trumps, hoping the queen will fall, in which case a successful club finesse would bring matters to a happy conclusion.

But East shows out and declarer is in deep trouble. It is no longer enough to assume that a club finesse will succeed, for even if it does and the clubs are divided normally—that is, 3-2—he will be unable to make the slam.

In that case West would ruff the third or fourth round of clubs and cash the queen of spades to put the contract down one.

South must go beyond that in trying to either invent or envision a combination of cards that will permit the slam to be made. He must not only assume that West has the queen of clubs but must also assume that West has four clubs rather than two or three. That is the only way for the slam to come home.

Accordingly, South plays the eight of clubs to the ace at trick four (in order to guard against East's having a singleton honor), then returns to his hand with a diamond and leads the nine of clubs.

West's play at this point does not affect the outcome. If he passes low, South also plays low from dummy, then takes another club finesse and gets rid of both his spade losers before West can ruff.

If West covers the nine with the ten, South finesses the jack, ruffs a diamond, and then finesses the seven of clubs to achieve the same result. Once declarer makes the proper assumption, West is helpless.

Ottawa Gets Microfilm Of Old Jewish Scrolls

MONTREAL (CP) — Part of a collection of ancient Jewish and Hebraic manuscripts locked away with Russia since the 1917 Communist revolution, has been released on microfilm by the U.S.S.R. and now is stored in the National Library in Ottawa.

David Rome, former head of the Montreal Jewish Public Library, said Monday in an interview that to date more than 20,000 microfilm frames containing Semitic material dating from the 9th Maccabean to the back 1,000 years have been received and another 30,000 frames is expected within a month.

Duplicates of the microfilm will also be housed at McGill library here.

It is hoped the films of the entire Russian collection will eventually end up in Canada.

After the revolution, millions of pages of hand-written manuscripts, Biblical texts, liturgy, historical, scientific and folkloric material were seized and stored away, inaccessible to Western scholars.

Mr. Rome described the acquisitions as a "very valuable addition to the history of the Jewish and Christian world," ilan world."

A Committee for the Acquisition of Old Semitic Manuscripts for the National Library has been organized to raise funds to purchase the collection.

Ernest Sabloff, a Montreal notary and committee member, said Monday a goal of $500,000 has been set. About $50,000 has been collected.

Exactly how or why the U.S.S.R. decided to release microfilm of the valuable collection remains uncertain, although an instrumental role was played by a Montreal bookseller, Raymond Davies, who has wide east-European contacts.

Trudeau Jeered on First Visit to Quebec City Since Vote

QUEBEC (CP) — A small group of protesters jeered Monday as Prime Minister Trudeau ended his first visit to this city since the 1970 federal election.

While Mr. Trudeau was speaking at the banquet which ended his day here, about 100 people demonstrated outside in support of the Lapalme mail truck drivers who have been on strike in Montreal when a post office trucking contract was reassigned in 1970.

They were offered jobs with the civil service but refused, not wanting to lose their union affiliation.

Earlier in the day Mr. Trudeau fielded questions from students at Levis-Lauzon junior college across the St. Lawrence River from here and from reporters at a news conference.

He chatted with passengers on the Quebec-Levis ferry while he ate sandwiches and an apple for lunch, turned down the offer of a friendly beer when he poked his head into a tavern — he is reconstruction of historic Place Royale and was presented with a blessed stone, of a type given to women so that their unborn children will be beautiful.

Mrs. Trudeau is expecting a child in December.

Reporters and students asked Mr. Trudeau about separatism and economic problems. He also answered questions about federal tax reform legislation, radicals, and current federal-provincial discussions about family allowances.

One student asked Mr. Trudeau what the federal government would do if a separatist government was elected in Quebec. He replied that he was reluctant to answer the question because it was hypothetical and suggested that the student ask the Parti Quebecois.

He said later at a news conference that Quebec independence could not be decided at a provincial level but would, in his view, have to be negotiated with the rest of Canada. A separatist party elected in Quebec would have the mandate to negotiate with the federal government to determine a formula for holding a referendum.

Mr. Trudeau would not say whether such a referendum would be held at the Quebec provincial or the national level or whether it would be carried out by federal or provincial authorities.

On economic matters he said that a possible wage freeze to control inflation was not out of the question if it became necessary but there were no plans for it now. He said there is increasing disquiet among Canadians about foreign ownership of their economy.

The prime minister told 2,500 supporters at a Liberal banquet Monday evening that the natural resources of each province belong to the whole country and it is the federal government's job to redistribute these riches to help underprivileged areas.

Mr. Trudeau told the news conference that his government will go ahead with plans to reform Canada's tax laws and not set the matter aside until the next election. He repeated that there are no plans at present for a federal general election.

Wind, Fog Hamper Cannikin Survey

AMCHITKA ISLAND, Alaska (AP) — High winds and fog hampered further reconaissance of the area of the Cannikin nuclear blast Monday, the Atomic Energy Commission said.

A storm was moving into the area with 40-mile-an-hour winds and rain and could halt further surveys for two days or more, an AEC spokesman said.

Henry Vermillion, public affairs officer for the AEC, said collapse of the underground cavity formed by the five-megaton nuclear blast Saturday was apparent on the surface Monday.

He said the small aftershocks in the immediate area of the mile-deep shaft ceased as the collapse reached the surface.

The heat and force of the explosion pressured the molten rock into a large underground cavern which began to cave in as the material cooled.

Ground surveys discovered two dead sea otters and two dead harbor seals as well as several hundred dead greenling fish on the beach. The fish are a small species which live in kelp beds.

Thirteen dead birds and numerous dead stickleback fish were found inland on the island, he said.

"In all cases, we have not been able to determine whether they were killed by the effects of the shock blast or from the massive storm on the island the day before," Vermillion said.

The AEC estimates post-test work on the island will take about a year to complete.

Austerity Program Is Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — Professor Jacques Piccard, internationally-recognized Swiss oceanographer, said Monday the world must go on an austerity program if it is to survive pollution.

It is necessary to change "the society of consumption" into a society in which people are willing to sacrifice such things as weekend use of their automobiles, he told a news conference.

Sea Dirty As Sewers

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Norwegian explorer Thor Heyerdahl said Monday that parts of oceans are as dirty and polluted as city sewers, befouled by man's refuse of tin cans, plastic containers, glass bottles and oil.

Testifying before the Senate ocean pollution committee, Heyerdahl said pollution is no longer a national problem and that international action, through the United Nations, is required.

"What others dump in the sea will come to your shores and what you dump at home will travel abroad, irrespective of national legislation," he told the committee.

Heyerdahl said there were significant differences in pollution during two of his sea voyages. Twenty years ago when he sailed the Kon-Tiki there was not a single oil slick or sign of man's activities seen during the 4,300-mile Pacific ocean crossing.

Last year, on a voyage across the Atlantic, he testified, "pollution in the form of . . . manmade products . . . passed close by the sides of our raft at intervals from the day of departure to the day of landing during the 57-day period."

Recount Coming

TORONTO (CP) — Progressive Conservative Richard Kirkup, runner-up to Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, in the Oct. 21 provincial election, said a recount has been ordered in his Scarborough West riding.

In the last count, Mr. Lewis was shown to have 13,053 votes and Mr. Kirkup 12,977. No recount date has been set.

Labrador Party Chief Will Support PCs

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Former Liberal Tom Burgess will support Frank Moores in the next provincial legislature, a move that probably will give Newfoundland its first Progressive Conservative government.

Unless recounts of ballots cast in the Oct. 22 election produce upsets, the New Labrador Party leader's decision to support the Conservatives will give Mr. Moores a majority of one in the 42-seat legislature after appointment of a Speaker.

Mr. Moores said in an interview today he was "in a position to say that Mr. Burgess will support a PC government."

He said he had talked with Mr. Burgess in Labrador City by telephone earlier today.

Mr. Moores said Mr. Burgess, who was returned in Labrador West, would remain a member of the New Labrador Party and would not sit in the Conservative caucus.

Meanwhile, official counts from 37 of the 41 districts showed no change in party standings. One district returns two members.

A spokesman for the electoral office said the remaining five counts were expected later today.

Mr. Smallwood, whose party has been in power since he led Newfoundland into Confederation in 1949, said earlier today the Liberals would ask for recounts in some of the seven closest ridings.

Authority Buys Land

Park Planned At Massassaga

By ELMER BONTER
Staff Correspondent

AMELIASBURG — The Prince Edward Conservation Authority has purchased historic Massassaga Point, with a lengthy frontage on the Bay of Quinte, for $21,000 — at price local realtors seem to agree was a "real bargain."

The 60-acre site with a 4,000-foot shoreline on the Bay, is scheduled for development as public parkland.

An Authority spokesman said today the provincial government will pay half the purchase price.

Belleville realtors agreed the Authority bought the land — from a Cobourg estate — at a dramatically low price — one called it a "token price".

Estimates of land costs in the area — depending on water quality and depths of lots — were given at $30-$35 per frontage foot by most realtors canvassed. One gave an estimate of $60. (Further west, along the Massassaga Road prime residential land is selling for at least $80 per foot.)

At present, the site is landlocked by a development subdivision headed by George Prue, of Amelisburg, and the Authority is asking Ameliasburg township at provide access.

A declaration from the authority appeared before council last night to present the request and council agreed to seek the co-operation of the subdivider in dedicating a road allowance to the point property.

Kenneth Muscliow, fieldman for the authority, indicated to council that access was necessary so government grants could be obtained to carry out the first stage of development for the site.

Recently the Authority bought the site from the Bruce Matson Estate of Cooksville.

Initially the authority plans to map out nature trails and and make them available for public use. The facilities will be expanded as the public presses for more and improved outdoor accommodation, an authority spokesman told council.

Access to the park and the point was suggested to follow an existing street allowance in the original development. The access has to be 66 feet wide to meet highway department specifications for maintenance costs, it was explained.

October Exports Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Exports rose again last month, reaching $1.54 billion compared with $1.46 billion a year earlier, and showed a nother healthy increase in sales to the United States, Statistics Canada reported today.

The U.S. figure was up 13.1 per cent to $1.07 billion, compared with $946.8 million in October last year.

Sales to all countries for the first 10 months of 1971 now are estimated at $14.64 billion, up 4.7 per cent from $13.90 billion in the same period last year. Sales to the U.S. were up 9.2 per cent to $9.97 billion from $9.13 billion.

Bell Union Rejects Offer

TORONTO (CP) — Bargainers for Bell Canada's 8,000 operators in Ontario and Quebec who staged a wildcat strike last month rejected a wage increase Tuesday suggested by a conciliation board and called for strike votes to begin Saturday.

Mary Lennox, president of the Traffic Employees Association, said results of the strike vote are expected Nov. 17 or 18. Negotiators rejected a $19-a-week increase over 26 months for top rated operators who now earn $104.75.

Nixon Asks That Aid Continue

NEW YORK (Reuter) — President Richard Nixon said Tuesday night the world will be kept more unstable and the dangers of war will greatly increase unless the United States Congress restores the foreign and military aid program killed by the Senate last month.

Speaking at a Republican party campaign dinner, the president warned Americans against any tendency to retreat from their responsibilities in the world.

He said U.S. foreign aid programs are essential for world peace "and if the United States determines that it will disconinue these programs . . . it can only mean that the world will become much more unstable, that the dangers of war will greatly increase, and that the United States no longer will be a world power respected throughout the world."

More at Work But More Idle

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment rose by an estimated 13,000 to 447,000 in October from 434,000 in September despite an unusual October surge of new job openings, Statistics Canada reported today.

The number of workers with jobs rose to 8.25 million from 8.19 million in September, showing a gain of 63,000. It was the biggest October gain in employment in many years. Usually, jobs diminish in October as winter approaches.

The 447,000 unemployed last month represented 5.1 per cent of the total labor as 8.7 million. In September, the unemployment rate was five per cent of the labor force. It was also five per cent in October last year.

The statistics bureau said the underlying trend of unemployment was down. Adjusting the actual figures for seasonal influences, such as the usual fall-off in employment before winter the bureau said the seasonally-adjusted rate of unemployment declined to 4.7 per cent in October from its unusual peak of 7.1 per cent in September.

On the employment side of the picture, Statistics Canada said there was an above-average increase in manufacturing jobs. Transportation, communications and other u t i l i t i e s usually record a drop in employment at this time of year, but this year they held steady.

There were 33,000 more jobs for persons aged 14 to 24, and 32,000 more for women aged 25 and over. There was little change in employment for men 25 and over.

The employment picture in brief, with estimates in thousands:

	Oct. 1971	Sept. 1971	Oct. 1970
Labor force		8,698	8,822 8,412
Employed		8,251	8,186 7,993
Unemployed		447	434 419

The figures are estimates based on a survey of 30,000 households across Canada, measuring the employment picture for the week ended Oct. 16.

A spokesman for Canada Manpower in Belleville said the local office was told some time ago not to give out local statistics "because they vary so greatly they seem to contradict national figures". The spokesman said that the office here has had a very good fall and employment has held strongly".

The actual rate of unemployment rose to 6.6 per cent of the labor force in the Atlantic provinces, from 6.4 per cent in Octo-

Pollution Control

Just How Far Should It Extend?

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment Minister Jack Davis left confusion in his wake in commenting Tuesday about Canada's offshore anti-pollution responsibilities.

In a speech to an international group working on marine pollution Monday, Mr. Davis said each coastal nation has a special duty to perform, an obligation to protect marine life within "a reasonable distance off its shores."

He added his belief that the national duty extends at least to the limits of the continental shelf—about 100 miles off Canada's Pacific Coast and about 400 miles off Newfoundland on the Atlantic side.

Canada now claims 12-mile coastal jurisdiction over fishing and in the Arctic alone, 100 mile jurisdiction over pollution—extensions of its internationally-accepted three-mile territorial limit.

In the Commons Tuesday, opposition MPs expressed the conviction that Mr. Davis also had advocated in his speech extension of Canada's pollution-control zone on Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

Frank Howard (NDP — Skeena) asked MPs to instruct the Commons environmental committee to co-operate with Mr. Davis in studying the need to extend Canada's jurisdiction seaward over the continental shelves. Government MPs denied consent.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked whether Mr. Davis had been expressing government policy "when he suggested that Canada will extend our pollution-control zone."

Prime Minister Trudeau said Mr. Davis had not said that.

Mr. Davis said later that in his speech he had been referring to a matter of self-defence or self-protection Canada might have to invoke in the event of such an emergency as a tanker breaking up outside Canadian territorial limits. In such a case, Canada would have to act in the best interests of all countries by dealing with the situation. He was sure such action would only be taken not just on his say—so but with "the support of the government as a whole."

Mr. Davis appeared to be making the point that Canada does not want to extend its pollution jurisdiction as clearly as in the Arctic, but in emergencies it would act beyond its jurisdiction.

Arctic Icebreaker's Cost Is $100 Million

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The cost of maintaining Canadian sovereignty in the Arctic must begin with $100 million for a huge icebreaker, a former Canadian icebreaker captain said Tuesday.

T. C. Pullen, retired captain of the icebreaker Labrador and Canada's representative aboard the United States supertanker Manhattan when it made a passage through the northern ice, said present ships are incapable of the job.

Canada's newest and most-powerful icebreaker, the 24,000-horsepower St. Laurent, can venture into the Arctic only in the summer, Mr. Pullen said. It has been unable to cope with ice four feet thick.

The Manhattan, however, broke through ice 15 feet thick, he told about 1,200 members of the Canadian Club.

Queen Victoria Program Too Popular to Handle

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Queen Victoria's community school program is suffering from success.

Its teen activities program has grown so large the threat of cancellation hung over it last night.

But a stop-gap measure will be tried, using money accumulated by the community group from fees charged for other activities at the school.

At a meeting last night of community school staff, neighborhood leaders and city recreation department staff, it was decided to hire a supervisor for the program.

He will be employed for 15 nights between now and Christmas to supervise the teenagers and help them plan programs.

"We have a tiger by the tail," said Queen Victoria's principal Donald Lockyer in outlining the teen activities situation.

Since the community school program began, the basement of the building has been open to teenagers Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, about 15 to 25 teenagers from the school neighborhood took part in sports activities three nights a week.

But this fall, the numbers have been growing until there are now too many for the facilities at supervision available. From an average of about 15, the nightly attendance soared to 47 and finally to 66 last night. There was one incident of theft, one picture frames and a pulled fire alarm.

"These kids are not bad," Mr. Lockyer told the group last night. "But put that many together without proper programming and . . ."

The hiring of a permanent, paid teen activities supervisor is a board of education and recreation department decision, said Mr. Lockyer, "but we can't wait until the school board makes a decision, because in the meantime all hell could break loose in here."

Concern of the community school steering group centred on two aspects of the problem: "What do we do tomorrow night?" and "What are the long term solutions?"

Martin Bond, a Queen Victoria teacher who has taken charge of the teen activities on a temporary basis, offered to continue his supervision until the leader hired by the community school group takes over.

Ultimately, said city recreation director Lorne Williams, he would recommend that the city be divided into eight community school areas with a trained recreation leader in each.

The extra teenagers coming to Queen Victoria for evening sports are from outside the school neighborhood, Mr. Lockyer told the group. They are students from Moira and Quinte Secondary schools.

Several community leaders suggested that the police clampdown on east end pizza loitering has driven the young people to Queen Victoria.

"Where are the other principals? Can they offer some supervision?" asked a resident from the community organization.

"This is why the high schools don't have programs like this; they know how hard they are to handle," retorted another woman.

Mr. Lockyer said that during an informal poll he had taken at the door of the school, the Moira students complained that their school "is locked up tight, there's no one there but the janitor."

"This is a tremendous opportunity for other schools to get into this program," commented community leader Kurt Heydick.

"What has happened at Queen Vic has caused politicians to come to grips with many community issues," concluded Mr. Lockyer.

Librarians Like Expansion

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

Corby Public Library wants to keep up with the times while planning for the future, as it anticipates a two-story addition to the Pinnacle St. main branch.

Now in the hands of the city manager, the proposed extension will range in floor area between 6,659 and 8,265 square feet depending on which of three submitted plans is accepted. The library board, headed by chairman Merritt Hackett, is pressing for the largest available area but would be willing to scale down its plans if financing is not available.

The greatest need for space, says chief librarian Olive Delaney, results from the annual growth of juvenile collections. Each year, the library adds more periodicals (magazines, journals and such), films, newspapers and catalogues, not to mention books. "And every time you receive a new encyclopedia, it requires a complete book shelf," notes Miss Delaney.

The library currently houses more than 100,000 books and with a budget of $53,000 per year plus contributions from the regional library system, adds another 1,500 to 2,000 annually. In addition, there are about 75 magazine subscriptions with which to contend and the number of items in the film department is rapidly approaching 3,000.

Visitors to the main reading room in the circulation department are finding less space to sit down as crowded shelves occupy most of the available floor area. The storage room, which ideally should house only rare or little-used volumes, now is divided among the film department, the repair staff and a dozen overflowing, cramped bookcases.

With the new extension, provision would be made to house all the library departments adequately while at the same time preserving room for future growth.

One aspect of the proposed plan is a second - story addition which is also intended to double as an art gallery. Miss Delaney feels such a hall is "part of the modern concept of a 'library'" and points out that many successful associations and exhibits have been held in the basement of the present building.

Explaining the community's need for such a structure, she noted that meetings often placed a strain on the basement, with a capacity of only 80 persons. The new hall would seat at least 150 persons.

She also commented: "there is no place in the central city for art exhibitions. Only Loyalist College offers acceptable facilities in the area." The library has, on occasion, displayed paintings on loan from the Art Gallery of Ontario and Monday night, became an exhibit by the Belleville Art Association.

If a new hall is provided, the old one will be occupied by the film library and meeting shop. This will leave the storage room free for stacking books and magazines.

The over-all scheme will also encompass new reference room facilities, a separate cubicle for microfilm users and individual access to the Xerox copier.

"Among the innovations we would like to set up are Canadiana archives," said Miss Delaney. "They would house rare books for separate study in a glass - enclosed area." Most of the volumes which would comprise the collection are now on open shelves. Several have been tampered with, some having whole pages removed.

Besides the auditorium, the second floor will also provide office space for library workers engaged in bookkeeping, ordering, cataloguing, typing and secretarial duties. At the moment, a couple of these offices occupy a converted hallway and most are strewn with the overflow of books and papers.

One criticism of the proposed extension is that there is also a need for a separate branch of the library in the western part of the city. But Miss Delaney explains that, among other reasons, Belleville's population does not warrant such a move.

"The northwestern part of the city has grown more than the library expected when it established a new western branch. Now, because of the growth of the area by the CN tracks, two branches would be required.

"This also means that large service facilities would be needed at the main library," she added. The Pinnacle St. building would be responsible for ordering, cataloguing and maintaining all books in a new branch, just as it does for the present East Hill branch at Victoria and Farley Avenue.

The library board committee has noted that no other city in Ontario with a population of under 50,000 has library branches. West Hill structures are the logical next step following an extension to the main branch, however.

The third floor of the original Campbell and Pinnacle building is now vacant but, unfortunately, is not fit for use according to Miss Delaney. It could not support the weight of books and at one time was sagging badly enough to cause the director of public library service for Ontario to comment that it should be removed before it fell off. Even if it were restored, it would be too small and, without the addition of elevators, inaccessible to both staff and visitors.

The library currently employs 13 full - time workers and 10 part - timers, plus Delaney foresees no immediate requirements for a staff increase in the event of the extension plan being accepted.

Donated along with the surrounding land by Senator Harry Corby in 1908, the original three - story stone structure was erected by the Merchant's Bank of Canada and, at one time, housed both banking offices and apartments for company officials. A $100,000 single - story addition was constructed in 1959 and nine years later, an upper floor children's section was added at a cost of $33,000.

The East Hill branch opened in June 1964.

The city's 1972 capital works budget includes $100,000 for construction of either a new library branch or extension. The possibility of financial assistance from the government winter works program will also be explored to enable the project to get off to an early start — if approved. The library report will be handed down at the next city council meeting.

Spray Painter Loose Last Night

More than half a dozen cars and a building were attacked by thieves and vandals last night, police report.

Janette Worrell, of 645 Bridge Street east, discovered her car, parked at 4 Front Street parking lot, between 8.15 and 11.15 p.m. yesterday, had been broken into during her absence. Dishware and glassware, valued at $37, was stolen.

When W. E. Potts of 71 Hastings Drive returned to his car parked at BCI last night, he found an informal artist had been at work with orange paint. However, the paint was still wet. The owner was able to remove it before any damage was done.

Similar paint had been used to decorate a Finkle Electric Company panel truck. City police officers discovered the vehicle at 1.50 a.m. today. Its windows has been painted over with obscene language.

Several cars in the vicinity had also been "artistically" decorated.

Cars and a building at the rear of Front Street were likewise adorned.

Seven city parking meters Police Chief Douglas Crosbie referred to the damage as having been done by "somebody with an odd sense of humor".

Jobs Rise

her and 5.1 per cent a year earlier.

It declined in Quebec, to 6.7 per cent from 8.8 per cent, both September this year and October last year.

But there was higher unemployment in Ontario, the Prairies, and British Columbia. The Ontario rate rose to 4.1 per cent from 4.1 in September and 3.4 in October last year.

It rose to 3.8 per cent in the Prairies from 3.3 in September and 3.5 in October last year. And in British Columbia it rose to 5.7 per cent from 5.5 in September. The CA rate was a high 7.9 per cent of the province's labor force in October last year.

Country-wide, the higher unemployment was made up entirely by women aged 25 and over. Their numbers increased by 20,000, while there was a decline of approximately 3,000 in the number of 25-and-over men who were unemployed, and a 5,000 decline in the number of unemployed teen-agers — a young people of both sexes up to age 25.

The figures are not exact because they are estimates.

They do not include the armed forces, people living in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, or Indians on reserves. People who are on strike or laid off temporarily during the survey week are counted as unemployed.

The figures on employment do not include housewives at home, or students at school full-time. But if they were looking for work and had not find it, they were counted as unemployed.

Is There Someone Out There?

Things Go Blink In the Night

Wilkie Orr is seeing some strange sights these nights from his apartment window.

The 70-year-old Wilkie lives at 203½ Front Street — at the corner of Victoria Avenue, and the sights are in the skies.

They are two pulsating lights, gold in color, at high southeast altitudes.

The objects move back and forth, one may disappear and reappear, says Wilkie, who says one night he watched them for two hours.

He's convinced they're not aircraft — perhaps from CFB Trenton — because of the high altitudes and quick movement of the objects.

Neither does he necessarily believe they're UFOs — Unidentified Flying Objects, official term for what's commonly called Flying Saucers.

"I'm from Missouri — you must show me," says Wilkie, who also admits to an interest in the occult and things psychic.

"Maybe it's strange aircraft that we have — or other country for that matter."

Today, an official at CFB Trenton said no UFO reports had been monitored at the base recently, although aircraft from there had been doing much night-flying of late.

Pioneer Family Burial Plots Get Attention

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Burial grounds may scarcely be considered romantic spots.

Yet, in the Quinte district, there are such plots — perhaps more than are obvious — that are an inevitable part of a colorful past.

Now, apparently, the Ontario government is prompting action that may relieve such spots and place them in their due perspective.

Involved are plots of ground years ago set apart on pioneer homesteads as family cemeteries. But time — and ownerships — change or cease and so do the contours of such solemn little lots.

Headstones may be in disarray and plots grown shaggy with brush. Nonetheless, they include the homely resting places of many an early settler. As such, they are a link with the raven days of settlement when the modern outlines of the Quinte landscape were being born from wilderness.

"I've no idea just how many such cemeteries there'd be — but there may be many, many of them (in the Quinte district)," says William P. Anselstine.

Mr. Anselstine is an inspector with the cemeteries branch of the Department of Financial and Commercial Affairs, which administers the Cemeteries Act which governs jurisdictions of burial grounds in the province.

His specific territory is Hastings County and his labors since starting work in the district last October include seeking action on such small burial plots.

Such plots are township councils, which, under legislation are obligated to take over. Some such areas where ownerships may have lapsed and families died out or departed.

Admitting it's "quite an involved procedure," Mr. Anselstine has been visiting township councils in Hastings to impress the need for action on local governments.

Where the need applies councils may take over such small plots under bylaw and maintain them as closely as possible to their original layout. Or a memorial cairn may be erected marking the spot and the headstones collected about it.

This last measure is among the more popular since it makes maintenance easier.

Such plots are "part of the heritage of the area," he feels.

With 34 townships involved in Hastings County alone, Mr. Anselstine has still to carry the message to some councils.

One township he already has visited — and which possesses at least one prime display example of the situation is Thurlow township.

In the farm now owned by Harold Rupert, on the township's third concession, east of Highway 37, is such a burial plot.

There's another on the township's eighth concession, which was tended by a neighbor until his death, believes Mr. Anselstine.

The plot on the Rupert property is now atop on the north rim of a surfaced, well-traveled roadway.

Traffic scurries by regularly and it can't be reliably said that the little plot attracts enough attention to halt motorists.

Yet, it is the resting place of original Quinte settlers.

Mr. Rupert says both Richard Bedell who died in 1848 and Daniel Bedell, who died in 1857, were the original Crown grant holders on the property. Their names are among those in the plot as the ownership of the family name changed.

The plot, less than a quarter acre, is cared for by the Ruperts — recently Harold and his sons tidied it up while the township erected a fence along its frontage, says Mr. Rupert.

It was part of a promise he made to a former holder of the land — a Jonathan Elliott — should it ever come into Rupert possession, he says.

"I told him we would keep it up as long as I was around and my sons were around," recalls Mr. Rupert.

He also feels it's a matter of pride of heritage — as spruces enough attention to halt motorists.

Township clerk Clare Horton agrees such plots should be kept in order and they are part of local traditions.

The township already has been asked to pass the necessary enabling maintenance bylaw.

"I think it's a good idea to take it over," he said.

Norris Whitney, who served on the legislature's select committee on cemeteries — he was Conservative MPP for Prince Edward - Lennox — is the provincial government's "very much in favor of trying to preserve" such areas.

However, unless totally abandoned or discontinued, a variety of snags can often arise from surviving relatives, or if different religious sects are involved, Mr. Whitney noted.

Also, in some cases it might be better to encourage a local organization to assume maintenance rather than have a municipality become involved.

Local governments should take on the task "as a last resort, rather than the first resort," said Mr. Whitney.

Two Drowned, One Missing At Baptiste Lake

BANCROFT (Staff) — A father and son are dead and a third male member of their family missing as the result of a boating mishap yesterday morning on Baptiste Lake, seven miles northwest of here.

At 10.40 a.m., hunter Carl Young of Bowmanville discovered the body of 13-year-old Irvin Funk of RR1, Bancroft floating on the surface of the lake.

The body of his father Ernest Leroy Funk, 35, was found on the shore of the lake two hours later b yDiancroft detachment OPP officers Corporal S. D. Fergusson and Constable R. J. Goddard, of Belleville and Ontario Lands and Forests technicians Murray Foster and John Cameron.

Police report the boy had begged to accompany his father and uncle into the bush rather than attend school.

OPP divers today resumed their search for the missing body of Bert Funk, 37, and Simcoe Street, Lindsay, and the boat in which the trio had been crossing the lake.

Ernest Funk had been working for Ontario Hydro, clearing brush on the shores of the lake.

Dr. H. S. Johnson of Bancroft, is acting as coroner in the case.

Pinched Cord Started Fire

Belleville fire inspectors yesterday discovered a television cord "wedged in the wall" behind a pool table in the basement of 141 George Street.

Shortly before 8 am., yesterday, John Hart woke up to the smell of smoke and the sound of a short - circuited doorbell as flames consumed his basement.

Inspector Paul Stephenson said this morning the sparking cord set fire to curtains above the TV set and a collection of rags and paper on a nearby table.

Mr. and Mrs. Hart and their three boys successfully escaped the fire, which was completely contained in the basement.

The fire, according to the Inspector, could have been smouldering in the basement for several hours before furnace ducts blew out, shooting flames into the adjoining garage.

AOCO Says Shift Cut

The AOCO plant here has cut back from three shifts a day to two for "inventory correction reasons," a spokesman said today.

The plant, formerly operating 24 hours a day, will be reduced to two shifts by the end of this month.

However, said the spokesman, the third shift was never a full one, and "we have substantially more people now than we had two years ago."

Because AOCO has no export market in the United States, the 10 per cent American surtax on dutiable items has not affected it.

Three Hurt In Pileup

TRENTON (Staff) — Two area residents were treated and released from Trenton Memorial Hospital yesterday and another is being kept under observation there today following a two-car pileup just west of the town limits.

Frank Sabatino of 2 Devere Gardens, Trenton and Miss Janice Reid of 34 Fairview Cresc., Trenton, a passenger in the Sabatino vehicle, received minor injuries when the car in which they were traveling on the railway viaduct three miles east of here struck another car driven by Mrs. Allison Auld, 17 Hope St., Brighton.

Mrs. Auld, still in Trenton hospital today, received stomach injuries in the 4:30 mishap in which damage totalled $3,500.

Woman Injured Damage $1,000

PICTON (Staff) — A two-car collision near the intersection of Lansdowne and Paul Streets last night injured a Milford woman and caused combined damages of $1,000 to the vehicles involved.

Mrs. Janice Boogard, 23, Milford, was treated by Dr. F. W. Murphy for facial lacerations sustained when her car collided with a vehicle driven by auctioneer Creighton Carey, 39, RR2, Picton.

Mr. Carr escaped injury. Investigating constable Harry Sisty said each vehicle sustained about $500 damages.

Ontario Has Other Gambling Outlets

Quebec Lottery Produced More Than $25,000,000

By DON O'HEARN

The Quebec Lotteries and Races Board has just reported that Loto-Quebec, the province's continuously-running official lottery, returned $25,670,000 in the 1970-71 fiscal year.

That's a nice piece of change which the provincial government here doesn't cash in on, and we salute it, whether it won't move in on the field.

One would say the chances are that it won't.

Only a few years ago this would have been because the government would have been afraid that substantial public opinion would be offended.

Today, while there would be some pockets of anti-gambling opinion left in the province it probably wouldn't be too important a factor.

Much more serious to the government would be that too many people are having too much fun under the present legalised gambling system.

And too many charities large and small, and of assorted interests from separate schools to art galleries, are getting too much money from it.

The still relatively new legalized gambling under which lotteries and bingo are permitted under provincial permit has proven a bonanza to thousands of organizations. And a bonanza not only in raising funds but in giving their workers jobs to do, something which can be a problem with volunteer agencies.

More than 76,000 permits have been issued to date, and this represents uncounted millions of dollars (an estimate hasn't been made yet, according to the department in charge, financial and commercial affairs) and hundreds of thousands of workers.

Any government would think twice about taking over itself and upsetting this operation, and particularly this government, which under Premier Davis we can expect to be particularly sensitive politically.

The possibility of a provincial lottery isn't to be washed out. Actually an appraisal study has been prepared for the government. But the odds would seem to be against it.

If the government is going to get directly into the gambling business a much more likely haven is off-track betting.

Race track interests are concerned about the present semi-hooting private shops because none of the resulting money gets back into the track pools and treasury.

The government has a vested interest because it gets substantial revenue from its take from the pools.

Justice Minister Allan Lawrence has denied any intentions that he, at least, favors a new government lottery.

It would not be surprising if we saw at least a trial system set up next year.

To the moral aspect there is the reply that government shops would monitor pool-thieving.

But of course they wouldn't cut out book-makers. Bets on races on Ontario tracks are only a very minor portion of the business of those book-makers. Football, baseball, hockey and rector at the Ontario tracks give them the bulk of their business.

The government probably would not want in on this kind of business too. And Mr. Lawrence has been looking into it. But it's doubtful if our country collation at least just yet, would go for that.

Political Cleavage

When the Russians had their revolution in 1917 they recently started something. Today the forces of the left are working through global society at every level, manifesting themselves for the most part subtly through "front" organizations, through demonstrations in the streets, and in its most extreme form, through outright violence.

There is a lot of truth in the statement by George Drieidger, president of the Social Credit League. He said in Vancouver last week that leftists and Marxists have taken over every legitimate organization in Canada and are controlling the minds of young people.

Mr. Drieidger accused young people who took part in the anti-Amchitka demonstrations of not knowing what they were protesting about. Well, that may be carrying the point to extremes; it might be fairer to say they were playing into the hands of the left-wing elements who have everything to gain from such protests. Then there is the media. There can be no doubt either that Mr. Drieidger is right in saying there is Communist influence in that area too. It might be easily detected for example in the public affairs programming of the CBC. McKenzie Porter, ex-Telegram man now with the fledgling Toronto Sun, noted Friday that "the extent to which the Pierre Berton-Charles Templeton petition (of protest against the nuclear explosion at Amchitka) has been eulogized by newscasters working for rival radio and television stations . . . reflects the alarming width and depth of the penetration of the Toronto broadcasting media by pacifists and left wingers." There is similar influence among university academics.

Left-wing politicking on an international scale however reaches its most extreme level in violence of the kind perpetrated by the FLQ —and currently in the sordid blood-letting in Northern Ireland. There is talk of a North American movement similar to the Provisional wing of the IRA, but Canadians who may be gullible enough to be taken in by these people should realize there is blood on their hands.

As for the FLQ, this organization has become in for a measure of support in a recent hearing in Toronto into the government's invocation of the War Measures Act.

The hearing was told that the gap between rich and poor in the province was growing and the French people of the province were among the most disadvantaged. People were asking whether the FLQ was right. The speaker? Laurier Lapierre, a left-winger.

Another speaker, Gloria Fulton, an executive of the pacifist Voice of Women organization, charged that the War Measures Act achieved a further separation between English Canada and Quebec.

And so it goes. What we see occurring on an international scale, essentially, is the age-old cleavage of class war. That is what it is in Ireland and the guise of religious differences. Similarly it is class war in Quebec. And the target: The so-called Establishment.

There should be no such cleavage of course. This world should be for everyone. The raising of standards of living and of education should be for the benefit of all, regardless of station in life or material goods. As it is, the divisiveness resulting from this polarization is one of the most dangerous factors facing mankind today.

Student Teachers

Teaching is one of the most popular professions with young people and there seems to be no shortage of candidates. So much so that there is a problem finding places for them when it comes to obtaining actual classroom experience.

The Cobourg Sentinel-Star has a feature on two student teachers, John Gaul and Nancy Shurtleff, who are eight others at a two-week classroom stint in Cobourg high schools. They are from McArthur College of Education at Queen's University and because there are so many in training more than 600, Kingston is unable to absorb them all.

Consequently, some students have had to go as far north as Sudbury, with others scattered around the Ottawa area and eastern Ontario. There can be no quarrel with this, for the students are gaining experience not only in the classroom but finding out more about their far-flung native province.

Christmas Stamp

Prominent once again among Christmas postage stamps is another in New Zealand's series depicting replicas of works of the great masters. This year the stamp, even larger than in previous years, is The Holy Night by Marsatta. It shows the Christ child and His mother,

"Say, how is it you're never out sniping, planting bombs, burning, and fighting, O'Rangatan? What are you, some kind of atheist?"

This Truck Driver Is A Lady

From the Cornwall Standard Freeholder

It ceases to be a man's world when truck drivers have to compete with the fairer sex. It also gives you a bit of a shock.

Gisele Tremblay, 35, stands about five-foot-three, has curly blonde hair, wears colorful casual clothing, and smiles a lot. She also drives a 1966, $27,000 diesel transport.

The first time other transport drivers see me at the wheel they hang right out of their windows they're so shocked. And one time when I was driving through Pembroke, the driver of a car in front of me was so amazed that he turned right around in his car — and banged into the guy in front of him."

Another time Miss Tremblay stopped at a service station for lunch and when she got up to leave she discovered that her bill had been paid by the three other male transport drivers.

"I walked over to them and told them I could pay my own bill, that I didn't want their pity. But they just smiled and said they had paid my bill because I was the first lady truck driver they had ever seen and, boy, they hoped they would see more of the same."

Miss Tremblay, from Ottawa, has been driving transports for more than a year now. At the time The Standard-Freeholder interviewed her she was stopped at Jumbo Motor Express Ltd., 843 Sydney St., to refuel. Having started in Toronto Sunday morning she and her cab-mate were destined to be in Moncton, N.B., Monday morning.

"I've always been fascinated by transports. And I've always wanted to drive one. I met an office job once, but I only lasted two weeks. Every time I saw a truck go by I just about went crazy.

"And then, one day, I saw two ladies with lady drivers. I followed them, found out who they worked for, and wrote the guy the same day. A few days later I got a reply."

The "guy" Miss Tremblay wrote to was Clay Hyder of Auburndale, Fla., who has a trucking firm that teaches and employs husband and wife teams as drivers.

Miss Tremblay attended truck driving school in Auburndale for eight weeks, received her licence, and began driving in the United States.

Because she wasn't married she teamed up with another woman and they travelled across the States for about four months.

"But then I was laid off because my partner's husband was at home and he was a bit irate at not having his wife around. Since all the other drivers were husband and wife teams I was partnerless."

Miss Tremblay went to work for Martel Express, a Quebec firm. But she only made three trips for them because "it caused trouble among the dock help."

"All the other transport drivers could load their own trucks, but the dock hands had to help me. I suppose they did not have to but they felt like it. Perhaps if he didn't. They complained and I had to find a new job."

Miss Tremblay has just started to work for Jumbo Motor Express. She just called them.

Driver Caution Urged

Kingston Whig - Standard

"According to the Street and Highway Safety Lighting Bureau in the United States, night travel by automobile is three times more hazardous than day travel, even in periods of reduced traffic flow. Statistics indicate that the fatality rate is 6.3 per cent per 100 million vehicle miles after dark compared to 2.3 per cent during the daytime.

There is a lesson in these statistics — a lesson which applies to all drivers. Alertness, patience and courtesy are essential to safe driving at any time of the year. But caution at the wheel becomes even more important as winter approaches.

Only Small Decline in Price Index

Mixed Views in U.S on Effect of 90-Day Freeze

WASHINGTON (CP) — The 90-day freeze on prices, wages and rents in the United States officially ends next Sunday and, to no one's surprise, there is nothing like a consensus among Americans about either its success or its successor.

The freeze is known as Phase One of President Richard Nixon's turn-about economic program, announced Aug. 15. What follows the freeze, Phase Two, is still being hotly debated as the deadline approaches.

Economists and financial analysts, not to mention politicians are divided on whether the freeze achieved more than a brief, irregular check on the crippling spiral of costs and wages.

Senior officials in the Nixon administration say they are largely satisfied that it worked, at least to the extent that could be expected in three short months.

They point to small declines in the wholesale price index, average salaries, interest rates and other indicators to argue that the new public inflationary psychology in the U.. is being locked.

They take comfort from other indices, notably record automotive sales, to bolster their view that consumer confidence in the economy is on the rise—one of the most important factors in ending the current recession.

And they are confident that without the shock of the freeze, it would have been impossible to institute now a longer-range, more subtle series of controls that should restore the blush of health to the U.S. economy.

Outside the administration, however, there is less complacency.

Unemployment has barely been touched by the freeze. The stock market is sluggish and so are industry's order books. Both, labor and consumer groups complain that prices—particularly in the grocery and clothing stores—have mounted upward while wages were pegged.

Perhaps most significantly, many analysts predict that both prices and wages will climb as soon as restrictions are relaxed. They say that, neither business nor labor really seems to believe the other will exercise restraint and each seeks to protect itself from the others' demands.

It is precisely that habit of anticipating future increases in costs and salaries which the administraton has been so intent on stopping.

One measure of the problems facing the Nixon officials has been conflict in recent days about the size of wage increases to be allowed under Phase Two —whether pre-freeze contracts will be honored and whether firms can impose wages to be paid retroactively.

Treasury Secretary John Connally has clearly indicated that Phase Two will have a much longer life than Phase One's 90 days. It looks to be a fact of life for at least another year.

One more fact of life during the coming year is the campaign for next November's elections.

President Nixon said long ago that the economy, not the war, would be the big issue in 1972. Then he was speaking of the Democrats' ideas for straightening out the economy.

Left with only the splinters of their economic platform, Democratic contenders for the presidency have still not recovered. But given the number of contenders and their ability, Phase Two should prove to be as politically ominous as Phase One has been economically.

Today In History

Nov. 10, 1971 . . . .

The island of Manhattan was formally surrendered to the British by the Dutch 297 years ago today—in 1674. The island formed part of the Dutch colony of New Netherlands. Lying at the mouth of the Hudson River, the island was of strategic importance to the British for control of the Hudson Valley to offer resistance to France whose American holdings then stretched from the St. Lawrence to the Mississippi.

1953—Canada's military base at Soest, Germany, was opened.

1946—Two thousand persons died in an earthquake near Bucharest, Romania.

1918—German Kaiser William II fled to the Netherlands.

1917—The Battle of Passchendaele, during the First World War, was terminated.

1871—Israel Zangwill, Liverpool in central Africa.

1483—Martin Luther was born.

Smallwood Era in Decline

Sherbrooke La Tribune: The Smallwood era is coming to its provincial governments in 1971 struck Newfoundland and did not spare that old fox, Joey Smallwood, Liberal leader of the province for 23 years. . . .

Old Joey feels today the bite of the years. He vanquished. His star has paled appreciably and his government has ceased to believe his repeated promises of "If I do not create 10,000 jobs, I will resign."

More than all their other Canadian cousins, the islanders have groaned in the misery in which they have been driven by haywire policies and chaotic legislation of which the greatest beneficiaries can be found in the entourage of the millionaire premier.

Joey Smallwood and his clique . . . have been compared with the thick fog which covers the island during the year: Their promises are everywhere, masking the problems and hiding the real fishermen. . . .

The Newfoundland elections have proven once again that one cannot govern with simple habits and experience. To administer better in politics, it is necessary that all classes of the population be heard.

The thirst for money and power has themselves badly to constant and useful contact with the electors. That is the lesson Smallwood can get from his defeat.

Merger of Ontario Co-operatives Makes Expansion Possible

By HARRY MUIRALL
Staff Reporter

FOXBORO — Reflecting modern rural trends to larger farm units, one of the Quinte district's larger agricultural services itself has merged into a broader business front.

Foxboro Co-operative which has served rural residents in this area since 1944, has merged with United Co-operatives of Ontario — the 68th such merger of local co-ops into UCO with headquarters at Weston.

"A major reason for the move, said Foxboro Co-op manager Alvin Donaldson is that the co-op was finding it increasingly difficult to provide credit to larger farm accounts, as farmers themselves increase their land holdings to keep pace with modern trends.

To this point the co-op has been carried on as a local business and its 1970 sales equalled $750,000, he said. (By comparison, UCO last year had sales exceeding $130 million.)

The merger broadens its services and permits larger and more varied overhead.

"What it does is give us more buying power," said Mr. Donaldson, "and this is the big advantage."

Such reasons also were among the justifications for the merger proposed to the co-op's membership at a recent meeting in nearby Gilead community hall. (Its directorship, led by president Henry Vaswinkoop — unanimously proposed the move following a review of facts and reasons for a merger.)

Despite last year's steady sales, the unit — its assets are valued at $360,000 — was finding increasing difficulty, because of its size to: Extend credit to larger farm accounts; improve facilities; build new ones; and provide leadership in farm cost control — a major reason for the co-op theory.

"The Foxboro Board wanid to see co-operative services to farmers maintained and broadened to serve as many people as possible in the future," said the formal merger announcement yesterday. "They want to see the services remain in the hands of co-operative members and so, in looking for ways to do these things, they turned to UCO."

UCO itself has been a supplier to Foxboro Co-operative of many goods and services used by patrons in this area.

Corporatively, the merger means Foxboro Co-operative members will receive the same equity in UCO as they hold in the local co-op — akin to a share-for-share business transfer. The Foxboro co-op directors will relinquish their posts, but during the transitional period over the next year, will serve as a "provincial council."

The actual transfer of members' ownership — Foxboro co-op has 371 members — will take place in the next few months although the merger is effective immediately.

All the staff, including Mr. Donaldson, will continue as UCO staff.

Woolworth Expansion Contract Let

TRENTON (Staff) — F. W. Woolworth Co. officials announced Tuesday the company has let the contract for construction of a mammoth addition to the Trenton store.

The company declined to reveal the value of the contract awarded this week to B. D. McDermitt Co. of Montreal. However, an approximate price-tag on the construction will become known when a building permit is issued.

Woolworth sources told The Intelligencer that construction could begin at the Dundas West site within the next two weeks. The company is aiming for a completion date in the spring of 1972.

Announcement of the expansion came earlier this year and the company has been preparing for the new development since that time.

Mayor Duncan McDonald and several councillors expressed delight at hearing the news. The project is in line with council's desire to promote a rejuvenation of the downtown core.

The Woolworth's expansion in Trenton will increase the size of the store from 15,000 to 40,000 square feet.

Lines of merchandise will be greatly expanded and the new department store will house a 70-seat cafeteria-style restaurant.

Bulk of the addition will take place behind the present premises. However, a portion of the expansion will run along Dundas West itself utilizing the former Graham Taxi property.

Canada works when we work together.

The Federal Government is putting 498 million dollars to work, through a series of specific programs, to help create jobs for Canadians. This message is designed to give you program details.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH THE INDIVIDUAL

We're encouraging you to act on your own initiative or through local government, local organizations and service groups to come up with ideas for our Local Initiatives Program. For example, your community may wish to develop services for the handicapped, or elderly, or a day care centre, or a new skating rink, or any number of things that will make your community a better place.

There's also a Training-on-the-Job Program that will work through business and industry to expand opportunities for those who are unemployed or have little work experience.

If you have some basic experience, we've extended the Canada Manpower Training Program to help provide you with additional learning.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY

There's a program of tax incentives or direct payments to employers to encourage them to add trainees to their staffs through the Training-on-the-Job Program. This will help the trainee get work experience that he can use in many jobs.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH THE MUNICIPALITIES

The foundation of all municipal activity is the previously mentioned Local Initiatives Program. This will help you support and spur community projects that will give jobs to people in your community who find themselves unemployed.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH THE PROVINCES

Obviously, the municipal Local Initiatives Program will tie in closely with the Provinces. So will our Special Development Loans Program that will finance new capital works projects. We'll be speeding up mortgage approvals through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to get homes, student housing and sewage treatment projects under way.

We also will be making loans to exhibition commissions, boards and associations to get you working on multi-purpose fair and trade buildings.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH FEDERAL WORKS

On our level, we'll be working to give you more job opportunities on maintenance and improvement activities on Federal buildings; transportation facilities; forest and park projects; and many others.

WHERE IT ALL WORKS TOGETHER

The job starts at your Canada Manpower Centre. For advice and assistance on any of the programs that you feel apply to you or your community, contact your local Canada Manpower Centre. They'll be happy to help you with all the information they have.

When Canadians get involved together, Canada works.

Tourist Bustle Traded For Watch Duty

7157

BANFORD, Me. (AP) — For the seventh consecutive summer, Anna Woodward has watched the tourist bustle of Acadia for a lonely watchtower atop Mount Desa. Now, she spends eight hours a day looking for smoke.

Miss Woodward is the Maine Forestry Department's dwindling corps of fire watchmen. Her Woodward Mountain woods for five, reports them by radio and telephone to keep fire crews on the go, and sometimes helps guide fire fighters to the scene of the blaze.

Her job, she acknowledges, takes a special sort of individual.

"Someone who likes to be where people are and things are going on wouldn't last a week up there," she said, pointing to the 60-foot-high tower with its spectacular views of Mount Washington and the ocean.

"I can either be with people or without them," the York Beach native explains.

Now 38, Miss Woodward took the job in the fall of 1964 at the suggestion of her father, a retired forest ranger. She returned the following April, when the forest fire season began anew.

In addition, Miss Woodward collects data on wind speed, temperatures and rainfall to compute the area forest fire danger.

"On dry weather, you can sight anywhere from one to a couple of dozen smokes," she said. "Possibly five out of that, there might be five fires."

Outfitted in the regulation tan ranger shirt and green trousers, she begins the daily watch at 9 a.m., peering out from the glass-encased tower with its communications equipment, topographical maps and protractors.

While craving the peace and quiet—"you get away from all those tourists"—Miss Woodward says there are times of boredom "when an hour seems like three hours" or "days when that radio doesn't say 'boo.'"

In addition to her salary, the state provides a furnished cottage, where she lives with her pet collie-shepherd, Ginger.

The Pleasure of Helping Others Is Sufficient

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I was reading your talk about the Pleasure of Helping, and it is with joy that I recall all the times I have given help to someone. Helping someone from the heart is certainly a pleasure because it is so nice to have someone help you when you need it.

If everybody would help each other more, without saying, "Well, why should I help them for nothing?" Isn't it true, Doris that we don't buy friends with money?

Love, charity and affection are a gift from God, and they aren't bought in a store — A Believer

Dear Believer: I say amen!

Dear Doris: Just what does one do to stop a neighbor's dog from barking you awake about an hour too early every morning all summer long? Sometimes I have had night, or one of the children is sick and keeps me awake much of the night and I'd like to sleep in in the morning; but no chance.

The neighbor has to get up early to go to work, so and goes the dog. When he is ready to come back in he starts to bark. After about five minutes they take him back in. But how long does an alarm clock have to ring before you are too wide awake to go back to sleep?

I told them once that their dog wakes me up too early in the morning, so they have kept in till later for a couple of days, now it's the same thing over again. Either I have to make an enemy of my neighbor and all his family or continue to be — Slave to a Dog

Dear Slave: I've heard that you can catch more flies with honey than with vinegar. Why not try it? Do something nice for your neighbor.

Dear Doris: I have some of your chicken baking; so perhaps this will help some. I'm also complaining and started talking of others and it worked. Now I'm friends and fun. But there are two parts to my one life.

(1) The other kids that know me before will keep up the old attitude of meanness. (2) I still like to be by myself, so I'll have time to think and I suppose left to sounds, and everyone thinks I'm crazy.

Do you think I'm wrong in trying to prove I'm different now or am I just living in a dream? Is the feeling of wanting to be alone once in a while weird or normal? — A Different Me

Dear Different: You don't live down a past reputation in a day, week, month or year with it. We make new friends, and old ones do change.

There's not a thing wrong with enjoying your own company. If you like to be outside playing ball, horseback riding, trying to take on the world, etc.

Use that solitary time to do something useful; read, meditate; never be timid on those old books. • • •

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONNELL

Should a wife feel guilty about hating housework?

NO, not if she hates housework because it doesn't appeal to her, and she believes she would rather spend her time and energy on something else. Some wives, however, find they detest keeping house because it has been branded "women's work," they complicate the problem because they not only believe they hate housework, but they also feel guilty about the attitude they have taken toward it.

Are first children raised better?

MAYBE not yet in the proper way is differentiate between the relative of "good" and "bad" in the behavior. With the expansion gained with that, that education, parents perhaps are able to raise their second child better than they have. Yet, as many research show, history in all areas of human endeavor is constantly marked by the achievements of forebears or the only child.

Does a topnotch boss have to be ruthless?

NOT indeed a boss who is really of the highest caliber generally is topnotch because he has so many humanistic qualities that he couldn't possibly be ruthless. Sometimes, however, the smart boss encourages the idea that he would fire his entire staff without a qualm. Knowing he is regarded as "tough," he rarely has to worry that anyone would ever test him to see if he is as ruthless as he is claimed to be.

Silver Cross Mothers Honored at Tea

Amid Remembrance Day wreaths and crosses, the Silver Cross Mothers of Belleville and district were served tea Sunday afternoon by the members of the Col. Phay Wills Branch Royal Canadian Legion, in the lounge of the new Legion hall.

Greeting the guests of honor were: the ex-servicewomen president, N. S. Dorothy Howes; Branch 99 president, Jack Rashotie; Argyle Chapter IODE regent Mrs. H. Kokish; Belleville Veterans' committee president, Howard Kokish; president of Branch 99 Ladies Auxiliary, Mrs. C. Selmark with Mrs. G. Fitzgerald, president of the ANAF Ladies Auxiliary.

Rev. Peter Tutt of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, offered opening prayers, with Mrs. Howes expressing the appreciation of the Branch in a poetic tribute to the Silver Cross Mothers, written by herself especially for the occasion.

A regular attendant at the annual tea, Mrs. Elsie Gerry, Toronto president of the British Silver Cross Association was absent due to illness. Mrs. Howes relayed the message from Mrs. Gerry.

Silver Cross Mothers that were able to be present at the tea included: Mrs. I. Holland, Mrs. F. Shomer, Mrs. E. Hall, Mrs. E. Gray, Mrs. W. J. Price, Mrs. Cunningham, Mrs. W. Embury, Mrs. F. Bedell and Mrs. C. D. Tripp, Wellington.

A happy sidelight to the Remembrance Day observance for Mrs. Price, was the return of her Silver Cross which had been lost at the time of Governor General Michener's visit March 1970. Lee Grills MP procured a replacement Cross at the request of the local Legion Branch, when advertising failed to locate the missing medal. In June, 1971, the original was found undamaged by a workman repairing a sidewalk, who turned the Cross over to ANAF officials, who in turn contacted Mrs. Price, hence the happy ending.

'Patterns of Action' Topic

At the October meeting of the University Women's Club of Belleville and District members were both enlightened and inspired by a talk given by Mrs. Lin Elliott of Kingston based on the theme "Patterns of Action."

Mrs. Elliott pointed out that a woman in a wig and false eyelashes criticizing a hirsute youth in blue jeans has neither relevance or world-shattering effects, but all university graduates do owe a debt to society which they can pay by developing effective patterns of action. There is no one way to accomplish things. One may work effectively either as a loner or in a group. Greater sympathy for the other person's point of view and a desire to accomplish things outside one's private life are, of course, essential.

From her own wealth of experience, both private and civic, Mrs. Elliott gave many examples of how people — both individually and in groups — can, and have developed effective patterns of action.

Among the instances cited were: Kingston's 'head start' nursery school, started by a concerned individual; the Elizabeth Fry House — a group effort to fill a social need, the Association of Women Electors — a non-partisan group effort to foster environmental concern and action.

In conclusion Mrs. Elliott noted that concerned citizens must develop useful patterns of action not as alternatives to the democratic process, but rather as a means to make democracy work.

Tainted Blood Dispensed at Hospital

Dear Ann Landers: This last year I was in bed three weeks in the hospital. I considered myself lucky to be alive and not because they gave an anesthetic. They got really sick in the hospital. Every one of those patients had post-operative surgery. The problem came with the blood transfusions. It seems the blood obtained through the hospital (at a terrific price, I might add) was tainted. I wonder what, if anything, can be done about this act of negligence. Don't suggest using the doctor or the hospital. It can't be done out here on the Coast. Give me some practical advice for a change.—Furious in California

Dear Furry: It is not true that on the West Coast, you cannot see a doctor in a hospital "for any reason." Ask any California physician what his malpractice insurance costs. (Surgeons and anesthetists pay the highest rates because they are the most frequently sued.)

As for what can be done to prevent a loved one against tainted blood dispensed in the hospitals there's no simple answer. Sometimes the blood of friends or relatives can be used, but it must be the proper match. If the family can round up enough donors, this could eliminate the necessity of buying blood from the hospital.

Paid donors are sometimes hookers or junkies who are desperate for a fast dollar. The chances of getting an infection from such a donor is, of course, greater than from a relative or friend. And this is an appropriate time to urge my readers to support the American Red Cross Blood Donor Program. The more voluntary donors, the less need to buy blood from addicts who are the greatest hepatitis spreaders of all.

Dear Ann Landers: I learned something from your column that has been a lifesaver. You said a while back that if a person can see the humor in a situation, that him, he had it made.

Well, I've been working for a man for nearly two years and he can't remember my name to save his life. For the first six months he called me by his former secretary's name. Then he got mixed up and called me by the name of another new girl. All of a sudden he began to call me Flora. (My name is Dora.) When I corrected him, he said, "oh, I'm sorry." Now he is calling me Flora and Dora.

I used to feel hurt. Now I just laugh. Thanks for helping me over the hump.—A Rose By Any Other Name.

Dear Rose—I mean Dora, or is it Nora?—Thanks for your letter. The important thing is that he gets the name right on the bottom of the cheque.

Dear Ann Landers: I was engaged recently and my fiance gave me a beautiful (and expensive) diamond. The problem is I do not want to wear the ring until it is insured. The price of the insurance isn't what's bothering me. What I need to know is who pays for the insurance—do I or does he? My fiance says I do. My family says he should. You wouldn't believe the hassles we've had. Please settle it.—Springfield Lovers

Dear Springs: Are you living with your fiance? (These days it's safer to ask.) If you are—the ring should be added to HIS policy. If you are living with your family the ring should be added to your father's policy. If you are living alone or with another girl, YOU should insure the ring. If the ring is not paid for, the jeweller owns it.

The Experts Say

Jewelry Once Status Symbol for Men

TORONTO (CP) — Until about 200 years ago, men wore as much jewelry as women did.

"Men were really the jewelry peacocks in early history," says Alfonso Peres, manager of the new Mappin's jewelry store.

"Men wore wrist and upper arm bracelets, ear-rings, gold pectoral ornaments, rings and necklaces, while ladies of high social rank donned great padded wigs surmounted by diadems.

"Only after the French revolution, when European fashions for men followed the English example of sober attire, did jewelry wearing become a predominantly female custom."

Mr. Peres says the history of jewelry dates back to pre-biblic times. Cave and rock paintings 40,000 years old show men wearing ornaments of mammoth tusk, reindeer horn, amber and lignite.

Historians believe man wore these forms of jewelry because they had a significance in his culture. In later times it took on significance as sentimental mementoes, charms against ill health or evil, and, of course, as a proof of wealth and social distinction.

Mr. Peres says: "Up to 1450, jewels were thought to have the power of protecting men from poison or of curing illnesses if touched or swallowed.

"Diamonds were credited with the power to make men merry, prevent fear of darkness, guarantee marital happiness and neutralize contagion from the worst diseases.

"During this period they were literally diamonds in the rough. They did not really come into their own until 1640 when a method of cutting, providing 32 facets, was developed. From that time on, diamonds assumed first place among gems and became the most fashionable and most desired of jewels.

"Today, diamonds are usually cut with 58 facets."

During the middle ages, the possession of a ruby was thought to make a man good, prevent effervescence in water, help in acquiring lands and titles, soothe temper and protect from seduction. But its powers were cancelled if it was worn on the right-hand side.

"Sapphires, much prized by the ancients, were believed to protect the owner from scorpion bites and to cure internal sores if they were held in the mouth.

"Some people thought the emerald to be a symbol of chastity, others considered it an aphrodisiac. The aquamarine was believed to ensure a happy marriage and was also considered an excellent remedy for liver complaint or toothache.

"Amethyst was believed to prevent drunkenness, topaz would relieve melancholy, Jasper was said to appease faithless love and the amethyst to ward off evil spirits and protect fields from tempests and locusts.

"Many stones, including the opal and emerald, were thought to provide protection against poison."

Women's Institutes

RIVER VALLEY WI

On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Harry Morrow was hostess for the November meeting of the River Valley WI held at her home with 31 members and four visitors in attendance. The guest speaker was Mrs. Lloyd Jones, RN of Shining who gave an informative message on the subject "your heart". She gave a detailed account of the functions of the heart, various diseases, high and low blood pressure and coronary attacks. She said tension causes many heart troubles and should be avoided if possible.

Rest is essential, she continued and women should learn to take life easy. She said that one should not cut out butter, eggs and cheese from the diet unless advised to do so by the doctor. Nutritious meals are very important and Carnation food rules should be followed. Mrs. Jones brought along a number of pamphlets for the women to take home and read.

Mrs. Ross Bush thanked the guest speaker and presented her with a gift on behalf of the Institute.

The delegates to the recent Trent Valley area convention held at Club Canara, Belleville, Mrs. Roy Tucker and Mrs. Vernon Harry gave a report. Mrs. Harry Morrow contributed a piano selection. Mrs. George Grills presided for the business session. The ACWW officer Mrs. Roy Tucker brought a message from the Canadian magazine on the UNESCO gift coupon project to aid Lesotho Homemakers' Association to purchase a Landrover for officers to travel the mountain roads and visit the 6,000 members in the various clubs. River Valley WI decided to purchase two gift coupons valued at 10 dollars. ACWW urgently appeals to all branches for support.

A committee was appointed to arrange the banquet for the Legion banquet at a later date.

The link secretary Mrs. Percy Macmillan reported that 46 individual gifts sent to River Valley's Link WI, Abbots Leigh in England, had been received. She read a letter of thanks from Mrs. E. Cousins the Abbots Leigh WI secretary.

The senior training classes are convening on Monday nights in November at the centre. The theme is sewing with knits.

After the usual business was conducted, a social hour was enjoyed by all. Refreshments were provided by E. Tucker, Alta Carr and Bessie Bush. They were thanked by Mrs. S. McIntosh.

Main Dish Souffle Is A Luxury Fare

By ALICE DENBOFF

More people are entertaining at home these days—and looking for impressive dishes to serve that are not only relatively uncomplicated, but also inexpensive.

A main dish souffle, which is looked upon as luxury fare, can generally be put together with pantry staples. Press it up with canned mushrooms and there you have a delicacy. Really, you don't have to be a gastronomic genius to whip up a creditable souffle. Try:

SIMPLY GOOD MUSHROOM SALMON SOUFFLE

1 can (8 or 9 ounces) or 2 cans (3 to 4 ounces each) sliced mushrooms
1 can (1 pound) pink salmon
1 can (10¾ ounces) condensed cream of celery soup
6 eggs, separated

Thoroughly drain mushrooms and salmon; flake salmon.

Heat undiluted soup in saucepan over low heat until it simmers, stirring frequently. Remove from heat.

Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored, then stir a little hot soup into beaten egg yolks, then slowly stir this mixture back into the soup.

Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold egg whites and mushrooms into soup mixture, gently but thoroughly.

Place salmon in ungreased two-quart casserole or souffle dish. Pour souffle mixture over salmon; bake in 350 degrees F. oven one hour. Serve at once. Serves six.

MUSHROOM SALMON SOUFFLE, a joy for even a novice, uses "convenience". Name and is satisfying and elegant.

PARMESAN MUSHROOM SOUFFLE

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 tablespoons flour
¾ cans (3 or 4 ounces each) chopped mushrooms
Milk
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
4 eggs, separated
¼ cup chopped parsley

Melt butter in medium saucepan. Blend in flour and stir over low heat for two minutes. Remove from heat.

Drain liquid from mushrooms into measuring cup; add milk to make one cup. Stir into flour mixture and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Remove from heat. Stir in salt, pepper, nutmeg and cheese. Beat in egg yolks, stir in mushrooms and parsley.

In another bowl, beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Fold into mushroom mixture. Pour into buttered one-quart souffle dish. Bake at 275 degrees F. 30 minutes or until skewer or cake tester inserted in centre comes out clean.

Serves six.

If you're pressed for time, as a souffle is out of the question, you can whip up a delicious quick scramble, any old time. Anyway there's nothing quite as compatible as mushrooms and eggs any which way you prepare 'em. So here's a tangy, tasty, elegant quickie:

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

Today, instead of yellow lines will separate traffic flowing in opposite directions on Ontario highways next year, to conform with standards being adopted by most provinces and the states in North America. White lines will still be used to separate traffic moving in the same direction.

The changeover to the 100 miles long Trans-Canada highway system will be most apparent and obvious, but approximately one year is anticipated.

On two-lane highways the centre line will be yellow and pavement edge lines will be white. On multi-lane undivided highways the centre line will be yellow and lane markings and pavement edge lines will be white.

Basically, yellow lines will separate traffic flowing in opposite directions; white lines separate traffic moving in the same direction; solid yellow lines indicate passing is not allowed and solid white lines indicate that lane-changing is not allowed.

Painting pavement markings on the provincial highway system cost approximately $1.5 million per year and requires more than 200,000 gallons of paint plus 1,250,00 pounds of minute glass beads to provide reflection. Under the new system of pavement markings no additional costs are anticipated.

Next to money-madness and constant worry, noise pollution ranks well up among sources of strain and tension which threaten the mental health of modern man. We are gradually being separated from both sanity and civility by a steadily rising wall of useless sound; a barrier of ravening noises from which escape is peace and tranquility seems ever harder to accomplish.

Autos rate well behind the major causes of noise in an urban setting. They're not totally blameless of course. Major causes of noise pollution are construction work, heavy industry and widespread use of mechanical equipment such as power mowers. Airplanes, trains, trucks and motorcycles are also major offenders.

Traffic noise has been bothering people for a long time. One of the earliest attempts to control this nuisance was recorded in the Times of London Sept. 11, 1828. The newspaper reported that police officers seized the horses of a stagecoach because Lord Mayor complained of the disturbance and noise.

Garmisch-Partenkirchen — Munich may be the host city for the 1972 Summer Olympics but Garmisch-Partenkirchen, nestled in the foothills of the Bavarian Alps, is probably the city most tourists will remember for the games are over.

Ticketholders to the quadrennial sporting event will be housed in the upper Bavarian resort area of which Garmisch-Partenkirchen is the centre. Transportation from the lodging areas to the Olympic centre in Munich will generally be by train, but many visitors may find themselves reluctant to leave Garmisch-Partenkirchen at all. Even the village has a host of attractions all its own.

The village is surrounded by breathtaking mountain, including the Zugspitze, highest peak (9,721 ft.) in Germany. And they are all easily accessible by a network of nine cable cars.

While at the summit, the tourists can stroll into Austria — there's a border station with passport checks and all, though it is mostly for the benefit of tourists — sip wine and gauff boar at the restaurant with one of the best views in the world, and then take the cable car ride down the opposite side of the mountain to Ehlen, 6,000 feet below.

Although the mountains remain the biggest draw in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, the area provides a host of other attractions. There's ice-skating, winter and summer, at the Olympic Ice Stadium — the city was host to the 1936 Winter Olympics — comic presentations at the Peasant's Theatre, horse-drawn carriages for trips to Partnach Gorge, concerts in the park by the Municipal Symphony, a folk's art school and a host of other attractions — not to mention the beauty of the town itself, with its houses adorned with mythological paintings and the people dressed in native Bavarian costume.

As the commercial jingle suggests, visitors to Mexico City can double their pleasure, double their fun by devoting part of their trip to exploring surrounding attractions. There are numerous historical and tourist sites all within a half-day's drive from Mexico City; colonial churches, Indian markets, ancient pyramids and archeological sites, silver centres, historic monuments and resort towns.

Daks Make Last Drop

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton's search and rescue Dakotas went into retirement Tuesday in a brief ceremony at 424 Squadron.

The planes, backbone of most life-saving rescue missions conducted by the military during the 60s, went out of service at 11 a.m. when Lt.-Col. A. G. Tegart, the squadron commander, signed the retirement papers before CFB Trenton base commander, Col W. G. Paisley.

Earlier in the morning, teams of 424 parasevers jumped onto the Trenton tarmac in a final display of Dakota rescue expertise.

With the retirement, the controversial Twin Otter takes over the search and rescue role here. Canadian Forces' spokesmen had indicated earlier that the Otter would not go into service until suitable alterations have been made to provide the plane with a paradrop capacity.

However, it was learned today plans call for aircraft other than the Twin Otter to fill the pararescue role until the new planes have been fitted with proper equipment for pararescue work. The Otter is expected to be ready for this within the next few weeks.

No count is available on the number of lives saved by the Trenton Daks but many individuals are alive and well today because the old Dakotas went to their rescue during emergencies.

Piper Must Call Tune

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientific research is one area where he who pays the piper must never call the tune, suggests Canada's Nobel laureate Dr. Gerhard Herzberg.

"It would be fortunate if the award to me would help to make the public understand that you cannot try to direct pure research from the outside," he told a press conference Tuesday on his return here.

The 67-year-old physicist was on a lecture tour in the Soviet Union when informed Nov. 5 of the award of the Nobel prize in chemistry.

He received the prize in Stockholm Dec. 10 and delivers an address Dec. 11.

He was questioned at a news conference about his public advocacy of strong government financial support for pure research which has brought him into conflict with the Senate science policy committee.

The committee's first report last year suggested that Canada never derived full benefit from research spending because millions were devoted to pure research "without sufficient effort to harness science to specific problems of the day or to the production of new products and services."

Dr. Herzberg said the Senate committee "might have done real service" had it stuck to investigating how much money should be devoted by the government to research.

But it had gone beyond that and didn't even ask the opinions of the top scientists of the country on this matter."

Dr. Herzberg said he has no formula to determine how much public money should go to fundamental research. Government must make that decision.

Once having made it, "they should not say about prescribing what in the area of pure science the scientists should do."

He had been led by the suggestion of a colleague into his own prize-winning field of mapping the shape and structure of molecules through light emission or absorption.

How did that differ from a government asking him to investigate that area?

"A world of difference. No laymen would even have the knowledge to ask that question. Only the scientists themselves can ask the right questions. That applies to some extent in the field of applied science as well."

Dr. Herzberg said he can foresee the possibility that governments may have to limit research at some time into such things as genetic manipulation, the deliberate alteration of the characteristics of living organisms by changing the genes which bear the hereditary characteristics.

The use of scientific knowledge to produce test tube babies was one example.

The decision to stop such efforts "is a hard one and must be made jointly by the scientists and the public."

Dr. Herzberg will receive about $80,000 prize money when he is handed his Nobel medal. What would he do with it?

"I'm trying to get a new lawnmower that is noiseless."

Last CP Liner Laying Up

LONDON (CP) — Canadian Pacific announced Tuesday it is withdrawing its 25,800-ton passenger liner Empress of Canada from both transatlantic and cruise service, effective Nov. 23, ending 39 years of passenger service.

The liner, which made its maiden voyage from Liverpool to Montreal in April 1961, is the company's last ocean passenger ship.

It will be withdrawn from service at Liverpool following its final scheduled transatlantic voyage from Montreal.

W. J. Stenason, vice-president, passenger and ships, said intensified air charter competition, sharply reduced air fares on international routes, devaluation of the United States dollar and rapidly increasing expenses affected the decision.

He cited figures showing that the number of passengers travelling by sea between the United Kingdom and Canada dropped to 23,722 in 1970, from 98,000 in 1960.

Assiniboia According to Lang

Election Too Complicated to Reflect Any Single Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — After the results of the Assiniboia byelection had become clear that the Liberal candidate was in last place—Manpower Minister Otto Lang came to his office door, smiled, and said:

"Sure, I'll be glad to say a few words about it."

You would have expected him to be in deep depression, if not a towering rage.

He had just spent weeks criss-crossing the riding, speaking, explaining, prodding and organizing—putting more effort into that byelection than the entire federal cabinet combined.

In retrospect, it seemed to be another of those seemingly impossible assignments given Mr. Lang since he clawed his way out of law school and into the federal cabinet in 1968.

He's had responsibility for water resources when conservationists began screaming in the ears of government; he was presented with the Canadian wheat board when farmers were facing bankruptcy, and he was put in charge of manpower when unemployment was soaring to a 10-year high.

Bombarded with an inherent inability to chart smooth courses for himself through Common debates and anecdotes, all of this has given the 39-year-old former Rhodes scholar a rough, four years in Ottawa.

Now, on byelection night Monday when he should have appeared exhausted from a murderous campaign schedule, the quiet-voiced, studious cabinet minister was patiently explaining what went wrong.

"It's too complicated to reflect on any single specific issue," he was saying. "But it does show that we still have quite a job to do in explaining what our policies are."

Yes, there was an anti-Trudeau sentiment he had to deal with. And this was whipped up by opposition speakers, who don't agree that "Mr. Trudeau is one of the best prime ministers Canada has ever had."

Everyone else did around Mr. Lang to learn his explanations, because with his intense involvement in the campaign the impression was created that it was his personal fight.

What was often overlooked was that he was slugging Assiniboia, on behalf of Liberal Jim Hooker, against the heaviest artillery the other parties could muster.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis, his prairie MPs and many provincial cabinet ministers were there to help the NDP candidate, who won. Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, former leader John Diefenbaker, and former agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton let a powerful battery of campaigners for that party.

And after getting only a smattering of help from his cabinet colleagues, Mr. Lang was to return to Ottawa exhausted, while at least one fairly senior Liberal was saying, "Otto blew it."

Fortunately for him, Mr. Lang doesn't easily depress.

After 18 years dabbling in politics before winning a federal seat, the native of Handel, Sask., has shown a remarkable tendency to recruit cool in the trenches.

His University of Saskatchewan students referred to the quiet, remote professor as "The Iceberg."

When he came to Ottawa in 1968, Mr. Lang was immediately appointed a minister without portfolio—the first Saskatchewan cabinet minister since 1963—and was assigned to work with Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin.

But a year later, after Energy Minister J. J. Greene suffered a heart attack, the sandy-haired, bespectacled young man was given special responsibilities for co-ordinating renewable resources, particularly water.

On the banquet circuit he was outspoken. There is discontent in the West, he told a Hamilton audience in 1969 "and it's not due to imagined wrongs, but to the real problems which are the result of national policies."

He has spoken of the organized Canadian businessmen, lawyers, doctors and even labor unions—enjoying "the spoils of the protection of incomes system," while unorganized Canadians—mainly farmers—remain on the outside.

One columnist wrote: "He looks like a side-burned, mild-mannered youthful staffed shirt. Only his Clark Kent put-on. Peel him and there stands a bleeding heart, so revolutionary as to be quite frank in his wish to break the 'system' as it now operates."

Few people agree about Otto Lang. Opposition MPs say he is unnecessarily abrasive in some of his Commons comments; [illegible] Friends say he is shy, generous and has a sense of humor. Liberal colleagues say he is tenacious, refreshingly cool, and a tireless worker.

A columnist in the Edmonton Journal once wrote that "Lang is a friendly fellow, even though a lawyer."

The one thing on which everyone seems to agree is that Mr. Lang has been given more difficult assignments than anyone else in cabinet.

In the fall of 1969, when he became the first cabinet minister ever to have sole responsibility for the wheat board, friends advised him to turn down the offer.

"How could I live with myself if I, as a Saskatchewan minister, refused to spend as much time as I could on the problems of most seriously affecting Saskatchewan right now?"

But he agreed that "the chances of glorious success are not as great as the chances for dismal failure."

It has been a rough road. Within a few months he cracked down on grain hoarders in his own province, and was trading potshots with provincial Liberals.

Former agriculture minister D. B. Mclvor of Saskatchewan said in 1970 that "I hope he will listen to anyone who is practised in this game."

He was involved in the controversial 1970 LIFT program up to his ears. And this program, encouraging farmers to limit wheat crops, took some selling.

He stumped the Prairies to explain what Lower Inventories For Tomorrow meant—a difficult job—and some of those who didn't buy the idea called the minister "Langweed."

When it came to the fight on the now-famous incomes stabilization bill for grain farmers, Mr. Lang was pretty well left by cabinet colleagues to carry the ball inside the Commons and outside.

He travelled constantly trying to explain "the most advanced piece of legislation in some time." But the opposition also was organized and mail, pro and con, poured into Ottawa.

Last month, as court action pended against cabinet ministers for not paying money to farmers under a statute the bill was to replace, the message was withdrawn. It was, sources say, a cabinet decision.

But Mr. Lang seems to be held responsible by those who wanted the bill, and is being blamed, by opponents, for introducing it in the first place.

Foreign Secretary Says Military Danger From Reds Eases

LONDON (CP) — Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home, first earl to give up a title to lead a government, says the military danger from the Communist East has eased and that the Soviet Union will slowly increase its co-operation with the West.

He says also that Britain's relations with South Africa are "very close" and that it will be "a matter of regret" if Britain is unable to reach a settlement with Ian Smith over the Rhodesian deadlock.

Closer to home, Sir Alec suggests that Canadian youth probably favor the way the modern Commonwealth has developed into a political forum and he believes that Britain's presence in Europe will serve Canada's interests best.

"Power talks," the former Earl of Home said in an interview in his spacious but draughty office. "What we want to be is a warm friend and useful ally. Power and influence spring from economic strength."

Reviewing 49 years of politics, Sir Alec maintained that Canada was never keen in the 1932 Ottawa agreements which unified Commonwealth tariff preferences. The old dream of Commonwealth association has changed partly through erosion of the preferences, a process which he considers "fine" the old Commonwealth did turned from an economic to a political club, a useful forum for gathering ideas but unable to act as the old Commonwealth did.

Now 68, and perhaps nearing the final episode in his long political career, Sir Alec embarks Sunday on a personal attempt to break the six-year Rhodesian deadlock, hoping to persuade Smith in week-long Salisbury talks to agree to principles that would ensure eventual political power for the majority blacks.

"I do not underestimate the difficulty of the task," he told the House of Commons Tuesday. "But if there is a will to succeed on both sides, there are grounds for hope."

In the interview, Sir Alec said he is not looking on a Rhodesian settlement as a subject for rounding off his career. He had no plans for early retirement but would continue in office as long as Prime Minister Heath wants him.

"I've always done what I'm told in politics," he said, but "within reason," he added with a chuckle.

"There obviously comes a time when a man has to retire but I don't think about that at the moment."

He wanted a settlement with Rhodesia "on its merits," consistent with the five principles on which the government insisted, and providing the settlement terms are acceptable to all Rhodesians, black and white.

He had no illusions about the prospect of success but in the public interest he had to make the effort.

He would be "unhappy" if a settlement could not be reached. It would be a matter of regret but he would take the results in his stride.

Duty ranks high in Sir Alec's code. As one of Britain's wealthiest land-owners he would have enjoyed life as a farmer but in 1931, with heavy national unemployment, he felt compelled to become a politician to help resolve the problem seen, he said.

At the time of Munich he was parliamentary private secretary to Neville Chamberlain and he supported the prime minister's appeasement policy. He believes history will judge Chamberlain much more kindly "than is fashionable now." Chamberlain had to go to the edge of appeasement in order to carry the country united into war. The argument, suggested Sir Alec, is whether Chamberlain went over the edge of appeasement.

In 1940 while he was ailing with tuberculosis of the spine, Sir Alec studied foreign affairs intensively and became convinced that when the war ended, the Soviet Union would become a major threat to the West.

More recently he has been in the news by ordering mass expulsion of Russian officials, charging them with spying.

While the West had to continue to remain on its guard, he believed that the Chinese threat on its border will encourage the Soviet Union to seek greater co-operation with the west.

"The Russians do things in their own time," said Sir Alec. "What likely will emerge is a very gradual pattern of improved coexistence."

As for Chinese, it was impossible to forecast how they will act in the United Nations but Sir Alec believed the end to China's isolation removed a "dangerous" situation.

Federal Aid for Private TV Gets Sympathetic Hearing

OTTAWA (CP) — The idea of government financial sabistance for private television is getting a sympathetic hearing in some Ottawa quarters.

Pierre Juneau, chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, hinted in an interview that it is a factor which should be considered in the future of private television.

But he said this is a matter which lies with the government and Parliament and not the CRTC.

Commenting on Mr. Reid's statement, CTV president Murray Chercover said the principle of public assistance is valid but he would prefer an indirect method.

The discussion revolves around the financial health of private television in Canada.

The threat posed to Canadian television by U.S. border stations carried on cable television systems is of continuing CRTC concern.

The commission has said Canadian advertising revenue flows to these U.S. television stations as they attract Canadian viewers through cable TV. This affects the revenue position of the Canadian stations.

Mr. Chercover also has said that CTV is financially hard-pressed to meet such CRTC requirements as increased Canadian content in programming and extension of service to new regions of Canada.

While CTV stations as a group are understood to be making money, some of the smaller network affiliates rely on support from the larger stations to carry on.

Doctor Rewarded

NEW YORK (AP) — A doctor who showed that even moderate hypertension is dangerous and should not be ignored was named winner Tuesday of the 1971 Albert Lasker Award for clinical medical research.

He is Dr. Edward D. Frohlich, senior medical investigator for the Veterans Administration Hospital in Washington, D.C., Dr. Freis demonstrated that drug treatment of moderate hypertension—with blood pressure only slightly elevated above normal—can cut the death rate.

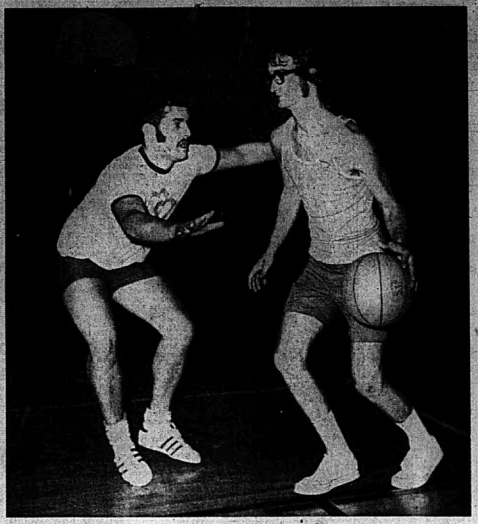
Learn Lessons Well

The Belleville High School Teachers proved to be the fastest learners in the Gas House Hockey League.

Victims of a 5-2 setback to Jim's Pizzeria in their opening encounter, the Teachers redounded with a 5-1 win over Rolling Lumber last night.

Two-goal efforts by Jack Schofield and Brian MacKenzie, coupled with a strong netminding effort by Casey Dolan carried the teachers to the win. The other goaltender for the winners was Vince Steiner, while Bill Nolan counted the lone Rollins marker.

Wilson Concrete parlayed an impressive goaltending performance by Vern Fraser into a 2-1 win over the Mustangs, finalists from last season. A third period goal by defenceman Charlie Rowbotham proved to be the winner after Dave McMaster of Wilsons and the Mustangs' Don Irvine had traded goals.



The Belleville Hospital team performed a 4-2 operation on Wannamaker's Esso with Hyslie Bryant's pair of markers providing the difference. Other scorers for the winners were "Moe" Hunter and Vaughn. For Wannamaker's, Ron Urch and A. Belch were the goal scorers.

The Intelligencer and Cassidy Electric exploded for five goals in the final ten minutes, with the Intell emerging with a 3-2 win.

Dennis Barager, Steve Ling and Floyd Crawford notched the Intell counters, while Grant Hopkins and Dave Hicks scored for the losers.

Barnes Storming

Loyalist guard Ed Goody attempts to evade the defensive efforts of teammate Bruce Barnes in a scrimmage of the varsity Lancers' basketball team at Centennial Secondary School this week. The Lancers will be looking to avenge a pair of exhibition losses when the regular season gets under way this weekend. The Belleville College is one of seven that will be looking towards top honors in the Eastern section of the Ontario College Athletic Association.

Loyalist Hoopsters Not Long on Tradition

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

Tradition is a fine thing in some instances, but it's something that Loyalist basketball coach Mike Dollack would just as soon not establish. At least, he isn't interested in establishing the trend of last season when his Lancers managed only three wins in their entire varsity schedule.

Competing in their first regular season of varsity competition the Belleville school experienced rough going against some of the more established teams in the Ontario College Athletic Association.

While Dollack isn't expecting miracles this season, he is expecting a marked improvement. "I think we have more experience this year," he notes. "Little things that some of the guys couldn't accomplish last season are almost automatic this season because they've played the game more. Last year we only had about one guard who could really handle the ball and this year we have three or four," he continues.

Of the five returning members from last year's varsity, Rick Webster and Terry Tomkins are expected to make the most significant contributions. Both are listed in the starting lineup and Webster has counted 67 points in two exhibition losses to Durham College of Oshawa and Peterborough's Sir Sanford Fleming.

Of the newcomers, guard Hubert Hicks appears to be the most promising. Making up for lack of height with a deft shooting touch Hicks, poured in 27 points in an 85-75 exhibition loss to Durham.

Other team members expected to see starting action this year include Ed Goody, Bruce Barnes, Al Congrove and Rick Goody.

While the Loyalist coach is expecting an improvement, the two exhibition losses have pointed out one glaring weakness. "We have too many turnovers, most of them coming from bad passes," he explains. "It's something we're putting a lot of work on in practice."

Conversely, Dollack has been highly pleased with his team's success from the free throw line so far this year. The Lancers will need all of their fund shooting proficiency intact Friday when they open the regular season against St. Lawrence College of Kingston.

The Kingston College earned a berth in the championship game last season, before bowing to Mohawk College of Hamilton.

Other members of the eastern division, in which Loyalist competes, include Ottawa's Algonquin College, St. Lawrence College of Cornwall, Sir Sandford Fleming, St. Lawrence College of Brockville.

The Lancers' first home stand of their 26-game schedule comes this weekend when they meet St. Lawrence in a return bout at Quinte Secondary School.

Senior Schedule-maker's Smile on Quintes Quickly Turns to Frown

If the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A schedule-maker smiled on Belleville Quintes the first couple of weeks this season, he's glowering at them now.

The Belleville seniors won four of their first six encounters against the bottom runts of the eight-team ledder — Owen Sound, Kingston and Woodstock.

And when the Quintes won their seventh game 3-2 at home against defending Allan Cup champion Galt Hornets, there was dressing room talk of a second or third-place finish.

Three games — and three losses — against Galt (1) and Orillia Terriers (2) later, the Quintes are 5-6 tied with Orillia in fourth spot, and looking home-and-home weekends with league-leading Galt and third-place Barrie in the face.

With the exception of Galt, whose 9 - 3 record indicates they may be in the midst of one of their patented runaways, and Owen Sound (not with five points, no positions are near to being set.

As an example — a Belleville win in Friday night's 9 p.m. Memorial Arena game with Galt could put them as high as second place, depending on the outcome of other league games.

A loss could drop the Quintes to a seventh-place tie.

The Quinte's Booster Club is running a spectator bus to Galt for Saturday night's return game, leaving the Memorial Arena at 3.30. Interested parties should contact Mrs. George Rutledge at 962-6630.

Torre Caps Career

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Torre climaxed an 11-season major league baseball career Tuesday with his selection as the National League's Most Valuable Player.

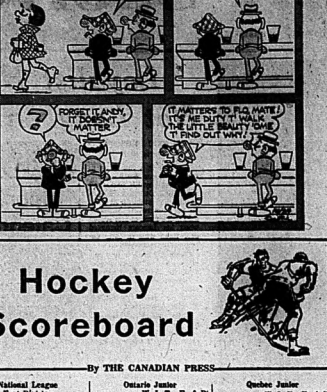
Torre became the third player to win the award in the 20th St. Louis Cardinal to share the honor Stan Musial won three times.

His margin over runner-up Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh Pirates, the majors' home-run king, was 318-223 in balloting points by a committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Torre received 21 of the committee's 24 first-place votes, Stargell pulling the other three. Third place went to Hank Aaron of Atlanta Braves.

Bobby Bonds of San Francisco Giants finished fourth followed by Pittsburgh's Roberto Clemente, Los Angeles Dodgers' Maury Wills and Don Young Award winner, Ferguson Jenkins of Chicago Cubs.

"What hurt Stargell in the voting, I think, was that it was tough to single out a player on Pittsburgh's ball club," the 31-year-old Torre said.



"I never considered this kind of year," said Torre, who batted .363 to lead the majors and had 137 RBI, 230 hits and 352 total bases for other leading marks.

"I've never had this kind of concentration," said Torre, who hit safely in 133 of 161 games in which he played.

An all-star catcher while with Atlanta Braves eight seasons, Torre called his 1968 trade to the Cards while involved in a salary dispute "like being reborn."

"Over in Atlanta they thought I was a home-run hitter," noted Torre, who in 1966 slugged 36 home runs. "I changed when I came over here. A good deal of it had to do with the ball park."

With the Cards, Torre has had RBI totals of 101 in 1969, 100 in 1970 and the 137 of last season, a high total for the club since Johnny Mize equalled the figure in 1937.

Blues' Turn to Hear Boos

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Louis Blues fans are known to be among the most boisterous in the National Hockey League, always ready to boo as loudly as they cheer. But so far this season there has been little to cheer about.

The Blues, a power in the Western Division since joining the NHL and a team which seldom lost on home ice, dropped a 4-1 decision to Pittsburgh Penguins in the only NHL game Tuesday night.

The loss was the eighth in the last 10 games for the Blues and their fifth straight defeat at home.

The Penguins, who had, been in a slump themselves, took advantage of the hapless Blues to break a nine-game winless streak in a game in which 36 minutes in penalties were called and St. Louis defenceman Barclay Plager was ejected in the second period for being the third man in a fight.

NHL Adds Two Teams for 1972

NEW YORK (CP) — The National Hockey League, vigorously pursuing a reputation as North America's fastest-growing spectator sport, has decided to expand to 18 teams in 1972-73 by awarding franchises to nearby Long Island and to Atlanta.

New arenas with 15,000 or more seats for hockey are being built in both places.

The governors of the 14 NHL teams also decided unanimously at a meeting ended early Tuesday to award a further two franchises to start play in 1974-75.

Each of the four new teams will pay a $6 million entrance fee, the same as was charged Vancouver and Buffalo, N.Y., when they came into the league in 1970.

In addition, whoever gets the franchises will be required to pay to indemnify New York Rangers for sharing their territory, which under NHL rules extends 50 miles in all directions from Madison Square Garden. How this compensation will be paid must be worked out between the new teams and the Rangers, who have been asking for $5 million.

NHL president Clarence Campbell, appearing weary after the long hours of debate behind closed and guarded doors, said no decision was reached as to whether the 18 teams in 1972-73 will play in two divisions of eight teams or four divisions of four teams.

"The matter will be considered again at the All-Star meeting Jan. 26 in Minneapolis," Campbell said.

With either setup, a 78-game schedule will be retained, he added.

In the offing is a legal challenge to the NHL's Long Island franchise.

Neil Shayne, who had set his heart on the Nassau County Coliseum as home base for his New York franchise in the new World Hockey Association, scheduled to begin operations next fall, accused the NHL of moving ahead its expansion timetable in order to grab the arena.

"The purpose of the NHL expansion is to keep us out of the Coliseum," said Shayne, a lawyer in Muncie, Ind., IV.

"I intend to pursue vigorously whatever remedies are available to me under United States anti-trust laws."

Shayne already has a suit under way in the New York state Supreme Court charging Nassau County with refusing to negotiate a contract with his group. Among the defendants in that suit are County Executive Ralph Caso and Roy Boe, president of Long Island Sports Enterprises, owner of the New York Nets basketball team with which will play in the Coliseum.

Boe also heads of a group which is the only applicant so far for the NHL franchise on Long Island.

Caso, who appeared with Campbell at the NHL press briefing late Tuesday, expressed delight at the NHL decision to award a Long Island franchise.

"We're going first class all the way," he said of the Coliseum, being built by his municipality at Hempstead.

He added that Nassau County would be happy to negotiate with Shayne's WHA, but not any playing dates that might be open after NHL and American Basketball Association schedules are announced. He thought as many as 40 dates might be available for the WHA.

Campbell said the franchises in Atlanta and Long Island will be awarded by groups acceptable both to the NHL and the principals in the Nassau and Atlanta Coliseums.

Campbell said player drafts to stock the two teams during the league next year will be modified closely on that used in 1970 for Vancouver and Buffalo. Each NHL team will be able to protect 15 players initially, adding one more man to the list as needed list whenever a player is claimed. No team will have more than three players, including goalkeepers. Each new team will get 19 players plus two goaltenders.

Under a special provision, the six NHL teams that lost goalkeepers in the 1970 expansion draft will be exempt from having goalies drafted in 1972. The teams are Montreal, California, Philadelphia and St. Louis.

Atlanta and Long Island will not be required to contribute to the player draft in 1974. Nor will they share in the proceeds of that year's expansion round.

The NHL finance committee has been instructed to receive and review applications for the 1974 expansion franchises.

Campbell said no Canadian city has expressed interest in an NHL franchise since Vancouver was admitted. He said approaches to the NHL have come from Baltimore, Cleveland, Kansas City, Indianapolis, San Diego, Seattle-Portland, Denver and Columbia City, a new community near Washington D.C.

Campbell was at pains to deny what he described as a rumor that Charles O. Finley had asked for permission to move his money-losing Oakland franchise elsewhere.

But the president said Finley had made a proposal that visiting hockey teams share in gate receipts, a practice used in baseball. Finley's California Seals franchise has been plagued by low attendance.

Meanwhile Back At The WHA...

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — A former National Hockey League scoring champion said Tuesday the new World Hockey Association will provide "tremendous opportunities" for players just below NHL calibre.

Gordie Drillon of Saint John, the last member of Toronto Maple Leafs to win the champ onship, said there are many "borderline" players and the WHA will give them "an ideal opportunity" to play professional hockey.

Drillon, who said, there are not enough high-calibre players now to meet the needs of NHL clubs and the WHA will not only be poor in calibre but will eventually weaken the NHL.

EDMONTON (CP) Hundreds of inquiries and applications have been received for tickets to Edmonton games in the newly-formed World Hockey Association, Bill Hunter, who will operate the team, said Tuesday.

He said fans apparently real ize tickets will be in short supply because the club will play its games in the 8,300-seat Edmonton Gardens.

The league plans its first games next October and Hunter says the Edmonton team will hold its training camp in the first week of September. The team, which will probably be named the Oil Kings, will train in Edmonton. Other WHA franchises in Canada at present are in Winnipeg and Calgary.

Toronto Tried For Padres

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says that the Padres of the National League baseball team, will remain in San Diego for an indefinite period.

The paper says that R. Howard Webster, chairman of the Globe and Mail, made two offers this year to purchase the franchise of the West Coast team and bring it to Toronto.

The Padres, an expansion team, have had difficulty attracting fans, and were the only National League club with attendance under one million last season.

Eastern Final Coaches Keep Strategy Quiet

TORONTO (CP) — The two coaches of the teams preparing to meet each other in the first game of the Eastern Football Conference final are strangely silent about the type of strategy they intend to employ.

The two teams, Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tiger-Cats, have resumed workouts for the two-game, total-point series, the first of which will be played Sunday in Hamilton's Ivor Wynne Stadium.

The Argos, waiting since Oct 31 when they played their last regular-season game, started practice in earnest Monday night, while the Tiger-Cats, who knocked off Ottawa Rough Riders in the semi-final last Sunday, resumed workouts Tuesday.

Hamilton coach Al Dorow, refreshingly candid in his comments on rival teams during the season, is not saying how he intends to play the Argos, first-place finishers in the EFC He conceded Tuesday the Toronto team is "pretty solid" when healthy but declined to say what his plans are.

"They are a blitzing team and the ones in on to pick up the blitz," he said, adding that he thinks he has the people to beat their secondary.

Toronto coach Leo Cahill admits the Ticats have improved since mid-season and their offensive line played well Sunday against Ottawa. But he said he prefers to keep the Ticats guessing about his team's strengths and weaknesses.

Some Argonaut players, including running back Leon McQuay, quarterback Greg Barton, flanker Mike Eben and lineman Jim Sillwagen are recovering from injuries.

At least one Hamilton player

ANGELO MOSCA

is convinced that his team, inconsistent most of the season, now is working as a unit

Angelo Mosca, the Ticats' veteran defensive lineman and team captain, told the Hamilton quarterback club Tuesday:

"We started to jell within the last four games. It was difficult to become unified at a team earlier because of the constant changes. We had so many changes it was tough to get to know the person playing beside you."

Mosca called this season a defensive year, said each is tough "as are waiting for the offence to catch up."

He said he hopes Toronto quarterback Joe Theismann plays every minute of Sunday's game because he feels Barton is more capable in picking a defence apart.

He said Theismann, just like a rookie, tries to win the game himself.

Meanwhile, Argo defensive end Jim Corrigall is still angry over two penalties called against him in Toronto's final regular-season game which the Tiger-Cats won 23-13

The first time Jon Hohman (Tiger-Cat lineman) took a swing at me and I brought up my arm to protect myself," Corrigall said. "That's all, but I got called for it.

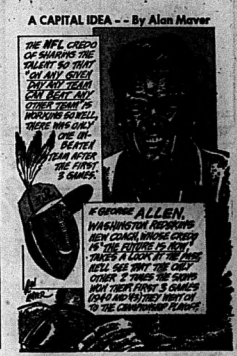
"The second time I tried to keep over a player . . I might have stepped on him a little but I don't think so; I did everything I could to avoid him"

Corrigall said he does not intend to play less vigorously on Sunday. "I'm going to play my game, not a type of game that some official wants me to play," he said

Browns Hire Williams

CLEVELAND (AP) — Former Philadelphia Eagles' head coach Jerry Williams was hired as an offensive backfield coach by Cleveland Browns Tuesday.

He will direct the team's passing attack.



Williams was fired Oct. 5 by Eagles' owner Leonard Tose after the team lost its first three games. He was replaced by Ed Khayat.

Browns owner Art Modell said Williams was hired at the urging of head coach Nick Skorich to fill the void left by the death of offensive backfield coach Howard (Sonny) Keys Oct. 31.

Williams was head coach of Calgary Stampeders in the Canadian Football League for four seasons before being named head man for the Eagles in 1969.

Keys was one of Williams' assistants at Calgary, and Skorich said the two "worked closely together for three years."

Suns Give Milwaukee Scare

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Phoenix Suns scared the daylights out of Milwaukee Bucks, but the National Basketball Association champions prevailed in a fierce struggle that seemed like a playoff game in March.

"Phoenix played a fantastic game, they really wanted this one," said Milwaukee coach Larry Costello Tuesday night after the Bucks had pulled out a 118-113 victory after trailing by seven points at 97-90 early in the last quarter.

It took a 44-point performance by Kareem Jabbar and two key steals by Lucius Allen and Bob Dandridge in the last minute with the Bucks ahead 115-113 for the NBA champions to win their 10th straight on their home court. The score was tied 16 times and the lead changed hands 10 times.

Golden State Warriors whipped Houston Rockets 115-98, Los Angeles Lakers downed Chicago Bulls 123-106 and Buffalo Braves defeated Portland Trailblazers 109-100 in the other NBA games scheduled.

In the American Basketball Association, Dallas shaded New York Nets 90-86, Kentucky overcame Denver 108-96, Utah edged Memphis 95-94 and Pittsburgh bumbled Indiana 133-123.

'Granny' Liggins Losing Weight

CALGARY (CP) — Granville Liggins, one of the crack guards on the Calgary Stampeder offensive line, is ailing with stomach problems.

He has lost six pounds in the last few days and has been undergoing extensive medical tests to determine the cause.

Liggins has continued to practise with the team but there was no indication whether he would play against Saskatchewan Roughriders Saturday in the opening game of the best-of-three Western Football Conference final.

Red Netters Worry Brass

CINCINNATI (AP) — Members of baseball's Cincinnati Reds will resume their off-season baseball exhibition games Friday night despite objections of Bob Howsam, Reds general manager.

Centrefielder Bobby Tolan suffered an Achilles tendon injury during a game last winter and was out of the lineup all year.

Howsam, however, cannot order his players from competing for a basketball team during the off-season. The latest major league contracts forbid the clubs from interfering.

Listed on the roster of the basketball team were first baseman Lee May, pitcher Jim McGlothlin, outfielder Al Ferrara, utility player Jim Stewart, right fielder Pete Rose, former Red pitcher Jim Maloney, Dick Voorhies and Skip Weber.

The players are paid a fixed amount for their appearances at various high schools and the Reds get the high school athletic programs. They played 84 games last winter and won all but four.

the Phoenix coach, he said: "Jabbar takes all the fun out of coaching for me. Here we screen, we pick, we pass and all they have to do is throw it to him. He goes inside and he drops it in."

Victory kept the Warriors on the heels of the first-place Lakers in the Pacific Division. Jim McMillian led the Lakers' scoring parade with 28 points.

Elmore Smith, Buffalo's seven-foot rookie, was a major factor in Buffalo's victory over Portland. He grabbed 17 rebounds and blocked 11 shots, in addition to scoring 12 points.

There'll Even Be a Game!

VANCOUVER (CP) — Five days of festivities will lead up to the Grey Cup game here Sunday, Nov. 28.

Herman Hurkart, chairman of the organizing committee, said Monday that celebrations would begin Nov. 21 with the British Columbia Centennial Grey Cup totem bonspiel, with 140 rinks entered.

The biggest innovation, Mr. Hurkart said, will be the moving of the Grey Cup parade to Saturday, instead of on the morning of the game as in past years.

On Wednesday, Nov. 24, the B.C. high school football championships will be held, with the Miss Grey Cup pageant on Thursday and the Grey Cup reception and dinner on Friday, Nov. 26.

Saturday's parade will have more than 116 units, including more than 20 bands, Mr. Hurkart said.

'Fan' Takes Patriots to Court

BOSTON (AP) — A New England Patriots' fan has filed a $15 million anti-trust suit against the club, the National Football League and commissioner Pete Rozelle because the Patriots required $6,000 season ticket holders to purchase tickets to pre-season exhibition games.

Leo T. Pfeffer, 36, a Marblehead insurance salesman, filed the suit for himself and on behalf of all Patriots' season ticket holders. The suit demands $5 million apiece from the Pats, the NFL and Rozelle.

The suit charges the requirement to buy tickets to pre-season games is an illegal restraint of trade. The state attorney general has ruled the practice is in violation of federal anti-trust laws.

The suit also charges that when the exhibition games were held this year, parking and plumbing facilities at the new Schaefer Stadium at Foxboro were inadequate and the Patriots did not so inform the public.

Counsel for the plaintiff said the suit was a consumer protection measure on behalf of the "captive consumers" of the Patriots.

Canadians Second in Equestrian Duel

NEW YORK (CP) — The United States won the Nations Cup international jumping championship in a close duel with the Canadian equestrian team at the National Horse Show with its eighth victory ever at Madison Square Garden Tuesday night.

The U.S. finished with 12 points to 16 for Canada and 2 for Italy after the third and final round. Hugh Wiley, the leading American rider after the individual trophy with Barbara Worcester Coberly, the top Canadian, tied for third.

A crowd of 8,000 saw U.S. riders take first and second places in the Grand Prix at New York, the last of the International Jumping events. But the 1-2 finish of the Americans, who were not "favored to win," didn't mean anything in the final standings.

Bob Ridland rode Almost Famous to victory and Carol Hofmann was second aboard Foxhunter.

Under the scoring system used, only four designated riders had their points tallied in the team total. Of the 16 entrants in the Grand Prix, six crossed the course of 12 jumps without a fault.

The survivors in the jumpoff eligible to earn points were Jim Day of Hornby, Ont.; Mike Simpson, Shapiro and Argentine Molinuevo or Argentina. The two other qualifiers were Ridland and Miss Hofmann.

Ridland won the Grand Prize, covering the course in 30.3 seconds. Miss Hofmann was next in 31.3. Shapiro, on Sloopy, came in third with a 31.6 clocking and gave the U.S. the team victory. Miss Simpson, on Cathleen, was fourth in 33.5. All four had perfect performances in the jumpoff as time was deciding factor.

Shapiro picked up four points for the U.S. and Miss Simpson for two for Canada.

Canada, with two "designated" riders, had a great opportunity to take the title. If Day, on Sundancer, with eight faults, or Miss Simpson had finished first, with Shapiro back in third, the Canadians would have triumphed.

Shapiro, who also drives his own trotters and pacers, won the individual riding crown with 34 points. Miss Hofmann was second with 36 and Miss Simpson and Ridland tied for third, both with 38. Day and Jorge Lundt of Argentina tied for fifth with 46 points.

Mighty Ruler, ridden by Mike Matz, won the open jumper stake. The seven-year-old bay gelding is owned by Basil Ward of Cedar Mills, Ont.

Bud Jenkins of the U.S. was aboard Two Fingers' Castle Hill, who took the regular working hunter crown with 13 points, making also was the leading open jumper rider.

Delay In Tax Reform Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — Government confidence in getting its tax bill through Parliament by Jan. 1 diminished Tuesday as tempers flared in the Commons.

The outbreak came just before adjournment, after the House had spent seven hours on the bill without approving any of its 233 subclauses.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson accused the Conservatives of creating a filibuster on the bill.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) retorted: "We want to kill as much time as possible."

Those were only two barbs in a brouhaha that marked a change in tone in the debate from last week, when the House—meeting as a committee—appeared to be moving along with the bill.

After adjournment, Pat Mahoney, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Benson, was asked whether he was still optimistic that the government would meet its end-of-the-year target for passage.

"I'm not very sanguine about it now," he said.

The Commons has spent 27 days on the bill and has completed work on fewer than one-tenth of its 233 subclauses. Most progress was made last week.

Mr. Benson and Prime Minister Trudeau have reiterated in recent days that the government would push ahead with the bill, and that they expected it to be passed by the end of next month.

Mr. Mahoney referred to a reported comment arising from a published interview with Mr. Horner that the House might spend as much as three weeks on the few clauses dealing specifically with agriculture.

"If we're hung up for three weeks on the agriculture sections that doesn't leave us much time to talk about the big things like capital gains, international income, corporate taxes and the new development tax credit," said Mr. Mahoney.

The bottleneck has developed in two areas, both dealt with Tuesday: the agriculture sections and another that would carry on current law whereby a person running an unincorporated business cannot deduct his spouse's salary from his taxable income.

The government gave some ground on the agriculture section Tuesday, but the other issue provoked the hostilities.

In three hours spent since Friday on the clause that prevents a husband and wife who operate an unincorporated business from filing separate tax returns—thereby paying lower total taxes—the Conservatives have reiterated many times that it is unfair.

They say a man could operate an unincorporated business with a woman with whom he was living outside of marriage just as a married couple could operate an incorporated business.

Both Mr. Benson and Mr. Mahoney say they are sympathetic, but to allow tax-splitting for unincorporated businesses and their wives invites abuse that nobody has found a way to avoid.

By adjournment, that clause had still not been passed.

Gun Duel Is Fought By Woman

BUFFALO (AP) — A woman killed the man with whom she lived and his two sons Tuesday, held off police with sporadic gunfire for more than three hours and then shot herself to death, police said.

About 20 policemen sped to the house after neighbors reported that a woman was firing a shotgun from a second-floor window. Police donned bullet-proof vests and riot helmets as pellets occasionally sprayed the area.

Police said they did not know the man and two boys were dead until they entered the apartment three hours after the shooting began.

One policeman entered the building from the rear after the woman had been gone from the window for about an hour.

He found Alice Moore, 36, dead of a shotgun wound in the head.

Also found dead of gunshot wounds were Claude McClain, 30, and his sons, Douglas, 7, and Ronald, 5. Police said Miss Moore and the McClains all lived in the apartment.

Doors Closed for Briefing for June's Environment Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — The government and federal-provincial officials were Tuesday to brief a preparatory committee for next June's international conference on the environment.

"It's a one-hour briefing," Chairman Maxwell Cohen (Liberal-Notre-Dame-de-Grace) replied when asked if the doors would be closed to the press after an open morning session.

The meeting was the first of a series, which will include regional idea sessions late in the winter.

A federal news release said the committee had been set up "to channel ideas and opinions originating with the Canadian public through to the UN Conference."

"It isn't working out that way so far," said Terry Cox, a conservation spokesman for the loose federation of private groups called Pollution Probe.

Not only was the meeting closed to the press but the talking was being done by government officials who briefed members on what government is doing.

The government department news release said the initial meeting would "hear the views of nine provinces and more than 30 private citizen organizations." But the reverse happened.

Mr. Cox said the initial meeting was a "vacuum without leaders."

He excepted a morning session in which Maurice Strong, secretary-general of the UN sponsored conference to be held next June in Stockholm, would answer questions.

Mr. Strong said industrialized countries are interested in the conference but many cannot become "quite defensive" as the underdeveloped countries do.

Mr. Strong told Dr. W. H. Drushkowich of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce that the conference is over on the pollution issue and the hard decisions are ahead.

They would be especially hard for industry, he suggested, adding that:

"The real points of resistance to doing it come in the industrialized countries."

Minister of Justice John Davis told the committee he will be inhibited by a provisional position paper submitted by Canada to the UN preparatory committee.

He wouldn't request this paper as limiting in any way," Mr. Davis said. "The government position will not be fully clear until the moment of the conference."

Mr. Strong, former head of the Canadian International Development Agency, was asked at a news conference whether the anti-pollution measures from industrial countries.

He replied that these are the countries that have looked most deeply at environmental problems and have the greatest understanding of the conequences.

Dr. N. E. Cooke of the Canadian Manufacturers Association asked whether the issue of insecticides will be debated at Stockholm. Dr. Cooke noted reputable differences of opinion about DDT, and mentioned Rachel Carson, which have banned DDT, and the underdeveloped countries which feel such a ban would leave them at the mercy of insects.

Mr. Strong did not refer to it directly. But he said countries in East Africa recognize that insecticide itself is dangerous. The challenge to industrialized countries was to develop a substitute that wasn't harmful.

Kingston Trial Continues

Witness Describes Beatings

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A Kingston penitentiary prisoner testified Tuesday that he saw Robert Robidoux, 18, of Toronto, stand over one of two fellow prisoners to die of beatings in April and club him on the head with an iron bar more than 12 times.

The witness, who with other ex-prisoners and convicts will not be named in news reports by court order, was testifying at the trial of 13 convicts charged with non-capital murder in the deaths of Brian Enzor, 24, and Bertrand Robert, 34.

The witness was one of 13 to undergo medical beatings at the hands of fellow-convicts.

He said the victims were later dragged to a room where he saw Robidoux beat Enzor after saying:

"You're still alive . . . I'm going to finish you off."

The body of Enzor, who had been serving time as a sexual offender, was found April 18 when authorities regained control of the penitentiary after four days of rioting. Robert was found badly beaten but alive. He died in hospital a month later.

The witness, Enzor and Robert were prisoners in a cellblock where prisoners considered by other convicts to be informers and sexual offenders were lodged for their own safety.

The witness quoted Brian Beaucage, 23, of London, Ont. as saying:

"Pick out your stool pigeon and place him in a chair."

After he was tied to a chair under the dome, the witness said, James Ogg, 34, also of London, struck him with a steel bar three times in an attempt to break his nose.

A sheet was then placed over his head, the witness said, and he was taunted by Robidoux who demanded the victim call him "sir."

Robidoux then asked him how many ribs a man has, the man said, and when he replied he didn't know Robidoux said, "Let's find out" and proceeded to bash his rib cage with an iron bar.

Other assailants then approached him and he said he "smashed around, kicked around a bit," the witness testified at the Ontario Supreme Court trial.

Beatings ended when a convict shouted that troops were entering the prison, the witness said. The victims were then dragged back to cellblock 1D where they were piled "in a bunch of blood and bodies."

It was then that he saw Robidoux begin to beat Enzor with "a big smile, a sick smile" on his face, the prisoner testified.

After the riot was under control, the witness said, he saw Enzor lying dead and Robert, whose "eyes and forehead were out of position."

Others charged with two counts of non-capital murder are: Harold St. Amour, 30, Pembroke, Ont.; Donald Gee, 26, London, Ont.; David Shepley, 24, Windsor, Ont.; Edward Fowler, 18, Toronto; Glen Morris, 24, Espanola, Ont.; Verne McGurgin, 23, Toronto; Ernest Bagley, 24, St. Thomas, Ont.; David Birt, 24, Charlottetown; Edward Johnson, 22, Clarkson, Ont.; Brian Dodge, 17, Petrolia, Ont.

The trial continues.

Jobs for Welfare Cases Studied

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial committee that has been asked to find out how far welfare authorities should go to force a person to take a job will hold its first public hearing in Kitchener tonight.

"First of all, we didn't think we would hold public hearings but just last Thursday we decided we wanted to," said Barry Swadron, a 32-year-old Toronto lawyer who is chairman of the task force on employment opportunities for welfare recipients.

"We won't know until five minutes before the meeting who is going to be there or what they are going to represent. We are going to have to play it by ear."

So far, hearings are to be planned in Sudbury, Ottawa and Toronto.

The committee has two months to come up with recommendations to reduce unemployment in Ontario and to ease the welfare rolls.

Thomas Wells, minister of social and family services, announced the formation of the committee last month and repeated his often-made remark that welfare reform is under the greatest strain since the depression.

Last year, provincial expenditures for welfare assistance payments rose 50 per cent.

Nov. 11 Proclaimed Holiday Except in Ontario, Quebec

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Most provincial governments have declared Remembrance Day, Thursday, Nov. 11, a holiday.

A survey by The Canadian Press shows that the governments of Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia will close their offices and have allowed businesses and industries in their provinces to do the same.

However, in most of Quebec it will be business as usual while Ontario is permitting individual municipalities to decide for themselves.

Major stock exchanges will remain open but the Vancouver Stock Exchange will close at 12:30 p.m., 90 minutes early. Most security markets in the country will remain open but most commodities exchanges, banks and currency markets will close.

In Quebec, the Quebec national assembly will sit as usual and business, provincial government offices and retail outlets will remain open. But federal government offices will close.

Most labor agreements in Quebec waive the Remembrance Day holiday in favor of St. Jean Baptiste Day in June.

In Ontario, it's up to local municipalities to proclaim a holiday, leaving industries and businesses in those areas to observe it at their own discretion.

At Ottawa, federal public servants get a holiday but commercial outlets will remain open. The Commons stretched sitting hours Monday and Tuesday this week and will cut today's sitting short.

Members of Parliament will have Thursday and Friday off with the stated aim of allowing them to take part in ceremonies in their own ridings.

Banks, municipal offices and schools will be closed in Toronto.

The Manitoba government has declared Thursday a "non-working day" rather than a general holiday. In Winnipeg, public schools, provincial government offices, banks, liquor stores and licensed premises will be closed.

In Ontario, the post offices and banks in Timmins will be closed while retail outlets will stay open.

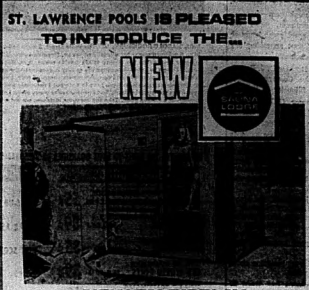
Banks, schools, and municipal, provincial and federal government offices in St. Catharines will close but businesses and industries will continue as usual.

Peterborough, municipal, federal and provincial employees get a holiday. Banks, schools and liquor and brewers' retail stores also will be closed. Retail stores will be open.

Draft-dodger Without Country

WASHINGTON (CP) — Thomas Glenn Jolley, who renounced his United States citizenship in Canada in 1967 to escape the American military draft, may have reached the end of the road in his fight to remain in the U.S.

The 27-year-old North Carolina native did not win a single vote in the U.S. Supreme Court Tuesday in his appeal for a hearing. He faces deportation within 90 days—but to where?



Jolley, now working as a news reporter in Tallahassee, Fla., never applied for Canadian citizenship during his stay in Toronto and Canada has no legal obligation to take him back. A U.S. immigration and naturalization service spokesman said Canada will be asked to allow Jolley to live there.

If Canada refuses, the spokesman said, "we will have to find a country that will accept him." Jolley had only landed-immigrant status during his stay in Canada.

If other countries refuse to accept him, Gordon said, Jolley could remain indefinitely in the U.S. as an "alien subject to deportation."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
B LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

By G.C. THOMPSON, MD

Dr. Thompson: Our son, 4, chews on everything—clothing, furniture, toys, metal, anything he can get into his mouth or his mouth around. . . .

I have tried countless ways of breaking what I thought was a habit but after reading your article on pica I have doubts.

He has frightened me many times as to the small things I have removed from his mouth, like fresh beer and pop can bottle tops, marbles, buttons, once he even tried to eat miniature Christmas tree lights.

Is there something that can be done? I have never mentioned it to our family doctor as I never thought of it as a sickness.—Mrs. P.B.

Pica is the eating of unusual things—not food.

Of course, small children will put the most outlandish things in their mouths and the biggest, but not the only, danger is swallowing something dangerous, such as open safety pins, or choking on beads, coins or other small objects that can get into the lungs or down the throat and being swallowed when playing, running, crying or laughing.

This phase should end by age 5—at least to the degree that it may cause problems.

Pica, however, is usually related to dietary deficiency, particularly an iron deficiency causing anemia. This may not be a very severe anemia, but the person, seeing that something is lacking but not knowing what, eats odd things.

So by all means, tell your doctor about the boy's chewing habits. A blood count will show whether there is any anemia. You didn't mention his eating habits—at the dinner table, I mean. Meat and vegetables will get iron into his system but he may need a medicinal supplement.

I don't guarantee this to be the answer but it is a possibility worth investigating. Aside from all else, there's the risk that he may chew something potentially poisonous. There was a fairly recent warning that lead can be absorbed from chewing a painted pencil. Lead or other poisons could be swallowed, even in small amounts, from some of the other things he gnaws.

Dr. Thompson: Can a fibroid of the uterus prevent one from becoming pregnant? I am 40 and the doctor said I have not started menopause yet.

Does such a fibroid cause pelvic to be irregular? I skip a month once in a while, or sometimes have two periods in the same month.—Mrs. J.M.

First question: There are fibroids and fibroids. There are three layers of tissue in the wall of the uterus, and a fibroid tumor can occur in any one of them. Fibroids may not prevent pregnancy—but when a fibroid encroaches on the inner layer, it can prevent pregnancy and also can cause irregular bleeding. Therefore, no single answer can fit your question.

The skipping and irregularity at age 40 would lead me to suspect pre-menopausal influence. I presume that you have had a recent Pap test.

Dr. Thompson: One of the ladies at the nursing home here told me that afatix pills and vitamin E would cure arthritis. I don't dare mention it to my doctor. He'd go through the ceiling. I thought you might give me a more tolerant answer.—N.I.G.

I won't go through the ceiling, but I don't think any such remedy will do anything for your arthritis. Since it won't hurt you, either, I won't tell you not to try it but I wouldn't expect any results.

Second Vice-principal Appointed at Moira

Robert Henderson, head of the guidance department at Moira Secondary School has been appointed the school's second vice-principal.

The decision was made by Hastings county board of education at its meeting Monday night.

Two weeks before, trustees had approved a second vice-principal at Moira, although its enrolment is still slightly less than the 1,200 required before a second vice-principal can be appointed.

But Moira is now engaged in starting several new programs and an additional administrator is needed to cope with the extra organizational work.

Among the programs now in operation at Moira is a large student-volunteer project involving about 125 people in supervision and instruction at Bayview and Hillcrest and retarded children's schools.

Diversified studies programs are in the planning stage. Under these programs, students would attend Moira part-time and either work or attend other institutions part-time.

Courses in Indian studies and the Mohawk language are being instituted at the school and interest courses will begin in late November. The interest courses will be offered to students during regular school hours, when they can be fitted into lower periods, and will include art, small engine repair, home economics for boys and auto-mechanics for girls.

Opening lead — eight of diamonds.

The signal is an extremely valuable weapon that permits the defenders to indicate where they are weak or strong, the suits they would like to have led, and, in general, how best to conduct the defense.

It is sometimes possible for partner to interfere with this method of information by preempting the play in a manner that makes it difficult for the defenders to signal their holdings.

Here is such a case. South was in four spades doubled and he could tell from the opening lead (1) that West had a singleton diamond and (2) that West almost surely had the king of spades for his double.

Declarer won the diamond with the ace and, had he made the mistake of playing a spade to the ace and continuing with the queen or jack, he would undoubtedly have gone down. West would win with the king, as East signaled with a high club, and would put East on lead with a club.

East would then cash the king of diamonds and continue with the queen, thus guaranteeing West another trump trick in the form of the ten.

So in order to prevent East from signalling, declarer played a spade to the queen at trick two. West won with the king but was now faced with the problem of how to put partner on lead for the vital diamond return.

Unluckily, but understandably, he elected to play a heart at trick three and as a result South made the contract, Declarer was exceedingly well rewarded for jamming the opponents' lines of communication.

People Longest on Welfare Get First Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Persons who have been longest on welfare rolls will receive preference for jobs created under Ontario's accelerated municipal works program to ease unemployment this winter, it was originally announced Tuesday.

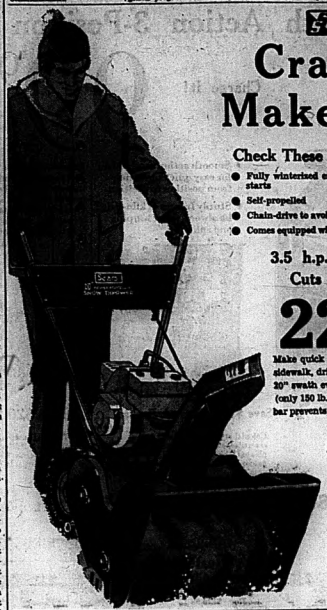
Details of the $25-million job grants program for municipalities, announced during the recent provincial election campaign by Premier William Davis, were released by Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales.

The program is encouraging municipalities to undertake job-creating projects for the winter months over the province. $7.5 million in grants last year.

This year grants have been increased to $25 million which Mr. Davis, in his campaign promises, said would create 25,000 jobs.

It is part of a general winter works program Mr. Davis announced to create 41,000 jobs at a cost of $83 million.

Under the new expanded program, provincial approval of projects will be based on the welfare case load in each municipality. In other words, municipalities with the greatest number of welfare cases will be given priority. The application of grants, a move Mr. Bales said would "cut the money where there is the greatest need to create jobs this winter."



General approval will be given any municipal project, manual or non-manual, that provides jobs for unemployed persons. The application, similar to last year's program, will be 50-50, meaning 50 per cent of the jobs will go to welfare cases, and the other 50 to any kind of work through the normal winter maintenance.

Municipalities have until Dec. 31 to begin their projects.

Property tax holiday funds, local jobs and construction are also eligible for grants, a de- re from previous pro-

Publishers Want Books Provided

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Educational Publishers Group wants the provincial government to lay out about $812,000 to provide Ontario schools with all textbooks approved by the province.

In a brief to the Ontario royal commission on book publishing Tuesday, the publishers group said the government subsidy would "greatly reduce the requests for complimentary copies and the associated costs of distribution to the schools."

The group also urged the department of education to allocate about two per cent of the total education budget in grants to boards of education to buy texts and learning materials.

Based on a sample of "three or four representative average type" county boards, textbook purchases represent less than one per cent of total operating budget, Stanley Reid, group president, said in the brief.

The brief opposed "the very serious problem of illegal photocopying, which is attacking the fundamental principles of the publishing process," contending that copyright material photocopied for school use should be paid for.

Copyright protection was also put forward in a brief likely presented by the Canadian Association of University Teachers, the Association of Canadian Television and Radio Artists, the Ontario Confederation of University Faculty Associations and the Ontario Provincial Federation.

"We quite properly want and must have the widest range of materials available for education," the brief said. "But at the same time, we must ensure that we get the best creators of such materials and that they are properly compensated for their work."

A brief submitted by James Miller of Educational Media Association of Canada which is concerned primarily with nonprint teaching materials asked for government grants to help Canadian producers of films, maps and videotapes for schools.

Yule Mail Strike Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — Senior officials of the post office and the letter carriers union met Tuesday in an attempt to resolve a dispute that could disrupt or stop Christmas mail deliveries.

The dispute centres on an adjudicator's report Oct. 15 which ruled the post office must offer overtime work, resulting from silences to union personnel rather than to casual employees.

The report, by adjudicator Harry Arthurs, agreed with the union claim that the post office was violating the current collective agreement by first offering such work to casual employees.

Letter carriers in the St. Catharines and Thorold postal district were sent home Tuesday after they called a 7 a.m. study session to discuss what they said was a continuing violation of the agreement and the adjudication report.

Jim Mayes, vice-president of the letter Carriers of Canada, said in an interview before the afternoon meeting that the men had been ordered back to work by the union but had refused.

He said the St. Catharines area work stoppage could be the first in a nationwide series.

What the Stars Say

Wednesday, November 10

Today's score on the national scene is labor—1, management—0, as Nixon vetoes guidelines proposed by industry leaders. Other news reports headline more drug scandals involving the military.

Aries (March 21-April 19). In trying to thrash out the truth from the wild tales you're hearing, you don't seem to be getting anywhere. Until the confusion abates. Don't be too believing.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Someone's definitely playing on your weakness to seek security at all costs. If the proposal means turning over to someone who claims a knack with investments, better start to run.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Authorities are re-enacting in rumored threats from the competition, putting you on the spot to produce the impossible. Get facts straight before setting new goals.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Travel plans should be carefully considered in light of pressures on the job. Don't run off to some vacation spot if deadlines haven't been met.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). The ups and downs and eventual disappointments in your love life are beginning to form a pattern. Insistence on perfection is dooming alliances right from the start.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). A minor emergency in your family circle can throw the whole household into confusion. Keep excitable partners from prolonging the turmoil by being decisive.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). A task that looks simple on paper can turn into a nightmare of confusion and disorder for the unsuspecting. Get instructions straight, read all the fine print before proceeding.

Scorpio (Oct 23-Nov. 21). Keep your gambling stakes down to nickels and dimes if you insist on courting Lady Luck today. Small losses will be a lot easier to live with than big ones.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Until you figure out what's going on and what you really want, you may be tempted to play both sides. This dual deception, however, should only be attempted by the very clever.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It's both unfair and unwise to take out personal gripes on co-workers who are nothing more than innocent bystanders. Keep your problems at home.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). A seven-week cycle of activity affecting cash, spending, income, gets off to a dubious start as aspects tempt you toward impulse buying. Remember the budget!

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Anxiety over your job can be the uppermost worry now. A cool reception from higher-ups just means the boss is in a bad mood. You're OK.

District Groups Draft Winter Works Plans

Total Outlay Will Be Large

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Winter employment in Belleville and the immediate Quinte area will, it is expected, benefit to a considerable degree as the result of federal and provincial financial assistance for labor-oriented make-work programs.

At least there is high enthusiasm by area special groups and by municipalities planning projects to submit to senior governments for approval.

The total amount of money has already been made available for the Belleville area would be difficult to estimate but the provincial government has initially allotted $39,000 to the city and $37,000 to Hastings county. And depending on the number and type of projects approved, federal assistance in the Quinte area could climb into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The major objective of the two programs is to provide jobs for employable people on welfare rolls although other unemployed people will not be excluded.

The city has been initially allotted $39,498 by the provincial government but city officials are optimistic that the amount actually received might considerably exceed this amount.

They note that last year when the provincial expenditure on winter works projects was limited to $74 million, the city received $53,000. This year the provincial contribution will be $25 million.

Although federal support toward winter works is limited to half a million for any one project unemployment and other factors will be considered in determining actual amounts.

Annual Income Guarantee Stirs Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The report of the Senate poverty committee was barely public Wednesday when its proposal for a guaranteed annual income provoked controversy.

While a number of welfare experts welcomed the concept, some had reservations about the plan for introducing it. One even suggested the committee's plan constituted a fatal flaw.

Welfare Minister John Munro, echoing a stand taken earlier by Prime Minister Trudeau, said a guaranteed-income plan would be too costly.

His estimate that it would cost $1.5 to $2 billion more than current government income-subsidy programs such as family and youth allowances and old age pensions was significantly higher than that of the poverty committee, however.

In tabling the report the committee chairman, Senator David Croll, said there was no doubt that the cost—estimated by the committee at between $200 and $300 million more than programs existing in 1976—would be heavy.

For Other Stories On Report On Poverty See Pages, 5 and 33

But viewed as about one per cent of Canada's gross national product, it was not unduly so, he said.

Senator Croll called the committee's report a bill of rights for the poor and insisted the income plan can work if Canadians will it. He attacked the existing welfare system as unable to alleviate poverty let alone eliminate it.

The report calls for a uniform social income plan centred on a flexible guaranteed income for the needy. To be federally financed and administered, it would include work and training incentives.

The guaranteed income formula would be applied according to family size and earnings. Income floors would be set below which no one would be allowed to fall.

Mr. Munro agreed with the proposal to build work incentives into a guaranteed annual income as did Reuben Baetz, executive director of the Canadian Council on Social Development.

Mr. Baetz said, however that plan seemed to have one big flaw: Setting basic guaranteed-income levels below proposed poverty lines was just guaranteeing poverty.

Helen Bastien, chairman of Montreal's Anti-Poverty Co-ordinating Committee, said all the recommendations were badly needed reforms, but the world would be pointless if the report were shelved and forgotten.

Indians would welcome scrapping the present welfare system which has destroyed many people, said Harold Cardinal, president of the Indian Association of Alberta.

They wanted a system to ensure the security of those unable to work. But for the able-bodied unemployed, money diverted through such a scheme might be better used by creating jobs.

But Paul Godfrey, head of the Metropolitan Toronto Social Services Committee, and Dr. John Frei, executive-director of the Social Planning Council of Metropolitan Toronto, supported the guaranteed-income idea. Dr. Frei said there should be sufficient study of its financing, however.

At Winnipeg, Premier Ed Schreyer said the report was "in many ways a good report." But Mr. Schreyer, whose NDP government is setting up a guaranteed-income pilot project, said the Senate's committee's recommendations for such a plan may be the most difficult of all its recommendations in implement.

Phil Gaglardi, British Columbia's rehabilitation minister, said he disagreed with the report's recommendation of a guaranteed annual income.

In a telephone interview from his home in Kamloops, Mr. Gaglardi said the guaranteed annual income would rob people of their dignity.

He said he agreed with the report's suggestion that Canada's present welfare system be scrapped.

"But the Senate suggests replacing the welfare system which is bad enough with something that is 20 times worse," he said.

Instead of pouring "millions of dollars into something that is useless," he suggested the money be used to create full employment.

Lindsay Girls Held By Gunmen

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — Two men were arrested today following a massive manhunt that started after four girls were held hostage at gunpoint overnight Wednesday at Lindsay, Ont., 40 miles northeast of here.

About 30 police and a tracking dog were involved in the search which climaxed in one man being captured after a gunfight and another being arrested while hitchhiking on the outskirts of this town 40 miles south of Peterborough.

Police said Douglas Edwin Hughes, 26, of Lindsay, and DeWayne J. R. Stuart, 24, of no fixed address, were each charged with four counts of kidnapping and three of armed robbery.

Wednesday, four girls were held at gunpoint in their Lindsay apartment by two men, one of whom held a sawed-off shotgun. The men barged in after one of the girls answered a knock on the door.

Police withheld the identities of the girls who also were robbed by the two men who left Wednesday morning.

Lindsay Police Chief Jack Wales said the robbers were "crazed with speed (drugs)."

The police search started when officers spotted a speeding car west of here. They chased it in their cruiser but the occupants later abandoned it and entered a wooded area.

One man was flushed out by the tracking dogs and captured following an exchange of gunfire. No one was injured.

Later, a Cobourg couple was awakened by the sound of breaking glass and the man who had entered their house by shattering a window.

Albert Sommer, 57, told police he calmed the intruder down by offering a cup of coffee. The intruder stayed for about 30 minutes, Mr. Sommer said, gave him $10 for the shattered window and left.

Police, acting on information from a motorist, arrested the second man while he was hitchhiking on Highway 2, just west of here.

Candles for Remembrance

Irony takes a broader dimension when the backdrop is war.

Ironically Jonathan Orford is 29 today — an old soldier celebrating his birthday on the day set aside to remind Canadians of those who lost their lives in war.

There was a time when Jonathan — now a Hastings Minor resident in Belleville — had his birthday dressed in World War I khaki.

Jonathan, who says he was born in Manchester, England, was working on a farm in the Madoc area when war started in 1914. He eventually enlisted, going overseas to England "the same as anybody else — I wouldn't want to back out."

That was the conflict that produced Remembrance Day — the date itself inspired by the armistice that silenced the guns of Jonathan's war.

It's Nov. 11, it's another birthday for Jonathan, and another Remembrance Day for Canadians.

Hydro Rates Won't Rise

TORONTO (CP) — Despite rising costs, the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission's rates will remain unchanged in 1972, a commission spokesman said Wednesday.

The spokesman said Hydro Chairman George Gathercole's chain municipal utilities commissions last week advising them that rates will not be increased, in line with economic policies adopted by the federal and provincial governments to stimulate employment and achieve a resurgence in the economy.

U.S. Aid May Be Salvaged

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Salvation for the U.S. foreign aid program seemed likelier today following Senate approval of an interim measure authorizing money for humanitarian and economic assistance until the end of next June.

The House of Representatives, which also Wednesday night approved by voice vote its own resolution providing temporary aid funding until about the end of next month, still has to act on the Senate bill.

There is some question whether it will try to merge once more the aid and military assistance legislation, which the Senate had carefully separated before voting Wednesday night 62 to 23 to provide $1.14 billion for the next seven months.

Connally Thinks Japan Wants To Help U.S. in Trade Crisis

TOKYO (Reuter) — U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally said today he had not sought or received a specific Japanese commitment to settle the international currency crisis, but believed Japan wanted to be helpful and co-operative.

Speaking at a news conference towards the end of two days of talks with Japanese government ministers, Connally said he had not mentioned any specific yen revaluation and it would be presumptuous of the U.S. to do so.

At the same time, Japanese sources said the treasury secretary had informally suggested a yen revaluation of up to 30 per cent.

But Japanese sources said Connally also suggested that the Japanese government stop intervening in the exchange market and allow the yen to float freely and find its real strength. The Bank of Japan is holding the yen at a "controlled" float of about 8.7 per cent higher than it was before President Nixon's decision Aug. 15 to end the gold peg of the U.S. dollar and let it float.

Connally said he believes there are good prospects of settling the monetary issue by the end of this year, but he would not be surprised if it went beyond that.

However, he made it clear that the U.S., while prepared to settle the issue at any time, believes the solution now is in the hands of Japan and Europe.

Connally said the meeting of the Group of Ten foreign ministers set for Rome on Nov. 22 and 23 has been postponed because of indications from Europe that no substantive progress could be made on settling currency problems.

A new date perhaps in early December might be set, he added.

The treasury secretary, however, insisted the U.S. has gone as far as it could and "humbled itself to the ultimate degree" to solve the crisis.

Replying to Japanese suggestions that a dollar devaluation is the key, Connally said: "The dollar has already been devalued in fact against all leading currencies, the yen, Canadian dollar, Swiss and French francs, German mark etc.

"If the nations of the world want us to humble ourselves by devaluation, we have done more. We have floated, devalued and suspended its convertibility—which is humbling yourself to the ultimate degree."

All Groups Enthusiastic About Hiking Trail

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

An enthusiastic endorsation of Canada Manpower's proposed 396-mile hiking trail from Lake Ontario to Algonquin Park was given yesterday by Quinte area hiking associations at a special meeting at Belleville city hall.

The meeting was called by the Belleville and district employment committee to outline details of the proposed recreational trail to local trail associations and area civic bodies, but the scheme already has seen approval by many of the municipalities through which the trail would run.

Plans call for the recreational trail to commence at the Sandbanks on Lake Ontario pass through Prince Edward County to Belleville and Metro River and Highway 62 through Hastings to Algonquin Park.

Application for the scheme's approval as a winter works project has been forwarded to both the federal and provincial governments and although no definite word has been received, committee members are optimistic that funds will be made available.

Canada Manpower officials said their program is not in the ground floor, so to speak, as plans had been formulated before the government's local initiatives make-work program had been announced.

The initial request to the federal government is for a $125,000 grant to get the project under way but the committee Wednesday was urged to make immediate application for further funds so that the trail may become a reality by next summer.

If approved, the initial phases of the project would see a survey and documentations of existing trails along the proposed trail route.

This would be followed by the taking of necessary construction of picnic tables, rest over streams and watercourses.

Fred Bimla, Belleville Industrial Commissioner who did most of the actual planning for the proposal, said that although the trail was planned as a through route, hikers would be encouraged to join the trail at almost any point.

Hopes are that the research and documentation of existing facilities would employ 22 or more persons with this number to be increased to about 40 as actual development work got started.

But the recreational trail, intended primarily as a route for hikers and snowmobilers, would also provide future employment for maintenance workers and would greatly expand the recreational facilities of the Quinte area.

Attending yesterday's meeting along with members of the employment committee were Dr. R. T. Potter (Quinte), James Taylor (Prince Edward Lennox) and Lee Grills, federal member for Hastings.

Preliminary details of the proposed project were outlined to the meeting by local Canada Manpower official James Staveley, by Mr. Bimla and Gerald Harvey who has been named project administrator.

Committee chairman Reg A. Loader welcomed those in attendance.

During the discussion, Carl Boslaj, representing the Marysdawsla Valley Tourist Association of North Hastings said his organization had developed a network of snowmobile trails

Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales.

City manager J. R. Beyboldt yesterday confirmed that Belleville had received what he termed an "initial allocation" of $35,000 under the program. (Last year Belleville received $53,000 under the provincial work program.)

He said he was still studying the formula under which the money is made available and could not say day it the city would be eligible for more allocations at a later date.

City manager Beyboldt also said initial allocations will account for two-thirds of the $35 million. Unused funds, plus the remaining one-third of the total, would be reallocated to areas needing additional assistance.

The program replaces last year's 37.5 million incentives program, for which grants were made on a per capita basis. Initial allocations are based on the numbers of unemployed and welfare recipients in municipalities.

It also may be a speedier formula for rural areas.

The program has been streamlined so that the municipalities will deal directly with the provincial government in receiving the grants. Last year, the money was given to the upper tier of local governments such as county or regional authorities for re-allocation to townships or local boards who conceived approved work projects.

As yet, it's not certain how many projects Belleville council have received funds in Hastings County.

For instance, clerk-administrator Carl Bateman said he believed Faraday township in north Hastings already had received an allocation of $1,500.

But in the two more populous townships of the south end of the county, officials said yesterday they had received no word.

Thurlow township clerk Clare Horton said only an outline of the program had been received by the township.

Sidney township clerk Byron Harder also said his municipality had received no allocation. He said, that he had been received was a "form letter."

Meantime, Mr. Bateman said county authorities already were considering possibilities arising from the Hastings allocation.

"We're taking a look at it and I've asked my department heads to come in with suggestions," said the administrator.

He also had county council's ARDA and finance and property committees studying the program.

"In fact, I've four or five recommendations on my desk right now," said Mr. Bateman.

He expected some decision would be made on a choice of projects at next month's December — when county council meets for the next meeting since "we want to get started as soon as we can."

Any more than the $36,000 already allocated was needed, the county will apply for necessary additional funds, he said.

Mr. Bales' announcement said the program was completed last week after consultation with spokesmen for municipal associations.

Guidelines this years expanded program includes:

—Approval of any municipal work, manual or non - manual, that provides jobs for the unemployed and people on welfare. Local boards can thus undertake a wide range of projects.

—Inclusion of local boards and municipalities along with the municipalities and Indian bands.

—Each municipality is required to notify the Department of Municipal Affairs no later than Dec. 31 of the projects on which it intends to spend all or part of its initial allocation.

—Advance payments equal to 50 per cent of the estimated cost of notified projects will then be processed automatically. The balance will be paid when final claims are submitted.

City, County Receive Funds

By HARRY MULHALL

The city of Belleville has received almost $40,000 and Hastings County $36,000 in initial allocations under the Ontario government's provincial-municipal winter works incentive program.

The $25-million scheme, earlier revealed by Premier William Davis in the closing stages of last month's general election campaign, was formally announced Tuesday by

Remembering Only Part Of Citizens' Obligation

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Under suitably sombre skies Belleivillen fell silent for two brief minutes this morning to remember the human havoc that is war and pay tribute to those who died because of it.

But, the veterans and civilians gathered at city councilsph Remembrance Day service were cautioned, a better world is not resolved by the clash of arms, powers.

"The person who wants a better world will have to start close to home in the smallest voice is still that of the individual," warned Peter Teti, rector of the Belleville Anglican Church and guest speaker at this year's service.

War veterans, militiamen and young sea and air cadets joined in the parade through city streets to mark public observance of the event.

The procession — with banners flying under chill, grey skies — marched from the city armory to the Cenotaph on Station Street, to join citizens in the simple ceremonials composing the memorial service honoring the dead of two world wars.

It is a tradition linking people all over the world from village greens to great churches, Mr. Teti noted.

"In almost every one of under something of the cost that was paid in blood and tears for victory."

Yet the survivors and new living generations have an obligation to the past, Mr. Teo often, the dead are the only people.

"The only thing that can change that judgment on war is the realization of a purpose that is worth human life.

"We have such a purpose: The realization of a significant measure of peace and justice in the world," said Mr. Teti.

The worth of both wars might be judged by the shape of the future, he added.

"When the world around us at the world today, it makes one wonder what has been accomplished."

There is confusion and chaos with nations creating hatred, concerned chiefly with their own national ends.

"Unfortunately, it's true that as far as the wars were concerned we know better what we were fighting against than what we were fighting for," he said. The fighting was finished too many people thought the job was done," said Rev. Teti.

Today, humanity seems a long way from achieving world peace. In a nuclear warfare there would be no meaning.

"But we are faced with great problems — and I don't believe any of these problems can be solved at the economic or political level, or any other human level.

"It is only in the heart that the issues of life spring and it is there with the basic issues of the human heart, all plans and schemes for better, for the world can be bound to fail.

"Every citizen of the free world should be made to understand that a world of justice and peace can only become about through the efforts of people who are like minded and will work for it."

The current struggle between communism and democracy is one of ideas and the democracies will win if peoples are less dedicated to their faith.

"A civilization without a sense of meaning will never. In the heart of man is a hatch for a civilization with a sense of meaning — even if that meaning is based on false ideas and beliefs," declared Mr. Teti.

Do the members of Christian civilization proclaim their faith as communists do?

"I'm afraid, that in most cases the answer is no. We must know what we stand for and we must bear witness to our beliefs.

"We cannot win a war and then expect to secure peace by going back to our careless, self-centred ways."

Individual purpose is reflected in the makeup of a nation, and what occurs at international diplomatic levels depends on the nations represented.

"In the midst of the great movements of history and the mighty clashes of great powers the quiet voice is still that of the individual who asks what all this means to him."

As free world citizens, Canadians should remember their obligations to their war dead and carry out their responsibilities accordingly, concluded Mr. Teti.

Participating in the service were the bands of the Belleville Salvation Army Corps, BCSCC (sea cadets) Quinte, Air Cadet Corps, Army, Navy and Air Force Association (Duke of Edinburgh Unit) pipe band. The Invocation was by Rev. Charles H. Savage, scripture reading by Rev. J. Leslie Dean, prayer by Rt. Rev. J. A. Carley, benediction by Salvation Army's Bram Humphries, padre, Canadian Legion, Belleville.

Wayne Brooks, outdoor education co-ordinator for the Hastings county board of education was highly enthusiastic about the proposed trail's possibilities from an educational standpoint.

He said county school children were now using up to 50 different areas for outdoor studies and indicated many of these would be duly dropped in favor of an established hiking trail facility.

This might get to be a very common scene as the men of the area begin pruning their beards in preparation for the beard-growing contest for this year's winter carnival. John Morton (measuring) of the Quinte Barber Shop is the sponsor of the event, taken a final reading on the length of his employer's beard (Bill Kuiper seated).

Carnival Encourages Hairy-chinned Men

Right by the hairs of your chinny-chin-chin, will be the subject of some serious judging at the winter carnival for the city.

The Hotel Quinte Barber Shop, to the dismay of many a housewife, is sponsoring a beard - growing contest to be run in conjuction with the winter carnival organized through the Chamber of Commerce.

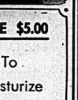
Made public only a week ago, already 12 daring men have signed up for the competition.

"The last we heard their wives are still letting them in the house at night, stubble and all," said John Morton, hair stylist at the shop. "We are also planning a form, to be signed by the contestants, assuring that even under pressure, they will not shave until after the contest.

"This is a fun thing, and like the rest of the carnival, it is only what the residents of the area make it," said Bill Kuipers, manager of the shop.

Trophies and certificates will be presented at the evening judging in the Memorial Arena for 1) fullest beard, 2) Best Groomed Beard and 3) Most original style.

To be fair to everyone, professional barbers are excluded from the competition, and contestants are not allowed to enter the doors of a barber shop within two weeks prior to the contest.



Among the regulations of the event area, if entering the fullest beard contest, entries must be clean-faced on the opening day of the entry. Beards must not be artificially colored or rinsed.

Sponsors will allow moustache wax.

Specialty for the event, a hair stylist from Toronto will be coming to the city to make the final judging of the fuzzy faces.

Jean Andalet, teacher at the Toronto Barbers College will do the judging and make the prize presentations after the decisions are made.

Mayor Scott Favors November 11 Holiday

It's Remembrance Day and almost business as usual at city hall.

But Mayor Russell Scott says he would "not be adverse" to Remembrance Day being declared a full national holiday.

As usual, response to the event as a holiday was sporadic.

Schools, banks and senior government offices were closed in the Quinte area. Stores and business offices, however, for the most were open.

In Belleville, City Manager J. R. Reynolds says any employee who desired to attend Cenotaph Remembrance Day services may have time off to do so. Otherwise business went on as usual at city hall.

But yesterday, Mayor Scott, who served in World War II, said there seems to be a resurgence of feeling toward Remembrance Day.

"The numbers at the Cenotaph have been increasing. There were some years when you'd hardly get a handful (of the public) at the ceremony," he said. "Now . . . there are great crowds."

There seems more interest in veterans' affairs, including veterans' organizations the new $250,000 Canadian Legion building in Belleville is an example.

"This is going on all across Canada," said the mayor. "There seems to be a great resurgence of a feeling of remembrance among the people."

"As a veteran of World War II I wouldn't be adverse to that (Remembrance Day) being called as a full holiday," he added.

World War I Veteran Recounts Adventures

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County's "old sweats" held in this morning for their annual march to the Picton Cenotaph where Remembrance Day services were conducted by Rev. Robert Jones, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Picton, and Rev. Robert Black, the Baptist Church, Bloomfield.

One marcher, Lindley B. Calnan, who is a veteran of World War I and publisher of the Picton Gazette for the past 39 years, has compiled the recollections of county soldiers in a special edition titled World War One Golden Anniversary Issue.

This paper first appeared in 1959 and will be followed soon by a companion issue detailing the efforts of Prince Edward's fighting men in World War II.

Commissioned as a qualified kite-balloon observer, Flt. Sub-Lt. Calnan was posted aboard H.M.S. Ajax, serving afloat with the British Grand Fleet, based at Rosyth in Firth of Forth and Scapa Flow.

The young seaman witnessed the surrender of the German Fleet and his description of this dramatic event is one of the highlights of the wartime adventures chronicled in his World War I special edition.

Mr. Calnan, in a letter to his parents, dated November 21, 1918 wrote, "It was fortunate enough to be in the foreign with the gunnery commander and so was one of the first to see through the mist a balloon bearing two points on the starboard bow. A few seconds later it could be seen that this was carried by our own light cruiser Cardiff. Following her the three lines of "ships blue ahead".

"This conquered line steamed between our lines, so that three miles on either hand they saw an escort more powerful than themselves," the letter continued.

"One by one they came out of the mist — five battle cruisers, led by the Seydlitz, with Admiral's flag, nine battleships, the Kaiser class first, the Bayern, and last three of the Konig class. Astern were the light cruisers and destroyers, escorted by our ships of the same class. Shortly our squadrons "turned in succession" 16 points, thus our ships were steaming in the same direction and on a parallel course with the enemy and thus we escorted them to a point off Inchkeith where they anchored and were searched by us. They were found to have carried out the conditions of the armistice as to disarmament.

The account of the surrender concludes with a description of the lowering of all flags flying from the enemy fleet.

"A signal had been made from the Commander-in-Chief, Grand Fleet to Commander-in-Chief, Highseas Fleet: 'At sunset (3.37 p.m.) you will strike your colors and will not rehoist them without my permission.' So at sunset, as our bugles blared out throughout the fleet, their colors flattended down with ours. But this morning at one our colors were again flying. Theirs were not and will fly no more," wrote Flt. Sub-Lt. Calnan.

This week, recalling the significance of Remembrance Day, Mr. Calnan stated that November 11 is becoming "less and less an occasion for remembrance of sacrifice."

He explained neither callousness nor indifference are responsible for this fact and attributed it to ignorance.

The news publisher said that persons under 30 years of age do not necessarily know about the wartime service of parents and relatives who were very young when they enlisted in "the war to end all wars."

He suggested it is the duty of parents and the school system to teach the growing generation about the service and sacrifice offered by veterans and war dead.

Mr. Calnan recalled that the first contingent of Picton Edward volunteers left Picton railway station for overseas duty on August 25, 1914.

A mass meeting was held in the Armory now known as the Armory Mall shopping centre, to "give the boys a sendoff."

Brig. Gen. Bernard R. Hepburn, MP, CMG, spoke briefly and told the audience in the crowded building "Colonel Sam Hughes will not have a finer body of men going to the front than the boys of Prince Edward."

Mayor Milton Adams, unable to join the fight himself, gave the soldiers $200 in gold, a gift of town council.

The departing volunteers were each presented with $10 gold pieces by Picton merchants H. W. Bedell, G. M. Farrington, and I. Pyth Fraser.

The first contingent from Picton went to Valcartier and then to the Quebec exhibition grounds where they were inspected by Canada's Governor-General HRH the Duke of Connaught. The men then boarded the transport Saxonia for the voyage overseas.

Deck the Streets

With only 44 days left until Christmas, village of Madoc employees are turning on in preparing the downtown streets with Yuletide decor. Hero Madoc Hydro employee Gerald Reid replaces bulbs on one of the downtown wires. Between 600 and 700 brightly-lit bulbs will add color to the streets.

Plenty of Projects Could Use Assistance

The city of Belleville will have no lack of possible municipal projects from which to choose to make application to various governments for approval as winter works projects.

This was indicated at the special meeting Wednesday evening at city hall when a wide range of projects was outlined by city department heads, parks board, recreation and arena committee and library board heads.

The various possible projects will be correlated by city manager J. R. Reynolds, but the actual projects for which applications will be made will be decided by city council.

Under the scheme the federal government will subsidize labor costs for approved municipal projects while allowances will also be given for a percentage of material costs.

Local Canada Manpower office manager H. W. Earn advised, however, that projects would have to be labor oriented.

He said the intent of the program was to provide jobs for unemployed and qualified labourers, not to provide overtime work for skilled tradesmen who may already be working.

Some of the projects suggested, last night which might be considered were the proposed extension to the Corby Public Library; replacement of brickwork on the east wall of the city police station; renovations to the Belleville Memorial Arena, construction of the new city parks service building, cleanup and landscaping of parks areas.

Parks board chairman Ald. Paul Russell cited possible parks projects were almost unlimited.

"If there is any money left over we can use it," he said.

To be eligible, a municipal project must provide a minimum of 30 man-hours of work, and applications must be in by the end of the year.

Under the federal municipal incentives program workers must be paid an average of $100 per week and a subsidy on labor costs will be paid only to the end of April May.

Other possible projects mentioned were reconstruction of parts of the Moira River retaining wall, development of East Zwick's Island, brush cutting on city property and tree planting.

Indians Meet Here To Complete Brief

TYENDINAGA (Staff) — Iroquois Indians from seven Ontario Reserves will meet with Indian Affairs minister Jean Chretien at Brantford Nov. 27 to give their views on the White Paper on Indian policy.

Tyendinaga Chief Earl Hill, vice - president of the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians, said today the association will present a brief in rebuttal to the government's policy.

Final details of the presentation will be discussed at this weekend at the Tyendinaga Reserve, where the executive of the association will hold a regular meeting.

The Iroquois and Allied Indians represent 19,000 Indians among them the 1,200 band members of the reserve here.

All council members from the seven reserves represented in the association will be present to meet the minister at the Mohawk Institute on the Six Nations Reserve near Brantford Nov. 27.

The Indians asked the minister to meet them at Brantford to receive their brief, rather than going to Ottawa in delegation to give him the document.

The Brantford meeting is a public event, open to all association members, and Chief Hill said today he expects a large crowd to be present.

The Indians' brief, still confidential, concerns economic development, reserve administration, housing and other topics covered in the White Paper brought down two years ago.

Anti-American Policies

Public Reacts Sharply to P.M's Leftist Tendencies

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau's recent remarks on protests which range between the ad and the angry, must show how it could all happen at once.

Within that recent widely improbable week there was one government hosting Soviet Premier Kosygin, casting its United Nations vote for Red China and against the United States, bitterly protesting President Nixon's decision to go with the Amchitka nuclear blast while all the while pulling pressure on Washington to drop the 10 percent surcharge on Canadian exports.

The total effect of this most unusual Canadian diplomatic activity was to leave the distinct impression that the Trudeau Government was cooling old friendships with the Americans while warming up new acquaintances with their enemies.

Then, hand-in-glove with the Prime Minister has pleaded that it was all coincidence. And he's been unsupported by his critics.

He and his Cabinet have been at pains to defend each action as the reasonable thing to do.

The way he sees it, this has to be so.

But taken all together, as part of the foreign policy picture in the frantic week, it seems to a great many concerned Canadians that these gestures have taken a sharp swing left in its international course.

An excellent place to take the temperature of the public on any hot political issue is in the letters - to - the - editor-column of the Ottawa newspaper.

This is so because Ottawa, being the National Capital, is the most professionally political of any Canadian city, is so slow to blow its cool it gives an appearance of being bored by it all.

It does not demonstrate most protesters are heated in from Toronto and Montreal — and it will not even bother (too blase) to turn out either to cheer the Queen when she visits, rubberneck VIPs and let Kosygin when they tour, or stand in silence at the Cenotaph on Remembrance Day.

So if you want to determine whether the political pot is simmering or coming to a boil — among the taxpayers — you pick your finger in the letters-to-the-editor column.

And so it had to indicate a high degree of public fury when both Journal and Citizen topped their letters columns with two anti-Trudeau blasts. Especially the frankly pro-Liberal Citizen.

Wrote Pr. M. Allen to The Citizen, in part:

"I am frustrated by this government's insistent criticism of and antagonism towards the U.S.

"In his three years as Prime Minister, Mr. Trudeau has had no opportunity to meet the U.S. by carrying its enemies, boosting its trade and insulting its actions on every international stage.

"He, then, has the insolence to send his ministers whimpering to Washington to get the surcharge off.

"I only hope that Americans generally realize that the large majority of Canadians do not share the anti-American sentiments of their government.

"I have also bitterly angered by the fact that this country is represented at the United Nations in the form of Red China. How dare he . . . when 70 per-

Nature's Riches

The November Woodland Scene

Ottawa Journal

No man need be lonely if he counts trees as his friends. In the twilight time of year when the leaves are on the ground and the hardwood boles of great trees resemble cathedral pillars, he can walk a woodland and find strength and solace among friendly trees.

Among the maples and oaks, poplars and birches, all is quiet and calm. The leaf carpet is a restful pattern of muted hues, moist and soft from autumn rains. Walk reverently here, for beneath one's feet is the rich black humus — the primal basis of life.

The low circling November sun paints a picture in the woodland. Bark patterns are clear; gnarled limbs and pointed buds on branch tips are clearly revealed. In those tightly wrapped capsules are next year's leaves and blossoms waiting for a winter to pass and the time of earth warming.

Go into an evergreen grove and inhale the resin-fragrant air; listen to the music of the pines and hemlocks, spruces and balsams as they respond to a passing breeze.

A November hardwood woodland is open and revealing. One can study the starting saplings, trees in full maturity, and the ancient patriarchs that have lived out their lives. Only trees can tell the tales of the years they've travel the trail with eyes on ground; but life itself to him who loves that is forest is a living organism. Trees, a part of Nature's plan, are an example of ordered living to men who too often unduly complicates his life.

Remembrance

Today we remember the men of two great wars who gave their lives for freedom.

The fact that the world of today — more than a quarter of a century after the last major conflict — is far from perfect does not erase the memory of those days of sacrifice.

Meanwhile the modern world does offer perhaps more sinister barriers to man's overall progress than did the battlefield in days past. Political intrigue, subversion, the war for men's minds, the Godless breed of Marxism, class hatred and the upsurge of urban guerrilla movements as typified by the FLQ and the IRA . . . these are all matters for concern.

The vicious cycle of unemployment and welfare must be stopped the morale of thousands. This general level of affluence too has weakened the resolution of society at large, making us ill-prepared for any future recession.

But let us remember those men and women who, along with our allies, were equal to the time of national peril. We heard in Flanders Fields recited the other night on television, and from an unlikely source — a good guy from Ireland, from Ulster in fact. He was one of that rollicking group, The Irish Rovers, and this same young man said in a recent interview in Toronto that he was disgusted with what was happening in his homeland, and they no longer included rebel songs in their repertoire, Nor, he said, did that other celebrated group, The Clancy Brothers.

Ireland of course, north and south, had many men in the British army of both world wars, including such men of the general staff, with Ulster connections, as Alexander, Montgomery and Templer. But that is another story.

Here in Canada we think of the awesome confrontations of the first war, the blasted battlefields and the hell of it all, and more recently of such places as Dieppe, Caen and Hong Kong. For those close to those days this is an emotional time. For all of us it is a period for reflection.

More on Crime

If Belleville's crime rate, albeit of a mostly petty nature, is on the increase, reflecting as it does the level in most communities, the situation in Kingston if anything seems to be even more serious.

According to The Kingston Whig-Standard, drug use and sale of drugs in the city is widespread, as is a growing number of break-outs for stolen goods, damage through vandalism is climbing into the thousands of dollars each year, and use and abuse of alcohol by young people under 18 is now an accepted fact. As if this were not enough, there are a number of unsolved murders and other serious crimes on the books.

The newspaper suggests the city police "are either unable to cope with the changing situation . . . or haven't," and goes on to say it is in the process of trying to find out "what is going on in this city with respect to law and order."

To this end the newspaper is soliciting the co-operation of the public for information about the drug situation, stolen property and its sale, the perpetrators of vandalism and so on. It lists a telephone number by which information may be communicated and emphasizes that callers' identity and the information will be kept in strictest confidence.

Kingston's population, with its large student content, its professional people and military, as well as the labor force from area plants, not to mention a prison population from which there have been periodic escapes, poses problems unique to law enforcement problems than most. The newspaper survey therefore could be of inestimable assistance to the police who cannot be expected to be everywhere or completely on top of what appears to be an escalating situation.

Meanwhile, another thought on the crime situation as it pertains to Belleville. Breakins are becoming such a regular occurrence, and particularly at weekends, that if a caretaker were on the premises during the evening and night hours the incidence of these might drop. And what about more widespread use of burglar alarms? Belleville moreover, like Kingston, needs more co-operation on the part of the public in stamping out what we have noted is a steadily escalating disregard for the law and lessening respect for community property and individual rights.

Pensioner Charges 'Discrimination'

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I read with considerable interest a letter from Mr. McKillop in The Intelligencer regarding the disadvantages in Canada Pension regulations.

We could also place the Old Age Pension regulations in the same category with regard to persons who have contributed to Old Age Allowance since its inception and only receive the minimum allowance of $80 per month.

Take me as a case in point, whether allowance is useful or not needed.

During my services of 47 years with CNR I had deducted from my pay cheque the current percentages for Old Age Allowance up to retirement date in 1950. Then the allowance received monthly commenced to be considered as "income" for tax purposes, and again taxed with railway company superannuation. In addition to this a percentage amount is charged, based on income from company superannuation and old age allowance up to, and including the current amount of $80 per month. In other words the old age allowance was accumulated prior to 1950, and since then taxed again, with the company superannuation provided from percentage deduction during the 47 years service for retirement monthly amounts received.

My point is that the $80 from old age allowance, monthly, is too low, for contributions prior to and subsequent to retirement. This is caused by the current act covering minimum wage per annum, which prevents persons who provided for a greater amount from getting it; and those who did nothing.

During their working years are with good wages are now allowed to obtain supplementary Old Age Allowances. It seems that we in the class mentioned above are discriminated against, the same as those mentioned in Mr. McKillop's letter referred to in this letter.

Incidentally, I am 80 years old so you can realize that I have been contributing to old age allowance for a great many years.

Church of Scientology

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The editorial on the Church of Scientology that appeared in your paper on Oct. 19 was a disappointment not only to the staff who are sincerely concerned about the lack of human rights within the field of mental health, but also to several parishioners of the church who had occasion to read it. While we at Freedom Cavalcade of Face do not object to criticism of our viewpoint, we take umbrage at [illegible] inaccuracies.

The Church of Scientology has been incorporated since 1954 as a religious institution and is recognized as such throughout the world. In answer to the statement that the Church "... is a sect whose origins are as mysterious as its philosophy and methods are questionable", we can only point out an obvious lack of research by the writer. If he had taken the trouble to read one of our many publications, he would have learned that our theology is something less than "mysterious" to say the least and our methods about as "questionable" as those of the Roman Catholic or Protestant

Under Way for Some Time

Geneva Site of Talks Seeking Curbs on Bomb Tests

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The controversy about the Amchitka nuclear blast dramatizes the urgency of the generally unnoticed diplomatic talks which have been going on in a serious fashion for many months, pressed forward with dedicated persistence by Canadian and other delegates from around the world.

The alarm of many protesters about the latest American test plans served, among other things, to convey with utmost impact the vital character of the discussions about nuclear issues being held intermittently in that perennial centre of greyly unnoticed diplomatic talks, Geneva.

Widespread fanfare greeted the conclusion in the 1960s of a pact banning nuclear tests in the atmosphere. Adherence to the agreement was not universal, however, and thus atmospheric nuclear blasts have been set off in the years that followed.

Yet the pact was a major step forward in the constant pursuit of world disarmament.

Since then, the biggest challenge in Geneva has been to extend the testing ban to subterranean explosions of the sort regularly conducted by the Soviet Union and the United States.

Complicating the situation still further is the fact that the "nuclear club" made up of Russia, the U.S., Britain and France has grown recently to include China.

Pending the arrival of the Peking delegation to the United Nations, even Moscow's much-vaunted proposals for stopgap action towards disarmament on a sweeping world-wide scale are being kept in abeyance.

Faced with the passionate arguments about Washington's decision to stage the Amchitka blast, Russian officials have at a time—have been relatively silent.

The explanation of this silence

In Remembrance

A day to remember
the horrors of war
In silence to stand and remember once more the thousands of lives that were given that we might live unafraid, in this land of the free.

A day to remember
this freedom so dear was bought with life, blood, suffering and tears.
Then let us remember that love for each other,
can end all wars,
and make each one a brother.

Pencil Chewing Psychology

Watertown Times

Another example of what the generation gap is all about involves the Pencil Makers Association. Their products have recently been criticized because their colorful paints contain lead, a health hazard for the child who is wont to chew his pencil.

Earlier generations of children were forbidden to chew their pencils lest they become ill. Parental and teacher tirades were directed against the vice. This was joined by taunts from the non-chewers. The habit was broken.

Today such criticism and discipline of the chewers is avoided lest the youngster become disturbed psychiatrically. More important, however, is the fact that it is easier to attack the pencil makers, demanding that they get the lead out.

The Canadian statesman at Geneva have been urging increased efforts in this direction and it has appeared that the decision by Amchitka to show the world how crucial such painstaking diplomatic activity is.

Report on Poverty

Guaranteed Income Too Costly--Munro

OTTAWA (CP) — Welfare Minister John Munro poured cold water Wednesday on the idea of a guaranteed annual income for Canadians because it would cost too much.

Senator David Croll (L—Ontario), whose special committee on poverty recommended the income plan, retorted that the country must afford it.

Mr. Munro said the idea of the senators "makes a lot of sense" but the government is not prepared to accept it immediately.

Mr. Munro gave two reasons for not accepting the guaranteed-income plan immediately: It would cost too much and it might undermine the incentive to work among Canadians.

Commenting on the Senate report on poverty, released Wednesday, Mr. Munro said a guaranteed annual income plan might cost anywhere from $1.5 to $2 billion more than current government income-subsidy programs.

The Senate report says the cost could be about $800 to $900 million a year more.

Such amounts, Mr. Munro said outside the Commons, would hit taxpayers too hard.

The government's proposed plan to replace the family allowance system with a family income security plan would cost about $150 million a year, he said.

The new family income plan, announced in September and known as FISP, would replace the current practice of paying monthly allowances to all families with children, regardless of income.

FISP would base payments on family income, family size and the ages of children. Benefits would decrease as a family's income rose.

In the Commons, Mr. Munro said in reply to a question from George Hees (PC—Prince Edward Hastings) that the government would be watching closely pilot provincial projects on guaranteed incomes.

Stalemate on Tax Bill Avoided

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons burst into top speed in debate on the government's tax bill Wednesday, suspending an earlier threat of stalemate to whip through several pages in the 707-page bill during clause-by-clause examination.

The MPs passed 39 subclauses bringing the total approved to 71. The bill has 333 subclauses in all.

The progress came after Steve Otto, parliamentary secretary to Supply Minister James Richardson, proposed that the House stop study of the bill because of the opposition's "sophisticated filibuster."

MPs given all parties voted against the suggestion, which was supported only by Mr. Otto and Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming).

The filibuster charge first arose Tuesday in debate on items dealing with taxation of farmers and another barring a husband from claiming salaries paid to his wife as a tax-deductible business expense.

In the wrangles over these issues—which blocked passage of any clauses Tuesday—Finance Minister E. J. Benson accused the Conservatives of starting a filibuster after the government had agreed to postpone debate on one of the farm clauses pending reconsideration.

But a friendly mood ruled the 264-seat House Wednesday, while attendance in the chamber hovered just above the 20-member quorum.

The going might get rougher Monday, when the House moves on to discuss introducing a capital gains tax, which has been criticized on various grounds by Conservatives and New Democrats.

Winter Works Studied

Many Ask About Projects But No Application Okayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Government officials report "thousands of enquiries" about federal grants for winter job-creating projects.

But—almost a month after Finance Minister E. J. Benson announced the grant programs—no application have been approved. There were 447,000 unemployed persons in mid-October, Statistics Canada has reported.

"It shouldn't be too long now," an aide to Manpower Minister Otto Lang said Wednesday.

A spokesman for the program said in an interview Wednesday that despite the number of enquiries no statistics were available on how many formal applications—available at manpower offices—had been submitted. The application forms were in their third printing, but neither were figures available on how many had been picked up or submitted to manpower offices.

Program administrators would pay particular attention to distributing the federal grants and other employment assistance evenly and fairly across the country, the spokesman said.

But no allocations for expenditure have been made for any region or province.

Education Board Endorses Community School Concept

After a year as a pilot project, one of three in Ontario, Hastings county's community school program has become a permanent part of its educational system.

The program involves using schools after 4 p.m. and in the evening for activities for all age groups in the school neighborhood.

Queen Victoria School in Belleville, Stirling - Senior School and Bancroft Public School were the first to institute community school programs and their principals were on hand in Stirling Monday night to tell trustees how they work.

The community school program in Hastings county began a year ago with a $15,000 grant from the department of education and the appointment of David Smith as community school co-ordinator.

"We are leading the way toward a new concept in education," director of education Eric Runacres told the board after Mr. Smith had presented his report.

Mr. Runacres envisioned a time, perhaps 10 years from now, when doctors, lawyers and other professional people and business men will be used as "resource people" in the schools.

He said that if professional people are to be used in the future for formal education in regular classrooms, a beginning must be made now to enlist co-operation.

But Mrs. Jean Hutchison sounded a warning note about inviting the entire school neighborhood to use the school on a continuing basis.

"We have only so many educational dollars to spend," she reminded trustees. "I wonder if we aren't getting into more than we can handle in spending them on health and recreation and community schools."

Mr. Runacres said that it cost about $80,000 last year to supply buildings for community programs.

"Every time you use this building, which is yours, it is costing you money," he said.

Trustee MacDonald Smith thought the board had a problem of instruction on its hands.

"The role of schools is changing," he said. "We have to get the idea across to government that our role is more than just educating children."

When governments are persuaded that schools are in the recreation and health fields he intimated, more money might be forthcoming to pay the cost of the extra services.

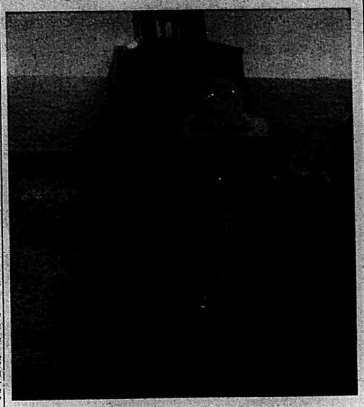
Violence Creeps Back

LONDON (CP) Prince Philip says all the crazy old characteristics of human nature are reasserting themselves with the world forgetting the lessons of the Second World War and the events which led to it.

Speaking at a Canada Club dinner, the Queen's husband said Wednesday: It is somewhat ironic that the longer the so-called peace lasts, the more factional and international bickering goes on."

"The war seemed to have the effect of uniting people—I suppose in self-defence. Now that the outside threat to peace and liberty is not so obvious, people, groups and communities feel safe to indulge in every sort of activity in the name of freedom and independence."



Philip suggested that "the world has forgotten the lessons, not of the last war itself, but of the events which led up to the war."

"Slowly but surely, all the crazy old characteristics of human nature, which are as old as mankind itself, are reasserting themselves and violence creeps back into our daily lives."

No Further Plan Says Benson

OTTAWA (CP) — The government plans no further job-making projects at this time beyond those announced in a billion-dollar package Oct. 14, Finance Minister E. J. Benson says.

Mr. Benson was peppered with questions in the Commons following the announcement by Statistics Canada that unemployment rose by 13,000 to 447,000 in October.

East Germany Could Be Next

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Only the differences between East and West Germany prevent the Canadian government from recognizing East Germany and supporting the entry of both into the United Nations, Prime Minister Trudeau indicated Wednesday.

Mr. Trudeau told a caller on an open-line television program that Canadian government policy is to lead to the recognition of East Germany and support of UN membership.

The prime minister told the caller, who had asked about the possibility of recognition of East Germany, that Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin had raised the same question during his recent visit to Canada.

He said, however, that "pending may be too immediate a word" for dual recognition of two Germanys.

His government accepts the principle of recognition but is waiting for the two governments to settle their border and other differences, he said.

"It is because we want to put some pressure on both Germanys to settle these matters between themselves before supporting the entry of both into the UN."

Asked by telephone on the open-line TV program about the United States' nuclear blast on Amchitka Island in the Pacific Ocean last Saturday, he said that "short of declaring war," the Canadian government did all it could to halt the U.S. nuclear blast on the island.

He told his Windsor audience that Canada's concern was not only with the physical damage that the U.S. nuclear blast could have caused Canada last Saturday; but also with the idea of similar experiments by other nuclear powers.

He mentioned France, the Soviet Union and China—the nations he said could "bring the world closer to the brink of disaster" if they were to follow a like course.

In Petrolia, the prime minister was reminded in a question-and-answer session at a Central collegiate that he once said he didn't "give a damn for public opinion."

He said he had made that statement in writing shortly after he entered politics.

"I said that while I was writing about Quebec nationalism, but I wasn't generalizing."

question pursued it further.

"You got to be prime minister by public opinion, but you don't give a damn."

Mr. Trudeau replied: "We went against public opinion when we changed the Criminal Code on such varying matters as pollution on the high seas and on homosexuality. We went against the current and were elected just the same."

Another questioner asked Mr. Trudeau whether too much emphasis has been placed on party leaders in provincial and federal elections.

The prime minister agreed that that was the case at times.

"If democracy is working well, it should not matter who is elected."

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	1♥	Pass
1NT	Pass	2♥	Pass
3NT	Pass	4♥

Opening lead—two of hearts.

It is generally conceded that defense is the most difficult part of the game. True, some players have a particular aptitude for it, but by and large the Achilles' heel of most players is defence.

One reason is that it is difficult to formulate general rules to govern defence. A player has to do his own thinking as play progresses, and cannot, as he does in bidding, rely on such everyday yardsticks as point, Blackwood, Stayman, and so on.

Take this hand where East is defending against four spades. He cashes the A-K of hearts, which is certainly simple enough, but what should he do next?

It is a virtual certainty that South has the king of spades and ace of diamonds for his bids. The only real chance to stop the contract must therefore lie in West's being able to take a second trump trick with either the ten or nine of spades.

In line with this, East plays another heart at trick three. He knows he is conceding a ruff and discard, but he also knows it will do declarer no good and might, conceivably, do him some harm.

South ruffs in his hand and can do no better than lead a trump to the jack. Pursuing his scheme of defence, East permits the jack to win the trick.

Declarer must now go down whatever he does next. If he continues with a trump, East takes the ace and plays the fourth round of hearts.

West is by now out of hearts and declarer cannot prevent him from scoring the ten of spades as the setting trick. East's decision at trick three to hand declarer a ruff and discard — a play ordinarily frowned upon — bears very good fruit.

Tomorrow: The rebid.

New Church Dedicated

STIRLING (Special) — The new Grace Chapel has been dedicated in Stirling. Two large crowds filled the church to officially mark the opening of the new premises. The services marked completion of plans formulated following the fire that destroyed the previous church building on Front Street in March of 1970.

Music and thanks were the keynotes of the service, with the former provided by the Truth For the Times Trio from Peterborough, which sang twice with piano and guitar accompaniment. Fred Elliott of Belleville, a former member of the church also sang a solo.

Highlight of the service was the history presented by Ernest Belch of Belleville, on behalf of his father, who was unable to attend because of illness. The brief sketch outlined formation of the congregation in 1935, with services held in the old mill until a church was built in 1938. That one was started with a $35 building fund.

Mr. Belch also recalled how Stirling was a rallying point for conferences in years gone by, with 1,000 meals served in two days.

Following a fire on March 4, there was a prayer meeting two days later over a member's store. At this meeting, it was decided to rebuild. The members were overwhelmed by the offers from other churches for facilities, but ended up using the Stirling Public School gymnasium until the present building was ready for use in early 1971.

The building committee, headed by Leon Wilson of Frankford, who conducted the service was composed of George Sutherland, chairman; Donald Vardy, Mike Malloy, Arnold Wannamaker, Paul Tyrer and Rod Moorcroft.

Special speakers for the day were Aubrey Dellandrea from North Bay and Robert McLaren from Guelph.

Following the service, the congregation was invited to tour the building and enjoy refreshments in the basement.

Greek Ladies' Auxiliary Sponsors Tea

By SUSAN KORAH
Weenie's Reporter

An event with distinctly ethnic overtones was the bazaar and tea held on Wednesday afternoon at St. Thomas Parish Hall by the Greek Ladies' Auxiliary.

Prominently displayed in the hall was an attractive arrangement of Greek artifacts and handicrafts, just for the viewing pleasure of the guests. Convened by Mrs. D. Diamantides, the display included a number of realistic-looking dolls dressed in colorful Greek costumes which were richly embroidered and intricately worked right down to the most minute detail. Handwoven fabrics made into beautifully embroidered shoulder bags, wall hangings and tapestries caught the eye with their brilliant colors and attractive designs. Some pieces of highly glazed pottery, brassware and copperware were also displayed which was illustrating some aspect of Greek life, either present-day or of the past.

The entire hall was adorned with gorgeous Greek tapestries and wall plaques displayed on screens at various points. One of the outstanding and most popular of the bazaar tables was the home cooking table with its tempting arrayof Greek pastries convened by Mrs. C. Glouraikos and Mrs. P. Zegouras assisted by Mrs. J. Vrassi. Delicious cakes and breads vied for attention with other goodies including diples, a sweet crisp wafer, usually offered to guests in Greek homes as a sign of friendship.

Aprons of all colors and designs were on display with Mrs. J. R. Barnes in charge, assisted by Mrs. G. Papaefthimiou. The children's table convened by Mrs. A. Manjouris assisted by Mrs. A. Tsouvalis included some knitted berets, toys and a few dolls in beautiful crocheted gowns.

At the Christmas table Mrs. P. Kapantzidis and Mrs. P. Fortis. The new and used table as well as the raffle of a beautifully arranged fruit basket were looked after by Mrs. P. Kapatsas.

Blue and white, the colors of the Greek flag were used in the tea room decor. The main tea table was appointed with a delicate, blue and white lace-effect cloth and centred with a bowl of colorful flowers flanked by white candles.

Pouring honors were done by Mrs. Russell Scott, Mrs. P. M., Mrs. K. J. Yeates, Mrs. J. Vasil, Mrs. J. R. Barnes and Mrs. P. Zegouras.

Tea table conveners were Mrs. J. Tsiakamatas and Mrs. C. Zegouras, assisted by Miss Y. Diamantides, Mrs. G. Syndeto and Mrs. D. Kendall. Helping with the kitchen arrangements were Mrs. F. Karvis, Mrs. G. Kashis and Mrs. Koutsoubis.

Mrs. H. Tsouvalis was in charge of tickets at the door while guests were received by Mrs. D. Diamantides and Mrs. P. Zegouras. The work meetings were supervised by Miss G. Maniates.

Church Groups

CWL, SACRED HEART CHURCH, MARMORA

A series of slides of India was enjoyed by parishioners and members of the CWL of Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, at the November meeting. Mrs. W. Meehan Jr. presided for a short business meeting during which plans were made to cater for a wedding on Nov. 27 and arrangements finalized regarding the Diocesan Council Meeting of Region 7 to be held in Sacred Heart Parish Hall on Sunday, Nov. 7.

Church Lady Secretary, Mrs. T. Hanley, gave a very interesting report on the different kinds of love within the family.

Father Scanlon had on hand two tapes of telephone interviews with the Synod bishops in Rome which were very informative.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. W. Monk. She introduced the guests, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Brown of Picton, who showed and commented on a beautiful series of slides of India which they took during their stay in that country last winter.

Their assignment of six months in India was sponsored by a Canadian Government financed organization — the Canadian Executive Service Overseas, 110 St. Catherine St., Montreal.

This organization accepts retired men to assist companies in developing countries by their knowledge and experience gained over a lifetime.

There is no remuneration but CESO pays transportation of suitable applicants and the company assisted looks after housing and living. First class.

The host country and the limit of any assignment is six months. Mr. Brown was with the Northern Electric Company in Belleville before his retirement.

The wives of advisory assistants are not given specific assignments but usually occupy themselves doing voluntary work with hospitals and schools. Mrs. Brown found that her talents could best be put to work at a school compound and she became very interested in education of Indian children.

Education is not free in India and, as a result, only the children of people with means are educated. Mrs. Brown responded to a request to find sponsors in her own country to educate four young Indian girls, and has since established a trust fund for their higher education from gifts and donations.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown were thanked by the president and presented with a monetary gift from the Marmora CWL.

Chapter Plans 'Fantasy Ball'

The November meeting of the Argyll Chapter IODE was conducted by the Regent Mrs. J. Kobzak.

Following the opening remarks a number of business items were discussed. A rummage sale is planned for Friday Nov. 12 in the Belleville Armories. It was also decided to send Christmas gifts to a specified nursing home and to host a senior citizens' group at the Christmas potluck supper meeting.

The Chapter will lay a wreath at the Cenotaph on Remembrance Day and plans have been started for the annual winter "Fantasy Ball" in January.

Letters of thanks were received from Mrs. Pearl Bedford, Alberta and from students who were the recipients of the Argyll Chapter's scholarship awards of $50 and $100.

Lunch was served by Mrs. P. Till and Mrs. B. Milroy and committee.

Friends Honor Octogenarian

John W. Holmes, RR3, Stirling, was honored recently on the occasion of his 80th birthday when 22 members of his family were present for the occasion.

Mr. Holmes who was born in the Queensboro area retired from the Canadian National Railways in 1959 after 40 years of service, 34 of which he was foreman of the section at Anson Station.

A turkey dinner was served by the women of Mount Pleasant United Church, to which he belongs, and a family sing-song was enjoyed during the afternoon.

He was the recipient of many cards and gifts for which he expressed thanks.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

CANNIFTON — CORBYVILLE WI

Mrs. Nelson Welsh, convener of agriculture was in charge of the program for the November meeting of Canniffon-Corbyville Women's Institute held in the Institute hall with 16 members present. The motto was "A successful farm is a large piece of land covered with perspiration."

The program deals in particular with apples and all joined in singing a song of the farm. A humorous reading was given by Mrs. E. Hinse and Mrs. C. Ellsworth read a parody of the old oaken bucket which pertained to pollution. Mrs. P. Meale read the story of John Chapman entitled Johnny Appleseed and Mrs. Welsh showed slides pertaining to his life accomplished by a record. The story of the McIntosh apple was read by Mrs. H. Walker.

To conclude the program Mrs. Welsh showed slides she had taken on holiday trips and these included views of the Okanagan Valley in B.C. and pictures of the Annapolis Valley in Nova Scotia as well as the seasonal growth of the fruit grown close to home in Prince Edward County beginning with the beauty of the blossoms in spring until apple harvesting in the fall. The packing and packing of other fruits was another feature which was most interesting and educational. Pictures of the grape vineyards of the Niagara Falls were shown and poems were read by Mrs. Welsh and Mrs. H. Windsor.

Mrs. C. Avery chaired the business portion of the meeting and various reports were read. Mrs. E. Morris reported on the new labels to be used on fabrics and clothing and Mrs. Fred Reid brought a splendid report of the recent area convention. Mrs. Ellsworth reported on the meeting of the area directors.

It was noted also that the district annual meeting is to be held May 9, 1972 at St. Mark's Church in Canniffon with the Canniffon - Corbyville branch as hosts. A discussion took place regarding a bazaar in May, after which lunch was served by the hostess Mrs. E. Morris and helpers Mrs. P. Meale and Mrs. J. Latchford.

Smart Gala Occasion Gowns Are Now Back on the Store Racks

NEW YORK (CP) — In the last few years the younger set couldn't find special clothes for the social season and decided any old thing was right for any occasion. Since clothes manufacturers took their cue from the youngsters, over-35s were out of luck.

Now the smart gala-occasion gowns are back on the store racks and women once again can look ultra-demure or femininely sophisticated.

Said fashion expert Eleanor Lambert after the store buyers' orders for fall-winter 1971 were tallied:

"The demand for the supposedly dead cocktail dress and for long evening dresses has astonished the entire market. The long evening skirt has replaced evening pants."

Not, of course, that you won't find evening pant-suits. But in many are full culottes. Pauline Trigere features them separately. One of her culotte-dresses is edged in silver fox.

Mildred Sullivan, director of the New York Couture Business Council, sums up late-day collections this way:

"There's the real dinner dress, dark and seductively bare or covered up and sweeping the ankles . . . dinner suits in glorious fabrics . . . the long skirt, with jewelled cardigan . . . soft bias dresses in chiffon, matte jersey or silk crepe and the long shimmering skirts for formal gowns. It's bye-bye, lame and pastel or cut velvets.

The lowly sweater moves up into evening's elegant ranks, too. Teal Traina firmly believes in "glitter and sweaters for." One of his combinations is a navy silver lurex cardigan dress, buttoning up to a high waistline that stops just short of deeply cleavaged neckline. A blue sweater dress by Suzy Perette is worked with paillettes and Malcolm Charles logo colored sequined suede skirts with metallic ribbed evening sweaters. And while many short and long evening skirts are topped by glamor sweaters, others are combined with soft, full-sleeved satin blouses or romantic crepe-de-chine gowns with gathered shoulders. Jerry Silverman even offers a sleeveless, plunge-neckline fake-leopard bodice with a floor-length black chiffon skirt.

Most cocktail dresses are at knee length. For late-evening parties, it's the ankle and for formal-occasions, floor length.

Several designers like suit or jacketed costume for late-day wear, ranging from Kasper's cocktail-hour peplum suit in red plaid taffeta to Malcolm Charles' black wool-knit tuxedo worn over short white satin skirt and black pailleted top.

Black, says Adele Simpson, "has a new eloquence, especially for little evenings. Black now is sophisticated." To prove her point, Mrs. Simpson showed a dark dramatic black crepe with its own fringed stole. Montreal designer John Warden has "a total black feeling for evenings." He likes black in crepes and jersey, softly fluid and with sex appeal.

Exquisite Jewelry From Gold Nuggets

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although the Klondike gold rush ended nearly 70 years ago, interest in Yukon gold remains as rough nuggets find their way into exquisite jewelry.

At Yukon House in Vancouver, one can see on display watches, cutlery, rings, spoons, earrings and cuff links all created with an eye to the unusual.

George Murdoch, Mike Scott and Bill Wegand, who create the jewelry, try to design pieces that will relate to the Yukon.

A set of gold-plated coffee spoons bear miniature gold panners. Eskimo dog sleds, pans with nuggets and long-horned Yukon goats. These same figures, along with many others, are available in charms as well. All are made of deep, yellow gold.

Real gold nuggets are made into bracelets, ear-rings and charms. B.C. jade, black diamonds and mastodon ivory—found in the Yukon — are coupled with the gold in bracelet, pendant and earring sets.

The ivory was originally found by miners who threw it away, not realizing its historical worth and value.

Rings in pure gold combined with 18-carat gold features unusual stones such as pink star sapphire. The nuggets at times have mixtures of sand or quartz which make them soft in texture and difficult to apply to the ring shank — which is the reason for the 18-carat mixture.

Among novel items are the watch straps, some in tiny gold nuggets, and others combining jade and nuggets.

JEWELRY DESIGN—These rings from Mappin's Colonnade Store, Toronto, are turquoise and diamonds set off with 18 carat gold. In the Middle Ages, rings were worn only by persons of high social rank, but precious stones were surrounded with superstition and considered magical. (CP Photo)

Changes Wings for Nautical Duties

PORTLAND, Me. (AP) — When Donna Jo McDonough exchanged her airline stewardess wings for a berth aboard an international cruise ferry, she began to develop a flair for coping with the unexpected.

As assistant purser on the Swedish-operated Prince of Fundy, the vivacious 24-year-old blonde emerged as the "ship-board" troubleshooter, with her own toolbox to deal with sudden emergencies.

At one time or another, Donna Jo has served as nurse, plumber and general handyman.

"When you live on a ship, you're confined to your own floating world," she explained.

"When something must be done right away, you figure out a way to do it, because you can't summon help the way you could on land."

Such tasks as repairing a clogged drain in a passenger cabin or a broken slot machine in the vessel's popular casino are apt to come up at any time during her 16-to-18-hour work day.

Donna Jo's daily routine begins at 8:30 a.m. when she helps prepare for disembarkation at Yarmouth, N.S., and ends around midnight, three hours after the ferry's departure from Portland.

She supervises the hostesses, helps maintain the ship's records, signs on the crew and offers advice and sympathy to passengers wary of the roll and pitch in the 18-hour voyage across the sometimes choppy Gulf of Maine.

She also tends the information desk, making her the most accessible target for passengers' complaints.

"I got fed up with irregular hours and passenger complaints."

Leave for Maternity Asked to Be Retained

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial council of women recommended Tuesday that Ontario retain its present legislation on maternity leave.

The national report of the royal commission on the status of women recommended changes to entitle women to 18 weeks' maternity leave and six weeks after confinement.

The council, made up of representatives of other Ontario's organizations, recommended that the government retain its present legislation which allows up to 12 weeks' leave for a woman in a business with more than 25 employees.

Other recommendations, presented to the provincial cabinet, called for licensing snowmobile operators, compulsory reporting of child abuse cases, and protection under the Ontario Human Rights Code from discrimination based on sex.

Liver, red meat, egg yolks, whole grain and enriched breads and cereals, dried fruits, dried beans and peas, and dark vegetables like spinach are good food sources of iron.

98th Anniversary

On Sunday, November 7, members and friends of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church celebrated the 98th anniversary of its organization.

Services were conducted by the minister, the Rev. A. Stall, with special music by the choir, directed by the organist, William Connor.

Guest speaker, both morning and evening services, was Professor R. T. Hobbs, of McMaster Divinity College. His messages were challenging and timely.

After the evening service, a coffee hour was enjoyed.

During their stay in Belleville, Professor and Mrs. Hobbs were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Soble.

Is It Independence? -- Or Is It Self Pity?

By DORIS CLARK

A certain elderly lady prided herself on her independence. But from where I sat, she was too blessed independent for words.

She refused invitations to play bridge because she said she was invited out of pity. It wasn't until a less self-conscious — and less standoffish — contemporary took her to task that she changed.

Her friend said to her: "Your garden is lovely and you tell me that from time to time neighbors drop in just in order to enjoy your roses and pass the time of day." The lady granted this was true, but could not see the connection.

Her friend suggested: "Then every time these people invite you to play bridge, you should invite them in to see your garden. You can take pity on them too!"

The lady laughed and mulled. Got a glimpse of the fact that she was, after all, a worthy individual with something to offer.

Self-pity is self-destruction. And what is a too-rigid independence but a defence put up by the person who is secretly sorry for himself?

Dear Doris: Just a few of my thoughts re your reply to the mother who was troubled about her son keeping the drapes shut and all his fears. She seems ignorant of mental health problems and one can presume that a person with so little insight into her son's behavior would not know the full meaning of "paranoid schizophrenia."

This advice being handed over to her in a newspaper, however accurate, could cause her to panic and further damage her relationship with her son. It is often a long time before one can get an appointment with a doctor, and the waiting period could be one of agony for the whole family. — Concerned

Dear Concerned: I agree — to a point. My actual message to the mother went to her in a private letter in somewhat fuller form. I published it because I thought it might help another mother to identify a similar illness and do something about it while there was still time.

Another reader wrote in response to the same letter, telling of a brother whose similar symptoms led not been caught and treated, and who is now hopelessly schizophrenic — "a vegetable," she said.

Isn't this something to press the panic button about?

Dear Doris: My sister has a daughter visiting her for several weeks. She is out of her teens and seems to have little respect for her mother's home. She is a cigarette smoker and of course her mother is annoyed to see her fagging up her nice furnishings, etc.

Don't you think she ought to use her good common sense to break the habit, even for three reasons: acquiring and smoking up the place, and money spent that she cannot afford, besides injuring her own health? — Nellie

Dear Nellie: Cigarette smoking is still socially acceptable and we just don't dictate to people about the many ways in which cigarettes are false friends. We do have to consider individual concerns such as:

If your sister is fond of her daughter and likes having her around, it is for just the time when she can say or even show disapproval of a personal habit like this one. All such judgments will do is leave the two of them feeling annoyed with each other. Mother would be wise to console herself with the thoughts of finding a good air-freshener after her daughter goes!

But it is the health angle that gets me!

What's troubling you? Putting it on paper to Doris is the first step towards solving your problem.

Ann Landers

Mother Berates Some 'Statuesque' Girls

Dear Ann Landers: I want to say a few words to that big-mouth mother who was made because her "statuesque" daughter decided to marry "a dwarf." Big — shmig! — inches shorter than her Venus de Mile. She was worried about her unborn grandchildren—afraid they would be runts.

I am the mother of two young men, one 5-feet-4, the other 5-feet-5. Both my boys are being chased night and day by women of all ages. The fact that my sons are not six-footers does not seem to matter to them. Most of the women who are running after my boys are at least 5-feet-6 and plenty beautiful.

This brings me to another point. I've seen some of the girls described by their mothers as "statuesque." They are long drinks of water with as much shape as a string of spaghetti. They will be lucky to get any kind of husband. I hope you print this. P.S.—How tall is your daughter? Does she have a husband yet?—Da Record

Dear Da: Here's your letter. Our daughter is 5-feet-4. Yes, she has a husband. He is 6-feet-2.

Dear Ann Landers: We bought a big house near the high school because we have three children of high-school age and I was sick and tired of all the driving back and forth. I am sorry to say the house has an extra bedroom. My brother has a 6ash-age boy he wants us to take for his last two years of high school. They live on the other side of town and the boy has been in some difficulty with the high school authorities near their home. He was not exactly expelled but there was some trouble.

I will be perfectly honest and tell you that I have enough trouble handling my own three kids and I don't want any more challenges. Our son has not smoked pot or messed with drugs that we know of and the nephew has. I don't want this sort of influence around my kids, but I can't come out and say so.

My mother is pressuring me to take my brother's boy but I do NOT want him. Please advise at once.—Dilemma In Dayton

Dear Di: Boarding and rooming high school kids is a gigantic responsibility. Tell your relatives, sorry, we can't handle it." If they get mad, so what! In a situation like this someone invariably ends up mad. Better them than you.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm driving myself nuts because I can't make up my mind. Should I have a face lift?

I'm a good looking, good figure, divorced four years, and getting panicky. The competition for a husband in this town is fierce. The young divorcees get the cream of the crop.

Some days I think I look great. Other days I feel like an ugly old woman. I'm good at applying makeup, and in a dimly lit room I could pass for 40. In sunlight I look every day of my age and I hate it.

I've known women who have had great results with lifts, others were better off before and are sorry they did it. Please help me decide.—Mother Earth of Taber, Alta.

Dear Mother: I'm taking a pass. You might be thrilled with the results—then again, you might be sorry. Of one thing I am sure, however. If your are counting on a face lift to change your life you shouldn't have one —it won't do it. My advice is to consult with a plastic surgeon whose results you have seen and liked. His opinion will be worth a lot more than mine.

Age No Barrier for 79-year-Old

CALGARY (CP) — When Olga Valda was 59 she received a bachelor of arts degree in archeology.

That was in 1959 because she wanted to prove age is no barrier. "People were always telling me that I couldn't think and couldn't do it at my age."

The former French prima ballerina, who turns 79 next February, now is planning on a master of arts degree if she overcomes a cataract operation on her right eye. She lost her left eye in an accident in the 1930s at Shaunavon, Sask.

For Madame Valda, at 110 pounds and "needing one-quarter inch" in height five feet, her possible return to the University of Calgary would be just another step in a busy life.

"I've never relaxed because I don't know how to relax. . . . I just regret I didn't start earlier to do the things I'm doing now—particularly painting and going to university."

She's a gritty little woman who spent her old-age pension for tuition and books; taught ballet to pay the grocery bills while attending university, and wants to see life a generation from now.

It's this energy and enthusiasm which has involved her in a number of "happenings," one of which she describes as the greatest honor she has received.

That was in 1949, when Madame Valda and Calgary artist Gerda Christoffersen became the first white women to participate in the Sun Dance of the Stony Indians at Banff, Alta.

They danced all day, stopping only once for coffee.

She's an avid artist and has sold a number of paintings of native and theatrical masks. She never knows how a painting will turn out and usually has a face in the picture which she doesn't plan.

Several of her paintings are heads of devils and gods and she has done research in sacred dancing rituals while at the British Museum in London.

Madame Valda, who started ballet at the age of seven at the Paris Opera House and moved to Canada in 1919, now is a fan of Prime Minister Trudeau.

NIB Secretary Proud of Indian Background

OTTAWA (CP) — Marie Marule says she's proud of her Indian background and its culture and isn't afraid to say what she thinks.

The new secretary-treasurer of the National Indian Brotherhood said she feels that Canadian Indians should be integrated with the rest of the population but they should never be assimilated.

She said recent demonstrations at Saddle Lake near St. Paul, Alta., by Irale parents concerned over school conditions, had been brewing for a long time.

"We rejected the department of Indian affairs white paper as stated in recommendations of policy on education made in June. We thought Indian Affairs Minister Chrétien approved but he rejected most of them on Sept. 17 in a speech."

For Wives of Prisoners

Group Meetings Ease Tension

TORONTO (CP) — Weekly meetings are helping a group of Toronto women endure the tension-filled days and nights while their husbands are in prison.

The 15 or 20 women, whose husbands are serving time in one of the five penal institutions in Ontario, not only attend the group meetings to ease tension. They encourage any wife who has a problem to seek help and if one wife lacks the answer, one of the many volunteers may provide it.

The meetings are an offshoot of a program called Operation Springboard started in Toronto last year by two former prisoners in the Wentworth Institution.

One of them, Don Bailey, started it with the idea of "helping a man make the leap from prison to the street without getting smashed in the process." He figured helping wives and families was part of the program.

The women ask that their real names not be used because they rarely tell anyone where their husbands are.

Said one:

"If you go for a long time and don't tell anyone where he really is, it builds and builds inside of you until you want to scream 'He's in jail! What does it matter to you?'"

One of the big problems is visiting their husbands in jail to give and get a little moral support.

But some wives are on welfare and there's no money for travelling. For those who have jobs, it means stretching the budget.

The volunteers help by organizing rides to such institutions as those in Kingston or Joyceville.

Mr. Bailey hopes that volunteers will do much more than just provide rides.

"We ask more—for an ability to share and be a friend to an inmate and his family," he says.

"Volunteers will be a friend in the sense that "You may ask me to drive you to the pen, but I may ask you to do something for me." Volunteer Adrianne Greeves says the women want to set their own goals.

"The women are really very independent and if they can't get rides from people willing to offer them, they want to make their own money," Miss Greeves said.

"Getting together like this is just the thing," said one of the wives. "It must get you out of your depression."

Slashed Child's Shoe Historical Mystery

HAMILTON (CP) — A small child's shoe, slashed at the ankle, represents an historical mystery transplanted from southern England to the Niagara Peninsula.

The little shoe was found in the wall of a house built in St. David's about 1800 and during the Lundy's Lane Historical Museum.

The shoe probably belonged to a child about five years old. It is well worn and part of the heel is missing. At the front of the ankle are cuts that could not be accidental. One, pointing toward the toe, is about 1¼ inches long. Crossing it is a cut about half an inch long.

Mrs. J. C. Collard of Burlington, chairman of the Costume Society of Ontario, says shoes similarly slashed have been found built into houses in the southern half of England and in Wales. The only other known example in North America was found in Williamsburg, Virginia.

Mrs. Collard has a letter from June Swann, assistant curator of the Central Museum in Northampton, describing the practice as Miss Swann has encountered it in research on the subject.

Miss Swann says the shoes often date from a time when the houses were built or remodeled. They may have been good luck charms, or meant to ward off evil spirits—"almost as though the house had to be consecrated to its owner."

She says some have turned up with the remains of chickens which apparently had been sacrificed.

The Canadian shoe was found in the 1940s. The house is one of two in the village of St. David's that were not burned by United States troops during the War of 1812.

It is the only such shoe Miss Swann has heard of in Canada, but she says she feels there must be more examples.

Stop Stains

If you put a plastic bag over the head of your oil mop before storing it the mop won't dry out or leave stains in your utility closet.

Marie went on to the University of Alberta from 1962 to 1966 and needs only two courses to get her BA in sociology and anthropology.

She spent four years in Zambia with Canadian University Service Overseas and married an African freedom fighter, now at the University of Ottawa.

She returned to Canada because she missed the reserve. Later she became executive assistant to George Manuel, president of NIB.

Marie finds her job "challenging and exciting."

She is concerned with conferences, meetings, office procedure, filing, budgets, staffing "and, of course, lobbying," she said with a grin.

She said her main quarrel with the department of Indian affairs is bureaucracy and too rigid personnel.

Overflow Crowd of 275 Attends United Church Centennial Service

RAWDON — On Nov. 7 the centennial anniversary service of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon United Church was held with Rev. Fred Jobbs of Port Credit as guest minister.

Approximately 275 persons were in attendance and a fine speaker carried the service to an overflow group in the church hall. Former members were present from Copetown, Oshawa, Picton, Trenton, Campbellford, Madoc, Belleville and the surrounding area.

The memorial flowers were at the front of the edifice and were in memory of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wehr and their daughter Elda Stone, and in memory of Dan Campbell.

Mrs. Mac Sharp at the organ, Harvey Couch, with the harmonica and Kennedy Couch, accordion rendered a musical prelude previous to the service. The Junior choir rendered a selection with Miss Jeanette Heard as accompanist and Miss Brenda Williams as director; Mrs. James Heard directed the senior choir in a special number.

Rev. W. G. Cox conducted the service and dedicated a new pulpit chair in memory of Mr. and Mrs. C. McConnell, by Mr. David, daughter, Mary Ellen and son Roy. The donors were Raymond and Helen McConnell, Mona David and daughters Rae and Debbie.

Guest speaker, Mr. Jobbs gave a message of gratitude to those pioneers who built Hubble Hill Episcopal Methodist Church in 1871 which was renamed Mount Pleasant in 1900. He also paid tribute to all those who had served the church down through the years and who now rest from their labors.

He remainced of his days in the Stirling area when his father, the late Fred G. Jobbs was pastor of Rawdon charge for 12 years.

In closing he congratulated the membership of today who have carried on the traditions of by-gone days.

At the close of the service 250 people enjoyed a full course chicken dinner in the church hall. The centennial committee and several UCW members were in charge of the arrangements.

This was the close of five special services held during 1971 to mark centennial year.

Designers Often Confused with Decorators

WINNIPEG (CP) — A representative of the Interior Designers' Institute of Manitoba says that interior designers, often confused with interior decorators, are given less credit than they deserve.

Donna Mae Yeo, a public relations representative, said in an interview here that "anyone can call himself an interior decorator."

She said registered members of the institute have recognized degrees in interior design and associate members have years of working experience in the field.

Recent graduates of interior design are not accepted as associate members until they have completed two years of working experience. Last year, the Manitoba institute had 40 registered members, 18 associate members and eight non-resident associates.

"I know of no other profession which the average person believes he can practise with no training or experience. You seek out an interior designer for help in decorating just as you would go to a doctor for medical help."

Mrs. Yeo said the general public is geared to what they see in the stores—often a limited selection of what is available. Interior designers were aware of new products not always known to consumers.

She said interior designers concentrate more on their customers' backgrounds and financial ability to create a suitable home environment instead of fashion trends that influence the general public.

Grand Master Honored by Masons

STIRLING — Stirling Masons sponsored a gala event to honor William R. Bailey of Toronto, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Ontario who came home to his own lodge which he joined in 1933.

The members of Lazrel Rebekah Lodge served a roast beef dinner to about 300 guests in the IOOF banquet hall.

In his address the Grand Master gave a little of the historic background of Masonry in connection with Stirling Lodge No. 99. He is the first Grand Master to pay an official visit to Stirling. He was born in Rawdon township and is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Bailey. Three of his brothers, Clarence of Smiths Falls, Ross of Belleville and Gordon of Stirling hold office in Masonic Lodges and were in attendance at the reception.

During the evening a sister Mrs. Cora Bailey of Peterborough made the presentation to her brother of a formal portrait of himself. He later presented this to Ralph Clements, Worshipful Master of Stirling and it will be placed in a prominent spot in the Masonic Temple.

James Pollock presented the Grand Master with a gift on behalf of No. 99.

Exeter, Robert C. Hoard welcomed the guests. Following the reception a Masonic meeting was held in the Lodge hall.

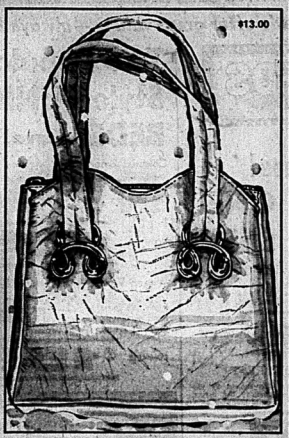
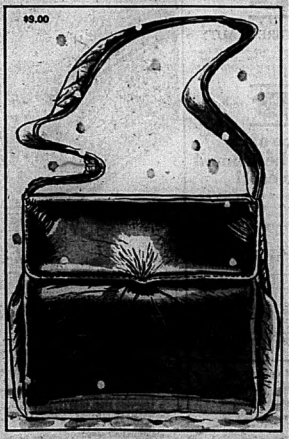
PEI Oldest Resident 106



CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Mrs. Martin MacNeil, believed to be Prince Edward Island's oldest resident, celebrated her 106th birthday at a nursing home here recently.



A native of P.E.I. who was brought up on a farm, Mrs. MacNeil recalled on her birthday the days when people lived in log cabins, used candles for lighting, cooked on an open fireplace and travelled by ox-cart. She attributed her longevity to living one day at a time and practising moderation in all things. One of Mrs. MacNeil's sisters, Catherine, died a few years ago at the age of 110.

Trenton Seepage Not So Bad

TRENTON (Staff) — A report from engineers Gore and Storrie on the problem of infiltration of water into the town's sewer system does not leave the town in a sound position to appeal the construction of an addition to the sewage treatment plant here.

The report discussed by council Tuesday at its second committee of the whole meeting in as many days follows a detailed survey of the sewers by the Toronto consulting firm. Gore and Storrie say that infiltration is not as bad as the town had anticipated it might be.

However, the engineers say there is a sizable concentration in the Ford Street area that may be rectified at some saving to the town. One source said today it is doubtful if checking the infiltration in Trenton would reduce the price tag on the proposed addition to the treatment plant by more than $200,000.

It is expected a delegation from town council will go before the Ontario Water Resources Commission armed with the report to secure a modest reduction in the scope of the plant and bid to have the construction completed in stages rather than all at once.

Bicyclist Injured

PICTON (Staff) — A Picton boy was treated at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital Tuesday for injuries sustained when the bicycle he was riding collided with a car at the corner of Prospect Ave. and Grove St.

Injured was 15-year-old Wilfred Maracle, Chapel St. A spokesman for the Picton police department said the boy was pedalling east on Grove St. when his bicycle collided with a car driven by Joseph D. Legere, St. of Prospect Ave. The cyclist was thrown to the grass shoulder of the street. Following treatment for minor shoulder and leg injuries he was released from hospital last night. The incident that occurred at 5:30 p.m. was investigated by Constable Harry Sisty.

No Plan Yet To Close Office

Reorganization of area assessment offices of the Dept. of Municipal Affairs is being considered but there has been no indication this might result in a shutdown of its Belleville office, a local departmental official says.

"Some consideration" has been given to reorganizing area offices but "nothing has been decided yet," said Robert Craig, area director of municipal affairs area office in Belleville.

The office is distinct from the provincial government assessment offices in Trenton. The Trenton office deals directly with the public on a regional basis — in this case Hastings and Prince Edward counties. The Belleville office works over a larger area and co-ordinates the field work of various regional offices—from Frontenac County to Victoria County. It has a staff of eight.

The Belleville office, on Dundas Street East, has been operating two years, and is only one of seven area offices throughout the province, said Mr. Craig.

"All I can say is nothing has been decided yet," said Mr. Craig, when queried on any likelihood the Belleville area office might be affected in any reorganization. "They (the department) are looking at alternatives and as to whether or not that happens I couldn't tell you."

Candy Kisses Too Sticky ?

PICTON (Staff) — Occasionally Hallowe'en pranks involve threats with teeth in them, according to a recent advertisement in the local press.

A Toronto resident, haunting Prince Edward during the weekend of ghosts and goblins, has inserted an ad in the "lost" column in an effort to recover his dentures.

It is noted that a set of false teeth was lost while "playing trick or treat."

Energy Talks May Resume

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and the United States will discuss a revival of suspended talks between the two countries on trade in energy resources at a meeting of officials here next week.

The meeting will be a continuation of a session between senior officials last Thursday about their differences on trade and economic policies and programs.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said in the Commons Wednesday there may be resumption of energy policy talks in the near future.

Meetings on meshing energy policies, under way for two years, were suspended when Canada told the U.S. last month it had more serious problems to worry about—a reference to protectionist U.S. economic policies introduced Aug. 15, including the 10 per cent surtax against imports.

Mr. Sharp said he understood that a U.S. official would like to come to Canada and talk about reopening the energy discussions.

He later told reporters the economic talks would be resumed within days—an official later said sometime next week —and the Americans might want to bring up the question of trade in gas and oil.

A cabinet aide later said that the U.S. official Mr. Sharp referred to in the House who wanted to discuss re-opening the energy talks would be at the meeting of the trade and economic officials.

The minister's Commons answer came in reply to a series of questions from Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North), who wanted to know whether the National Energy Board had yet made decisions on applications to add almost 2.5 trillion cubic feet to Canada's exports of natural gas to the U.S.

Mr. Woolliams said that some Alberta drilling rig companies are either going into liquidation or closing down operations.

Mr. Sharp said the report of the energy board on gas applications heard last summer has not yet reached the cabinet.

Asked by Mr. Woolliams which country halted the energy talks, Mr. Sharp said:

"Perhaps indirectly the U.S. did by putting other measures ahead of oil and gas or energy talks."

"Do you mean the surtax?" asked Mr. Woolliams.

"That's right," said Mr. Sharp.

Ontario PCs Plan Strategy

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Progressive Conservative party organizers of the Oct. 21 Ontario election campaign have been told to gear up to participate in the federal election expected next year.

While Premier William Davis met with four senior cabinet ministers Tuesday in Muskoka the paper says about 20 organizers met in Toronto with co-chairmen Hugh Segal, Premier Davis's aide and adviser, and Norman Atkins, planner of the election advertising campaign.

The paper says the organizers were told that Mr. Davis intends to take a strong personal interest in keeping the party organization strong, and that the party was in poor shape prior to the election last month.

The strength of the provincial party organization will be maintained in part by heavy involvement in the next federal election, the paper says.

Hamilton Protests Aid Plan

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Mayor Vic Copps charged Wednesday that the federal government is "moving unemployment from Amherst, N.S. to Hamilton."

He was commenting on a $235,950 federal grant given to Aerovox Canada Ltd. to help the company move its Hamilton operation to a new $600,000 plant in Amherst.

"It just doesn't make sense to use our tax funds to take jobs away from our citizens," Mr. Copps told board of control.

Paul MacPhee, Aerovox vice-president and general manager, said the grant had nothing to do with the company's decision to leave Hamilton.

Named to New Forces' Hall of Fame

After Bumpy Ride, Flyers Have Happy Landing

by Maurice Switzer
Sports Editor

TRENTON — Ever since he joined the 1948 RCAF Flyers, Canada's representatives in the Fifth Winter olympics, Orval "Red" Gravelle has a had good cause to be skeptical about hockey.

But the obstacle-entangled route the Flyers took to a gold medal seemed more worthwhile when the Trenton machinist this week learned that he and his teammates had been named to the new Canadian Armed Forces Sports Hall of Fame.

The 1948 team and 11 individuals are the first to be named to the hall, which was established last year and will be housed in the new forces headquarters building under construction in Ottawa.

"It's really a great honor but I hadn't heard anything about it," Gravelle said, adding, "but that's probably because I'm not in the forces anymore."

Since retiring as a CFB Trenton-based sergeant last year, Gravelle has been an instructor - supervisor in the machine shop at Warkworth Penitentiary.

But his destiny dates from the autumn of 1947 when the promising young forward from Aylmer, Quebec was recruited while on the pre-season exhibition tour with the New York Rangers camp.

Barely three years before, Gravelle, whose wiry redhair made "Carrot" a natural nickname, was playing goal at St. Paul's School in Aylmer. "The Brothers put me in net because I was small and used to get in trouble playing forward," he grins.

The National Hockey League Rangers eyed Gravelle as a flashy skater with the Ottawa Senator Juniors and he was attending their camp when George Dudley, then president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, made the first olympic overture to him.

The financially - plagued CAHA couldn't hope to send a hockey representative to the first post - war Olympic Games, so the Canadian Government took matters into hand, giving RCAF Squadron Leader "Sandy" Gardiner-Watson, as manager, and coach Frank Boucher, nephew of the famous New York Rangers player the job of producing some sort of Canadian contender. He CAHA donated $13,000 and their scouting services.

Seven of the Flyers were previously enlisted men. But the remainder, including Gravelle, were new recruits. Only Gravelle was to remain in the Canadian Armed Forces for more than a hockey hitch.

His mother's well - worn scrapbook chronicles the Flyers' brief, and often bewildered history.

Gravelle joined the Flyers' Ottawa training camp in November of 1947, earning a $50 monthly basic pay.

An Ottawa Journal headline of the day said the Canadian team "didn't look like worldbeaters". On Dec. 19, the Flyers were hard - pressed to beat a team of Belleville intermediates 8-4. Leo Goyer scored two goals against the team that was to become world champions.

"RCAF Squad Counted Out", was one newspaper's glum prediction as the Canadians went into the final stages of their training.

On the eve of the departure, Gravelle experienced his first setback. "The people of Aylmer were going to have a 'night' for me — give me all sorts of gifts, you know—but they had to call it off at the last minute.

The reason? Olympic dictator Avery Brundage let it be known he frowned on such frivolities and Canadian team organizers got word that Gravelle's amateur status could be jeopardized by accepting the radios and other send-off presents his hometown supporters had planned for him.

Next came the problem of adapting to European rules.

"I was penalty - prone," Gravelle explains and Frank Boucher was on my back continually about it. Then in the first exhibition game we played in Zurich, I learned fast. A couple of guys laid me flat on my back, then smiled and helped me up. I learned fast."

The entire Flyer team was jolted in a bus accident within 24 hours of a car - train accident Gravelle's father encountered back home.

But when the Olympic Tournament began the undaunted Canadians proceeded to stun observers by beating Sweden 3-1, Britain 3-0, Poland 15-0, Italy 21-1 in a game a Canadian press dispatch said "was watched by 75 persons who cheered lustily every time the Italians had the puck, the United States 12-3, Then came a key scoreless tie against Czechoslovakia in their only indoor game, a 11-0 win over Austria in a blizzard, and a 3-0 win over the Swiss that clinched the gold medal.

The Czechs also finished the tourney unbeaten, but the Flyers had a better goal average, with Murray Dowey only giving up five goals in the eight games. Dowey used the same goal stick throughout the entire tournament.

Even after accomplishing a minor miracle, the Flyers were doomed to more than their fair share of obscurity.

Most of the Olympic limelight was stolen by Canada's only other gold medallist. She was, like Gravelle, 19. But her name was Barbara Ann Scott and she had become the first Canadian woman to win an Olympic skating title. And, after all, hockey titles were not new in Canada then.

If the Flyers thought they had passed the last hurdle, they changed their minds while rounding off an exhibition tour. A visit to Czechoslovakia coincided with the Communist takeover of that country, and the Flyers found themselves holed up in a hotel with machine guns sounding in the streets.

"We had to have an RAF fighter escort out of the country," Gravelle postscripted.

Perhaps a fitting ending would have been a return voyage to Canada on the Titanic, but the Queen Mary brought the Flyers home intact after a 15,000-mile European adventure that saw them play 42 games in 76 days, losing only five.

The team's last game before disbanding was a 6-3 loss to an all-star team that included names like Doug Harvey, Sid Smith, Buddy O'Connor, Phil Maloney, Kimmy Peters and Frank Eddolls.

Irving Taylor gave the Flyers the last word with a goal at 18.30 of the third period, with one point going to Orval Gravelle.

The redhead played 11 years of senior hockey from Sudbury to Smiths Falls after that. He helped organize the G I's to defend the intermediates when he was first stationed in Trenton in 1952, and won the Maritime League scoring title in his last senior season in 1964-65.

Gravelle coached a Belleville junior B team that included Dennis, Gary, and Ron Hull, Larry Mavety, and Murray "Moe" Hunter, the current Belleville junior coach. He later coached Trenton's junior Golden Hawks, and is active as an OHA official.

"I'm still playing industrial league, you know," the affable Gravelle informs. "Last Sunday I wacked in six goals. I like to work up a sweat once a week.

Hip Deformity Blamed on Sports

LONDON (CP) — A British doctor who has conducted research into causes of hip disease says he believes too much sport can be a bad thing for youngsters.

Dr. Charles Murray, member of the London Institute of Orthopaedics, says heavy emphasis on games at school can result in premature arthritis of the hip. A survey lends weight to his contention.

Dr. Murray, 43, x-rayed the hip bones of 250 youths aged between 17 and 21. Some attended a private boarding school where games are encouraged while the others went to schools where sport is voluntary.

Despite a similarity in height and weight among the boys, the incidence of hip deformity was 24 per cent higher among those from the private school, the survey showed.

Many young athletes, Dr. Murray reports, complain of hip pains and even a limp during their school years. Until now this has been dismissed as "growing pains".

He first linked athletics with hip diseases when he found that at times as many men than women suffered from this type of arthritis. It was particularly apparent among those with distinguished athletic records, especially in jumping.

Pontiac on clean air.

Clean, bracing, fresh air...how precious it is. And so worth preserving for us all. That's the way the people at General Motors feel and have felt for a long time. Over the years, General Motors has been searching for new means to make cars and factories run cleaner. And progress is being made in the past decade, GM has reduced by at least 80% the amount of unburned hydrocarbons emitted by a car's engine. And has cut the amount of carbon monoxide by nearly two-thirds. Both amounts compared to cars without pollution controls. That's a lot of progress. But we can't leave it entirely to the engineers and scientists. You, too, can help by keeping your car's engine properly tuned and regularly serviced. After all, we are working towards the same goal. Clean, pollution-free air. And we will achieve it. GM's 1972 cars and trucks are on the right road.

CFL Statistics Fail to Show any Team with Much Advantage

TORONTO (CP) — Statistical comparisons of teams heading into Canadian Football League playoffs this weekend fail to show any team with much of an advantage.

The comparisons based on the three games finished this season between Calgary Stampeders and Saskatchewan Roughriders and Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tiger-Cats, were prepared by the CFL.

Other all-star defensive picks are end Dan Dulmage, cornerback Henry Doherty, defensive back Dave Clarke and Hill, the captain.

In eight OUAA games this season, Mustangs displayed their preference for ground plays, trying only 119 passes and completing 50, including six for touchdowns.

Western's losses this season were against the University of Toronto, 27-9, against McMaster University of Hamilton, 17-16, Saskatchewan is at Calgary Thursday in the first week of their best-of-three Western Football Conference final. Sunday, Toronto is at Hamilton in the start of their two-game, total-points Eastern Conference match.

The Stampeders and Roughriders split their three-game season series, each winning one game and tying the other.

Statistics of their three games show the Roughriders with a 655-288 edge in rushing yardage, but the Stampeders had the advantage in passing with 530 yards to 402.

The Stampeders outscored the Roughies 43-31.

Hamilton, meanwhile, took two games from Toronto and outscored the Argos 67-54.

Toronto, however, held the edge in offensive power with 674 yards to Hamilton's 528 by passing. The Ticats managed only 203 yards on the ground against Toronto and 401 yards passing.

Toronto's Joe Theismann, however, covered up by intercepting the Argo passes and returned two of them for touchdowns. Toronto picked off seven Ticat passes and converted only one into a touchdown.

The Ticat defence also collected two touchdowns out of seven Argo fumbles while Toronto picked up only three Hamilton fumbles and didn't score with any of them.

Mustangs Defy Skeptics On Eve of Atlantic Bowl

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — "Some people don't believe it," growls George Hill, captain of the University of Western Ontario Mustangs who won a berth in Saturday's Atlantic Bowl football playoff with a dollar against St. Mary's Huskies.

The Mustangs, with a 5-3 won-lost regular season record in the Ontario Universities Athletic Association, trampled Queen's University 42-3 in the OUAA semi-finals at Kingston before their 13-6 finals victory against Ottawa on a wet and snowy campus here.

"They think the win over Queen's was a fluke," said Hill slightly annoyed. "And they figure that we caught Ottawa on a bad day."

Not so, says coach Frank Consolino, for whom the OUAA crown was reminiscent of the last time Western won the Bowl.

That was in 1959 when Consolino played on the winning squad before moving up to the Canadian Football League with Edmonton, Toronto and Hamilton.

The running game, Mustangs chief source of offence, features four backs: Bruce MacRae, 209 pounds, Perc Dennis, 195, sophomore Dave Kerr, 186, St. Catharines, Ont., Pete Quigley, 203, London and Bob Kerr, 195, Sarnia, Ont.

MacRae and Kerr have been the traditional starters this season with Quigley and Wilson usually in reserve.

The squad also boasts Terry Harvey, a flanker, and quarterback Ken Rocca, the only two Mustangs players selected to the offensive line of the OUAA western section all-star team.

End Steve Derbyshire, a defensive all-star pick, will be out of action against St. Mary's due to an injury in the game with Queen's.

Maritime Winners Ride Unbeaten String

HALIFAX (CP) — With his team's performance just peaking, St. Mary's Huskies' coach Al Koth is optimistic about Saturday's Atlantic Bowl football contest here against University of Western Ontario Mustangs.

The Huskies capped an undefeated Maritime Football Conference season Saturday with a 55-7 victory over Mount Allison Mounties. Koth called it "the best game the Huskies played all year."

He said he feels the club is as stryng, or stronger, than it has been at any time during the regular season and he openly has predicted a win against the Mustangs.

St. Mary's athletic director Bob Hayes scored the Mustang's 13-0 victory over University of Ottawa Gee'Gees Saturday for a berth in the Atlantic Bowl.

Hayes said the Mustangs are a little bigger than the Huskies, but he still predicts a win for the hometowners.

The Huskies' attack centres on all-star quarterback Bill Robinson, a nominee for the Hec Creighton award for the most valuable player in Canadian intercollegiate football.

The 20-year-old Toronto native connected on 60 of 114 pass attempts in the Huskies schedule and their game plan will probably call for ball control, with Robinson attempting to pick the Mustangs' defence apart with short passes.

Alcindor Gets Another Name

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

They called him Mr. A when he led UCLA to three straight national collegiate basketball championships.

Now a star in the National Basketball Association with the champion Milwaukee Bucks, the 6-foot-2 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar — formerly known as Lew Alcindor, has been tagged as a "big safety valve."

Cotton Fitzsimmons, coach of the Phoenix Suns, used that appelation for Jabbar after he scored 44 points in leading the Bucks from behind to beat the Suns Tuesday night. Jabbar did it again Wednesday night, getting 31 points as the Bucks creased an 11-point deficit to beat Atlanta 116-110.

Cincinnati Royals downed New York Knicks 99-85, Chicago Bulls tripped Baltimore Bullets 125-106, Detroit Pistons routed Portland Trail Blazers 130-122, Los Angeles Lakers crushed Philadelphia 76ers 143-103 and Boston Celtics overwhelmed Houston Rockets 142-103 in other NBA games.

In the American Basketball Association, Utah edged New York Nets 127-110, Indiana overpowered Pittsburgh 154-125, Dallas clubbed Dallas 118-89 and Virginia edged Floridians 119-116.

Lou Hudson of Atlanta outscored Jabbar with 41 points, but as Fitzsimmons put it "the Bucks play with confidence when they're behind." It was Milwaukee's 12th victory against one defeat so far this season.

Nate Archibald led Cincinnati with 22 points as the Royals pulled away from a 42-42 halftime tie to whip the Knicks.

Jerry Sloan led the Bulls over the Bullets with 25 points. Jimmy Walker, with 31, paced Detroit.

The Lakers had an easy time downing the 76ers for their fifth straight victory. Lead by Gail Goodrich's 34 points. The Celtics also coasted against the Rockets, at one time holding a 40-point bulge. John Havlicek led Boston with 28.

Nicklaus-Trevino Duo Top-heavy Favorites

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Don't bet the farm, fly jewels on the Romanians in the 19th World Cup golf championships. A three-legged horse in the Kentucky Derby has a better chance.

"It was worth our trip just to see the Romanian flag raised with all the others," said 61-year-old Pavel Tomsa, a pro in Bucharest. "We know we cannot win, but maybe someday. . . ."

The United States team of Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino were top-heavy favorites today as 46 countries attacked treacherous PGA National Golf Club.

Canada is being represented by Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg and Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont.

"I think Lee and I will win it," Nicklaus predicted with relaxed confidence. "The thrill of winning, though, isn't as big as the thrill of representing your country."

When the Romanians entered World Cup play for the first time in 1970 at Buenos Aires, Argentina, Australia's team of Bruce Devlin and David Graham shot a 32-under-par 544 total to capture the cup.

Romania hacked its way to a 227, 183 shots behind the Aussies. Tomila led his team with 86-89-92-92.

The Romanians aren't the only Communist nation entered. The Czechoslovakians decided to come this year.

Nicklaus captured the 1971 PGA championship on the same course. Trevino, a rare visitor, earning a spot on the U.S. entry for the World Cup. Salekick Lee Trevino here by beating Jack in a play-off for the U.S. Open title.

Harness Horsemen Reverse Field

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario harness horsemen have decided not to halt racing at Mohawk Raceway next week as a protest against the operation of off-track betting shops.

Lee Ehrlich, president of the Ontario Harness Horsemen's Association, said Wednesday his group had decided against the move after he reported to his directors on the results of a meeting between horsemen and Arthur Wishart, Ontario ministe of financial and consumer affairs.

Horsemen have blamed the off-track shops for the sharp drop in mutuel racing at Ontario tracks.

There will be no stoppages either at thoroughbred racing operated by the Jockey Club Ltd.

Thoroughbred horsemen also agreed Wednesday at a meeting of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association (Ontario Region) that it would be a useless gesture to cease racing.

Warren Beasley, president of the HBPA, said "stopping racing wouldn't help our situation and I doubt if the government would do anything about it."

CFL Format for Lacrosse?

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A national lacrosse league with a format similar to that of the Canadian Football League is the works, says a Windsor lacrosse official.

Coach Jim Bishop of the Windsor Warlocks said in an interview Wednesday his team and teams from Toronto and Peterborough posted a $10,000 performance bonds at a formative meeting held Sunday.

Other Ontario communities represented at the meeting, held before a regular Ontario Lacrosse Association meeting in Hespeler, were Aurora, Oshawa, Brampton and Brantford.

Bishop said those four teams would make their bonds at a Dec. 1 meeting in Toronto or withdraw. That meeting should decide the fate of the league, he said.

The league would operate with an eastern division and a four-team western division made up of teams from last year's Western Lacrosse Association Senior A league-Vancouver, Victoria, New Westminister and Coquitlam.

Cubs' Owner Denies Banks Rumor

CHICAGO (AP) — Owner Phil Wrigley of Chicago Cubs, skirting commitment on Leo Durocher's status for 1972, said Wednesday "I'm too fond of Ernie Banks to make him manager of anything."

Wrigley's comment followed printed reports indicating that Banks, a star Cub player since 1953, would be named managerial successor to the controversial Durocher.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walter Alston, unflappable manager of the Dodgers in Brooklyn and Los Angeles for 18 seasons, has his 19th one-year contract, the National League club announced Wednesday.

Alston, who will be 60 on Dec. 1, piloted the 1971 Dodgers to within one game of the National League's Western Division pennant.

His blending "of more rookies than I've ever had before" with veterans such as affable Ohio native his fifth National League Manager-of-the-Year award from the Baseball Writers Press panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Alston's 19th campaign will make him the most durable of Dodger managers after tying Wilbert Robinson (1914-1931) last season. He already is the dean of active major league managers with the same club.

Alston, whose Dodgers have won six pennants and four world series, has said he hopes to manage "as long as I stay healthy."

Bishop, now an executive with Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, built Oshawa Green Gaels into a national power in junior lacrosse.

Under his direction, Windsor has won two national Senior B titles in a row.

Bishop says the proposed league would have to be semi-professional at first but its ultimate objective would be professionalism.

St. Louis (AP) — Right fielder Roberto Clemente of the world-champion Pittsburgh Pirates won a position for the 11th consecutive season Wednesday in the Sporting News' National league all-star fielding team.

Clemente, 37, captured all but two of a possible 55 votes in the weekly newspaper's poll of NL baseball managers and coaches.

Others named to the team were: outfielders Willie Mays and Bobby Bonds of San Francisco, first baseman Wes Parker and outfielder Willie Davis of Los Angeles, catcher Johnny Bench and second baseman Tommy Helms of Cincinnati, shortstop Bud Harrelson of New York Mets, pitcher Bob Gibson of St. Louis and third baseman Doug Rader of Houston.

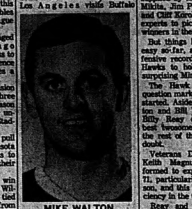
Bruins' Lone Goal an Accomplishment

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The superpower Boston Bruins aren't so super-hot this year after making a shambles of the National Hockey League a year ago.

But the Bruins still managed to score once in Chicago Wednesday night for a 3-1 loss to the Black Hawks' super-defence and that in itself constitutes a morale victory.



Chicago, the West Division leaders, have allowed only three goals on home ice this season and the win extended their unbeaten streak in Chicago Stadium to six games.

It also enabled them to roll two points ahead of Minnesota North Stars, whose 3-1 loss to Detroit Red Wings ended their home-ice win string at five.

It also marked the first win for Detroit coach Johnny Wilson, who had lost two and tied two since taking over from Doug Barkley 10 days ago.

In other games, New York Rangers remained two points ahead of Montreal in the East Division, crushing Los Angeles Kings 7-1, while the Canadiens stopped Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2. Pittsburgh Penguins skated to a 3-1 win over Vancouver Canucks in the other scheduled game.

Tonight California Golden Seals move into Boston Garden as Los Angeles visits Buffalo Sabres and the Canucks go against the Flyers in Philadelphia.

MIKE WALTON

Goals by the Hull brothers, Bobby and Dennis, gave goalie Tony Esposito all the cushion he needed as the Black Hawks sealed off all but one Boston offence, that by Mike Walton, early in the third period.

Chicago's explosive attack, supplied by the Hull boys, Stan Mikita, Jim Pappin, Pit Martin and Cliff Koroll, right-winger, is experte to pick them two-way winners in the NHL West.

But things haven't been that easy so far, and only their defensive record has enabled the Hawks to hold first over the surprising Minnesotans.

The Hawks' defence was in question mark before the season started. Aside from Pat Stapleton and Bill White, who coach Billy Reay contends are the best tandem in the business, the rest of the blueline was in doubt.

Veterans Doug Jarrett and Keith Magnuson hadn't performed to expectations in 1970-71, particularly Jarrett in the season, and this constituted a deficiency in the team's makeup.

Reay and general manager Tommy Ivan protected eight defencemen in last June's NHL draft, leading some observers to believe there'd be some changes made.

But both Jarrett and Magnuson have regained their effectiveness and with the departure through trades of defencemen Fred Stanfield, to California, and Rick Foley, to Philadelphia, the Hawk defence appears set in front of the goaltenders Tony Esposito and Smith.

The North Stars, whose goal-tending tandem of Gump Worsley and Cesare Maniago has allowed only 22 goals, four fewer than the Hawks, were stopped cold by Detroit goalie Al Smith.

Smith, survived a 33-shot barrage and drew an assist as the Red Wings' first goal,clearing a shot to Detroit defenceman Gary Bergman who fed Mickey Redmond for the score.

Rod Gilbert and Vic Hadfield scored two each as the Rangers pushed their unbeaten streak to 12 games while the Kings continued to falter, losing their seventh in a row.

The linemates, along with centre Jean Ratelle, now have collected 73 points this season. Gilbert leads the individual race with 37, followed by Hadfield at 23 and Ratelle, 11, in fourth place behind Boston's Phil Esposito, the defending champion.

Gilbert's two goals gave him six in the last three games and Hadfield's goal in the second period was his eighth power-play score of the year, tops in the NHL.

The Rangers peppered Los Angeles goalie Rogatien Vachon with 41 shots, including six apiece by Dave Balon, Ted Irvine and defenceman Ab DeMarco, in posting a duplicate of the score they pinned on the Los Angeles last week.

Frank Mahovlich, with his 15th goal of the season against his former team-mates, spearheaded Montreal's 4-2 victory over Toronto in a dull game that lacked much of the fierce rivalry that fans have come to expect in meetings between the two established teams.

Only goals, both of them of a fluke variety, by Ron Harrison and Don Marshall, got past Montreal goalie Ken Dryden.

But there was never any doubt the Canadiens would fashion their impressive win against a disorganized Leafs that appeared to be feeling the ill effects of an 11 drubbing at Oakland earlier in the week.

Montreal coach Scotty Bowman was particularly impressed with the Canadiens' defensive effort.

"We didn't play well all last season at the Gardens," he said. "So we came in here last night trying to make amends. . . I think we did."

Toronto coach John McLellan was impressed, too, but not with the Leafs' effort.

"He's a tough guy to beat," said McLellan of goalie Dryden who stopped Toronto's best shooters of the night, Ron Ellis, Norm Ullman and Garry Monahan.

Bryan Hextall's two goals carried Pittsburgh past the visiting Canucks and secured the Penguins' third-place standing in the West.

The two scorers by Hextall offset the early lead taken by Vancouver on defenceman Dale Tallon's goal after two minutes of the first period.

The Penguins, however, were unable to take advantage of numerous manpower advantages in the first two periods. Five times they were stymied by Vancouver's Cesare Maniago. Lyzore employed forwards Poul Popiel and Ron Ward and defencemen Barry Wilkins and John Schella almost exclusively in penalty-killing roles.

WHA Has Money For Hockey War

EDMONTON (CP) — "When you're in a war, as we are now, . . .

The rest of Bill Hunter's quote was unprintable ,but the word "war" is used frequently when World Hockey Association executives start talking about the National Hockey League.

The WHA is the world's newest professional hockey league —it's scheduled to nest its first game next October—and to become a top attraction it must have talent from the well-established NHL.

That takes money, something the WHA bosses say its owners have bundles of—Ben Hatskin of Winnipeg is said to have $10 million in backing.

How much the two other Canadian franchises have isn't known, but Hunter of Edmonton and Scotty Munro of Calgary say their backers are well-heeled.

Hunter, besides being general manager of the Edmonton franchise, is executive director of the league and if there is a war, he's ready.

Pointing to himself, he told a news conference Wednesday: "Here's a wounded (censored) who doesn't give a damn about the (censored) NHL."

Hunter operates the money-making Edmonton Oil Kings—a name he'll probably use for the professional team—of the Western Canada Hockey League, a big supplier of talent to the NHL.

Despite his habit of firing salvos and taking over himself ,the junior team invariably is a winner and draws crowds to antiquated Edmonton Gardens.

Hatskin, a millionaire Winnipeg businessman, was once a football player for Winnipeg Blue Bombers and, like Hunter, operates a successful WCHL club—the Jets.

Munro—he and Hunter publicly despise each other, although there's a suggestion that their fights in the press draw crowds to hockey games—is boss of Calgary Centennials of the WCHL, which manages to win games and draw full houses.

A priority for Hunter is getting a decent place to play. The Gardens holds only 5,200 and with tickets scaled at $6, $5.50 and $4, the club will be a loser financially without a new arena.

Winnipeg is in a better position, says Hatskin, with an arena capable of seating 10,500 with ample expansion to 14,000 although there are no plans for it immediately.

Calgary's Corral holds 6,200 with plans to expand to 14,000 by 1974.

As for players, Hatskin says he'll get a portion of current NHL players.

"Those on one-year contracts . . . our lawyers tell us the reserve clause won't stand up in court. . . There's also plenty of kids in the minor leagues capable of playing in the NHL right now."

Hatskin wouldn't comment on published reports that he'd offer Bobby Hull a contract for $1 million, but this is the kind of action expected to take place when the bidding war starts soon.

BATAWA SKI CLUB

This year again an early winter is anticipated. A great amount of work has been, and still has to be done, to get everything ready. Unfortunately, along with the work, a fair amount of money has had to be spent for equipment and parts which will make an increase in our membership fees necessary. For the 1971-72 season the fees will be as follows: Single membership $ 6.00, Family $ 10.00, Student (high school) season ticket $ 5.00 and Junior (under 16 years) $ 3.00. All club duties, except those mentioned above, will remain the same. Last season many had to be turned down to avoid overcrowding.

Lake Reins Two Winners in Row

KINGSTON — Earl Lake believed in sticking with a winning formula as the Ontario driver relied consecutive winners home at Frontenac Downs last night.

Lake guided former track-record holder Earlykates John to a win in the eighth race and Gen came right back with a first-place performance with Canadian Killian in the ninth.

The win for Earlykates John pushed his total winnings over the $28,000 mark.

Two Men Perish On Fishing Trip

MARATHON, Ont. (CP) — A 20-year-old Pontiac, Mich., man told Wednesday how a fishing trip in rough northern bush country turned into a nightmare that ended in the death of his two companions.

Mr. Mills, brought by rescuers to this town 136 miles east of Thunder Bay, began the fishing trip nine days ago with Lowell Little, 22, and John Bullock Jr., 18. Their bodies now are on the way home to Pontiac.

Mr. Mills was found Sunday after four nights huddled alone in a boat with little food. His friends died last Wednesday, the day after their expedition started.

Mr. Mills said the three began their trip with a rented boat and headed up nearby White Lake. When a storm hit the lake that afternoon, the motor froze.

"We drifted in to shore and thought we were on the side of the lake where the cabins were. But we found we weren't.

The men built a fire, got warm and tried to row the boat to another point. High winds forced them back near the nearby shore.

"We went back in shore to try and walk around the lake. We only took matches and a lighter.

"We walked about two and a half hours through marshes and we were sinking wet. Bullock sped up to see if he could see a cabin. Little was getting weak.

"Bullock came back and we realized we were on the wrong side of the lake and would have to go back. We knew Little couldn't make it.

"We huddled under a tree to try and get warm. Little became delirious and finally unconscious. We decided we had to leave him and get back to the boat.

"I tried to help Bullock but we were getting dizzy and kept tripping and falling in the water. After a while Bullock got delirious and I was getting weaker; I knew I couldn't get us both back."

Once he reached the boat, Mr. Mills stripped off his wet clothes and climbed into two sleeping bags.

"I stayed there until Sunday noon hoping someone would find me. Then I heard a boat and ran out and called to the men who came and picked me up."

Breast Cancer Rare in Man But Some Cases Do Occur

By C.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dr. Thosteson: I am aware that women can develop breast cancer but is it possible for men?

When I was 14 a lump about the size of a nickel developed in both breasts. Some of my friends had the same thing. They were very sore at first but within a year the soreness subsided but the lump and swelling remained.

A general practitioner said they would probably go away when I was in my early 20s, but I am 26 now and the lumps are still there. I am worried because a lump is one of the signs of cancer. Have you any advice? Could I have the lumps removed?—A.A.

Breast cancer is possible in the male but it is rare, constituting less than 1 per cent of all breast cancer cases.

It is true that a lump is one of the first signs of cancer but there are many causes of lumps. In your case, you've had the lumps for 10 years with no further signs; add to that the facts that breast cancer is a man when it occurs is usually when he is in his 50s or later; there are nipple changes in half the cases, and a bloody discharge in about one-sixth. In other words the indications point to a simple, non-malignant cyst in your case.

If you are still worried, you could have mammography done—an X-ray technique commonly used in women with breast lumps that have to be identified. Or, perhaps preferably, have the lumps removed. There would be little disfigurement, and the exact nature of the lumps could then be ascertained positively.

Dr. Thosteson: I read the letter from the women with the problem of fiberglass particles in things from being washed with draperies of that material.

Several years ago I had the same experience. Those particles are worse than the jokesters' itching powder and they do make the skin burn.

I tried washing and rewashing, rinsing and running in the dryer. This made them even worse.

Then it occurred to me that it is static electricity in the particles that makes them cling. Fabric softener is used to take the static out of tyjes, etc.

I filled the washer with clear water and added a bottle of fabric softener. It worked wonders. Don't throw things away. An inexpensive bottle of fabric softer will save the day.—L.S.

My thanks to behalf of anyone who can use this novel suggestion. At our house, after one sad experience, we learned not to wash anything else along with fiberglass fabrics.

Dr. Thosteson: Does a conjunctival hemorrhage leave any permanent impairment of the eye?—T.R.M.

No. The eye looks scary, but the blood is rapidly absorbed. The hemorrhage occurring as it does, on the outside of the eyeball, does not interfere with vision.

Thursday, Nov. 11, Remembrance Day, is a day of both mourning and thanksgiving. Mourning for those who fought so well to win the peace and freedom Canada now enjoys, but did not live to see it, and rejoicing that their bravery and suffering was not in vain. Two minutes of silence is a small price to pay for the privileges and prosperity that all Canada enjoys today through their sacrifices.

The new project of combining the Happy Hour with a Fun Night, started last Friday evening, proved to be a tremendous success. As one comrade remarked, "A stranger coming in could be forgiven for thinking he had unexpectedly walked into that well known TV show Pig and Whistle."

With Marg Flett and her trio really going in town to lead the festivities, the club was really jumping with everyone having the time of their lives. For an evening of mirth and melody, why not drop in?

Saturday was also a great day with darts being the order of the day. In the afternoon matches, the first doubles match winners and runners up were Dimp Young and Tommy Nicholson and Jimmy Woodcock and Keith Lane. In the second doubles, Dimp Young and Tommy Nicholson gave a repeat performance in winning while Dave Feeney teamed up with Johnny Kennark to take the these matches, Keith Lane runner - up prize. During distinguished himself by throwing the first perfect score, 180, of the season.

In the evening, about 16 Mr. and Mrs. teams battled it out with the Woodhouse couple winning the lion's share of the prizes. Ruth and George not only were the winners but Ruth threw 120 to win the ladies high three darts and George emulated her example with 140 for the mens top high darts. That popular couple Fern and Dave E. a n s were runners up. Dave Feeney again did a smooth and fast job of running the matches.

Comrades under the weather are D. Marriott, Princess Margaret Hospital, Toronto; W. Shepherd, extended care; E. Brockhurst, room 316; R. Forban; room 312 and W. Dafoe, room 711. Resting at home are K. Hollands, R. Mills and H. Latham. All have been looked after.

More Competition Suggested for Sugar Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — Prices charged by Canadian sugar refineries should be reduced by encouraging more competition from foreign firms, the tariff board said in a report Wednesday.

The board recommended reductions in duties on raw sugar imports to lower the costs to refineries and induce them to cut their prices. It also recommended reductions in duties on refined sugar to ensure that the refineries saving on prosecution costs reaches the consumer "and to allow greater pressure from the threat of external competition."

The report, ordered in 1969 by Finance Minister E. J. Benson, was tabled in the Commons Wednesday.

Labour Council Unhappy with Y

The Quinte District Labor Council will meet with the executives of the Belleville YMCA to air its complaints about soliciting and allocation of Y funds.

To date has yet to be established for the confrontation but labor council president Robert Andrus predicts it will take place within the next two weeks.

Charging the YMCA with injustice in asking for tax concessions from city council, Mr. Andrus said, "I'm not certain of the figures but I believe they've been excused property taxes of $6,000 this year and $9,000 last year. It's unfair for taxpayers to have to pay for their subsidy when the same does not hold for other, more charitable organizations."

He accused the YMCA of standing on free programs for needy persons and overcharging individual members. The current membership fee for men over the age of 25 is $65 per year.

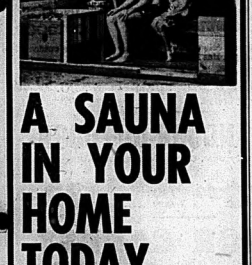
"We are speaking as taxpaying labor people," said Mr. Andrus, referring to the 2,000-member labor council.

The council is also critical of the percentage of funds the Y receives from the United Community Services, No organization may take more than 90 per cent of monies donated to the UCS.

"I know individuals and at least one union that have refused to pay into the UCS because of the Y," said Mr. Andrus.

The union to which he was referring is local 1538 of the United Auto Workers at Stewart-Warner Corp. in Belleville. Members were advised at a union meeting not to donate to the UCS until the YMCA is removed from the allocation list, although individuals were free to give contributions if they desired.

Calling the YMCA "a parasite organization of absolutely no benefit to the community," local president Frank McKay said the Y should be helping poor people and eliminating the suffering of people with ailments or without jobs. He added that his opinions were personal and were not intended to reflect those of the union.



YMCA secretary Di Diamantides, refusing to comment on the charges, said his organization would wait until its meeting with the labor council before defending itself. He felt that perhaps the union was unfamiliar with the background of the YMCA and did not realize that one of the conditions laid down when it came to Belleville was that it would receive support from the city.

Retarded Will Soon Have Workshop

PICTON (Staff)—Plans are now well under way for the opening of a workshop for adult retardates who reside in Prince Edward County, according to a press release issued Tuesday by the Prince Edward Association for the Mentally Retarded.

This workshop will be similar to ones now operated in Belleville and Trenton and will be designed to provide a centre for adults who are unable to find a place in the usual work setting because of limited ability.

The workshop will allow them to discover useful and rewarding outlets for the talents they possess.

The press release stated that the workshop program will provide supervised social and recreational activities, emphasizing basic living skills. Work, such as production of small items for sale or light industrial contract work, will also form a part of the program but represents only one aspect of a valuable experience for trainees.

The ultimate objective underlying the program is to provide the adult retardate with an opportunity to find increased meaning and a greater sense of accomplishment in life.

Although the workshop will be located near Picton, it is open to anyone living in Prince Edward County and is not just for Picton.

At present a workshop supervisor is being sought and several applications have been received. The Prince Edward Association for the Mentally Retarded is hopeful that the program can be started soon after a supervisor is hired, with three or four trainees forming the initial group.

Application forms are now available for parents or guardians interested in seeing their sons or daughters become involved in the program.

Potential trainees must be between 17 and 50 years of age and be deemed suitable by an Admissions Committee for participation in a workshop program.

Application forms can be obtained from Willard Martin, Picton Home Hardware; Larry Richardson, Prince Edward Collegiate and Rev. Gibson, Master Foods, Picton. Completed applications should be returned to W. J. Martin, P.O. Box 1400, Picton.

Kierans Says Unemployment Is Canada's Top Problem

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eric Kierans, former federal communications minister, said Wednesday night that unemployment is Canada's most pressing problem and he called on the federal government to start planning now for the 1976 and not just for the next election.

The former Liberal cabinet minister said unemployment was high the 1960s but said there will be three times as many young people entering the labor market in the next 10 years.

Mr. Kierans, speaking at the University of British Columbia, called for an end to the "rape" of Canada's natural resources by foreign investors and criticized the Trudeau government for looking to the U.S. for answers to Canada's problems.

Earlier, at a news conference, he was questioned about recent U.S. economic moves to halt inflation and correct the imbalance in its balance of payments situation. Mr. Kierans said the U.S. is looking after the achievement of its own objectives and said this will be expensive, adding that other countries will have to share that expense.

He said it is the major U.S. trading partners, such as Canada, that are the only countries that can help the U.S. redress its balance of payments situation.

Canadian Embassy Disputes Report Showing $46.5 Million Aid to Canada

WASHINGTON (CP) — In the angry debate here following the U.S. defeat on the China vote in the United Nations there has emerged a congressional document that says Canada has received $46.5 million in U.S. foreign aid.

A Canadian embassy source says it isn't so.

The document was inserted in the Congressional record by Representative John R. Rarick, a right-wing Democrat from Louisiana who said billions of dollars in foreign aid had been "poured out through the diplomatic trough since 1954 intended to influence votes and friends in the UN."

But in fact the money had only made enemies, he said.

The document, listing foreign assistance for 127 countries from 1964 through 1971, says $7.3 billion went to Britain—a figure the British embassy says is far "out of line" with any of their calculations. A British spokesman said all short- and medium-term loans have been paid off. On long-term loans—some of them dating back to the First World War—some $5 billion remains but were being paid off under an agreement with the U.S. There was $1.64 billion in U.S. Export - Import Bank loans.

Ireland, a country said to have particularly annoyed the American UN delegation with its China vote, is listed for $166.7 million. An embassy spokesman says Ireland received $128 million in post-war recovery loans between 1948-51, but this is being repaid with interest. It did, however, receive $18 million in grants for agricultural, educational and other projects in the same period.

The detailed five-page tabulation, listing a total of $38.5 billion, was put together by the staff of Representative Otto E. Passman, a Louisiana Democrat and chairman of the House foreign operations subcommittee on appropriations.

The Canadian source agreed with the subcommittee's figure but said it wasn't aid. The breakdown was $34.7 million in loans to Canadian corporations from the Export-Import Bank and $13.1 million in military assistance. Of this $47.8 million total, $1.3 million in interest paid by Canada was deducted, leaving $46.5 million.

Export-Import Bank loans to Canada and other countries, however, are in fact designed to stimulate U.S. exports since the money must be spent here.

As for the military assistance, a high source said it was a special loan of U.S. military equipment made as a result of the U.S.-Canada military-sharing arrangements in the mutual defence field. These "loans" were voted against the U.S. on the issue. Ireland was mentioned as one of the countries the hard-campaigning U.S. delegation had counted on.

An Irish embassy spokesman said that in addition to the $128 million grants, Ireland had $65 million since 1961 in Export-Import Bank loans. But he echoed the Canadian position that such money is not aid. Under terms of the bank's establishment, such long-term, moderate-interest loans must be used to "buy American." In Ireland's case most of the money went to buy American-built aircraft for Irish International Airlines.

Nevertheless spokesmen for Passman and Rarick held to their guns.

Ottawa Archbishop Criticizes Rome Synod

OTTAWA (CP) — Archbishop J. A. Plourde of Ottawa Wednesday criticized proceedings at the third synod of bishops in Rome, saying the twice-yearly meetings had shown clearly the basic defects of the institution.

In a two-page critique, approved by Canadian delegates attending the 36-day conference that concluded Nov. 6, he cited several faults in the general structure of the synod.

He criticized the amount of time given to opening addresses without provision for questions or rebuttals, and the communication gap between workshop and the plenary assembly.

He called for greater representation and guidance between meetings and for the synod to have an active part in proceedings of the episcopal college which constitutes the highest authority in the church.

Harvey A Hit Opening Night

By ROB GARRISON

Patrons of live theatre were delighted last night at the Pinnacle Playhouse with the opening of Harvey a volatile comedy, directed by Ted Bairstow and performed by a cast of players whose dedication and craft leave little to be desired. As an evening of continuous laughter, it was an auspicious beginning for the Playhouse and Mr. Bairstow.

Harvey is a play about a schizophrenic's relationship with his family and friends. Elwood Dowd keeps company with an invisible rabbit, in the feel tall and magic, imperceptible to all but he. Complications arrive from Elwood's relationship with Harvey lead to his sister's committing him to a mental institution.

Elwood Dowd is a bibulous, affable, middle-aged bachelor slightly blown, but charming and affectionate. Dramatically, he is always the centre of controversy and action, and, with his hallucinatory rabbit-friend Harvey, (the capricious pooka), has a challenging role.

Because his equanimity is impregnable, Elwood serves as a foil for the nervousness of his family and the insanities of the psychiatric society.

Responding to all these demands, Peter Kostiel brings us a charmingly warm Elwood, good-natured and indulgent, frustratingly slow. Elwood must hold the play together, and Mr. Kostiel, always at ease; creates a totally credible and live Elwood, as well as a dramatically valid Harvey. Last night, the audience was Mr. Kostiel's.

Probably the most challenging role was Elwood's sister who gave us some great acting as well as some first-night hesitation. Veta Louise must carry us through some of the highest points of the drama, developing crescendo after crescendo, delivering line after comic line, bearing the banner of solicitous mother-living sister, and inevitably, shocked wife and family against the external world.

With her first performance behind her, Vivian Barclay may well become a show stealer.

The dipsy and delightful characters that complicate the comfort of Elwood's hallucinations are perceptably directed, and for the most part very well played. Two performances stand out as consummate: Peter Kicher played a great Dr. Chumley, with his perfectionism, compulsive tidiness, and earthy dreams of beer and unobtrusive women. Mr. Kicher has a great voice and range used most effectively. His ability to become a craven victim of Harvey's shows fine versatility.

Wilson, light - heavyweight barrel aid, is played by Ken Ross. An obtrusive character, he is Elwood's foil, equally disarming but opposingly offensive. Mr. Ross makes us tremendously aware of Wilson — heavy-handed, loud, subtle as a cannon.

Sheila McCrystal as Elwood's niece gave us some unforgettably humorous moments as she bounced and bubbled, relating to her fellow actors with the enthusiasm of an incipiently sexual teenie. Doomed to frustration, she never gets her man.

Joanne Cunnington as the effervescent and affected Mrs. Chauvanet, gave a virtuoso cameo, brief but captivatingly vital. Although Nurse Kelly's role serves primarily to enhance other characters, Debbie Anderson played her with a vigor and aplomb that makes us hope to see more of her in major capacities. A fine voice and presence, Debbie helped set and maintain a fast and engaging pace.

Clive Hitchon's Dr. Sanderson was a believable, if somewhat overstated youngl over-weaning, overbearing and insecure psychiatrist. One could wish he spoke more slowly and moved with less emphasis on mannerism, both of which he could do without losing the inherent strength of his solid performance.

On the other hand, I found Judge Gaffney a caricature of a caricature, hands on lapels, feet nailed to the stage, a large frame struggling to move without that freedom. If Ralph Gorney, who plays Gaffney, let himself out a little, moved, intoned and freed himself from some unnecessary physical restrictions, he could relax into a warmer, more personable family friend.

Minor characters performed well, and maintained the pace and rapport aptly. Particularly, I like Mike Reid as the Cabbie, a natural and real message man.

Guaranteed Annual Income for Needy Advocated by Senators

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians earning below a "poverty line" should be freed from income tax and the neediest paid a guaranteed annual income based on family size, the long-awaited Senate poverty report recommends.

It says Canada should scrap the "chaotic accumulation of good intentions" called the welfare system.

The committee's report, tabled in the Senate Wednesday by chairman Senator David Croll, says the total cost last year of its proposals would have been $800 or $900 million, about two per cent of the gross national product.

The poverty line, based on 1969 figures, would range from $2,140 for a single person more than 40 years of age to $9,250 for a family of 10.

The federally-run plan would pay a guaranteed income of $1,500 a year to every single person past 40, rising to $4,500 for a 10-member family.

Anyone who earned less than the poverty line amounts in 1969 would have paid no income tax. Anyone whose earnings were below the guaranteed income line—70 per cent of the poverty line—would get payments to bring him up to it.

The levels could change annually in accordance with a formula taking into account living standards, national average incomes and family size. The 1969 figures were used because statistical data was not available to calculate the levels last year or this.

Those not initially covered by the guaranteed income plan—single persons under age 40 and persons not single—would have their needs met under a modified Canada Assistance Plan. The federal government now shares equally with the provinces the costs of welfare services.

The report of the committee is submitted to the government but there is no requirement that the senate act on the recommendations.

Prime Minister Trudeau during a Liberal policy conference last year rejected, on grounds that cost would be too high, the guaranteed annual income approach.

Under the guaranteed income program, an incentive to work would be provided, the committee suggests, because extra earnings would not be fully deducted from the guaranteed income.

Seventy cents would be cut for every dollar of extra income earned.

This would ensure that workers keep more money than those who do not work, says the committee.

It says the 70 cents is high and should be reduced as soon as possible.

The report proposes many other forms of help for the poor, including education, health care, consumer protection, legal aid and manpower services.

It appeals to the public to make the pass. a "priority for the 1970s and says the guaranteed annual income is "the first step in the war against poverty."

It says 60 per cent of the poor are not on welfare. Nearly 30 per cent of welfare recipients are said to be outside the labor force, comprising the very old, very young, sick, disabled, deserted or widowed mothers of young children and those incapable of taking jobs even during full employment.

Full employment and higher minimum wages are designated as national policy objectives.

The poverty lines, marking the point at which earners would be exempt from income tax, would be adjusted annually. They would be related to an average standard of living and reflect changes in national average incomes and family size.

Adoption of the guaranteed income plan would immediately replace existing family allowances, youth allowances and old age pensions. No one would get less income under the new plan.

Unemployment insurance, Canada pension plan, veterans' allowances and programs for Indians and Eskimos would not be touched.

The report is the culmination of a three-year study with cross-Canada hearings and a controversy caused by the resignation of one Senate member in a dispute about the contents of the report.

The report was making no effort to get to the roots of the poverty problem, the four staffers charged. They were writers Ian Adams and William Cameron and economists Brian Hill and Peter Penz.

Senator Croll retorted that the writers were preoccupied with "restructuring" society while the committee was more interested in doing something for the poor.

In its final form, the report spread a host of recommendations before the Senate ranging from legislation to guarantee equal pay for equal work to a stronger federal presence in education.

It calls for:

Higher minimum wages, based on at least 60 per cent of the average wage rate in each province.

—Special information for low-income consumers on buying, selling, rental rates and loan contracts plus joint government-industry insured loans for high-risk borrowers.

—Uniform licensing and control by the provinces of debt collection agencies.

—Easier and cheaper bankruptcy for individuals.

—Development of national education goals.

—Subsidized housing and expanded public housing programs plus effective means to ensure the guaranteed income is not absorbed by rent and other cost increases.

—Expansion of health insurance to cover dental care and prescription drugs, plus greater emphasis on preventive and rehabilitative health care.

—Federal funding for provincial plans that provide legal aid to the poor without qualification or contribution.

—Uniform workmen's compensation benefits.

—Support for child-care services, including day-care centres for children under age three, and public subsidy to ensure equal access for all.

Croll Says Welfare Is Social Wasteland

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator David Croll, chairman of the Senate poverty committee, Wednesday called the existing welfare system "a social wasteland and an economic morass."

Tabling the committee's report, he said more than $6 billion a year has been poured into it, without reaping more than meagre returns.

"We say it must be scrapped because it is obsolete, lacking in regard for human values, and unable to alleviate poverty, let alone eliminate it. It has no defenders, only offenders."

He proposed instead, as had been widely expected, a guaranteed income system for the poor.

Senator Croll, 71, is a former Windsor mayor and a Toronto Liberal.

He was a member of the Ontario legislature from 1934 to 1944, including a period as welfare minister in the Mitchell Hepburn administration.

He said Wednesday that time and again at its public hearings, the Senate committee saw "grim evidence of a well-meaning society's failure to grasp the true significance of poverty and its cancerous effect not only on the individual but on the whole community."

"We fashioned a social welfare machine, fabricated it with our dollars, and then turned out back on its operation.

"We insulated ourselves from any misgivings by implicit belief in the myths about poverty. The poor don't want to work, we said; they are lazy and content to live on handouts; they are chronic complainers. . . .

"The committee emphatically rejects these false and long-held assumptions."

Only per cent of the poor were out on welfare.

The existing system had failed because it had treated the symptoms of poverty and left the disease itself untouched. It did not reach the working poor, "that vast army in the labor force whose income is grossly inadequate."

The committee had tried to diagnose poverty in Canada and describe a way to enable five million Canadians "to break out of the monstrous trap in which they now are hopelessly pinned."

The committee's proposed guaranteed income plan, providing income floors below which the income of Canadian families would not be allowed to fall, represented "the first firm step in the war on poverty."

It would make certain that "the dole is dead." But in order for the plan to work, it would require changes in existing tax laws, including the redefinition of income.

Its Myth Tax System Takes From Wealthy

OTTAWA (CP) — The report of the Senate poverty committee says it is a myth that the tax system takes from the rich to give to the poor.

The report, released Wednesday, says 60 per cent of the incomes of persons earning less than $2,000 including social security contributions, is spent on taxes.

"By contrast, those with incomes over $10,000 pay only 37 per cent in taxes," it says.

Society penalized and stigmatized those who earned little or no money. Some fiscal and monetary policies had resulted in greater hardships for the poor, especially the working poor, than for the rest of the population.

The report says "full employment" policies must be the prime objective of government fiscal and monetary policy.

Potato Growers Helped

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced Wednesday that it will add program for potato growers — the latest group of farmers to benefit under new programs for agricultural producers hit by the U.S. ban on saleable imports.

The government announced Wednesday that it would buy up to 1,333 hundred-pound bags of potatoes from each Canadian grower at $1.50 a hundredweight.

Growers would receive 75 cents a hundredweight immediately, with the balance to be paid at the end of the support program. Growers may process the purchased potatoes on their farms, but sell them on contract to the agricultural stabilization board for later delivery. The move is designed to stabilize the domestic price of potatoes and counter the adverse effects of the 10-per-cent surcharge announced by President Nixon last August, a government announced said.

CYC Has 44 New Projects

OTTAWA (CP) — The Company of Young Canadians is tackling 44 new projects as it fights for its future.

"When the 44 new ones are under way, the CYC will be involved with the community in 89 projects," the company says.

The new projects will entail hiring 61 volunteers, bringing the number in the field to 197 — exceeded only this summer when a number of vacation-length projects were initiated.

The CYC, beset with such high hopes in 1966 by former prime minister Lester Pearson, has been under a cloud since a reorganization last year that was forced by the results of a parliamentary investigation in late 1969.

This summer a special committee on youth recommended to State Secretary Gerard Pelletier that the CYC be disbanded and replaced.

The CYC has been operating on a frozen $1.9 million budget — nine cents a Canadian, it says — since 1969. Only a surplus of $700,000 from last year, when it was dormant after the investigation, has enabled it to embark on the current expansion.

Company officers say a larger budget will be needed eventually to sustain the new pace.

New projects announced this week for Ontario include a community school workshop in Toronto to promote education al change; use of a community television channel by citizens in Ottawa and organizing an Indian friendship centre in Sault Ste. Marie.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). The lighter side of your life will be greatly accentuated today. Not one obstacle after another pops up to keep you tied down to office or household duties.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Obstinate, demanding people are putting you in three directions at once. Don't think the pressure will let up at least a notch. Find a good book and lock yourself in the bathroom.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Delays are unavoidable today, so give yourself plenty of time to get places, finish things. Leastminute pressure can cause errors in detail. Double-check.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). You'd be better off saving your money than spending on something that just doesn't meet all your requirements. Keep looking until you find exactly what you want.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your stomach is one step at a time, so make this fact clear to those who want you to cope with half a dozen emergencies at once. Demand priorities.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). You can find yourself entangled in a couple's quarrel, as each partner privately seeks you out to tell his side of the story. Keep out of the whole mess.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). Seeking advice from friends to solve a monetary problem will get you a lot of advice but no clear-cut solution. In fact, you may become even more confused.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Private problems in domestic quarters should be quickly dealt with before they become completely unmanageable. Stop avoiding decisions.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Ethical guidelines that are inconsistent in the past cannot be easily applied to your present dilemma. Special circumstances negate your traditional categories of right and wrong.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Laying the blame for a failure on one isolated incident proves how little insight you have into the whole issue. Go back to the very beginning and retrace your steps.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). The temptation's strong to plunge into a new venture prematurely. Hold back, though, until you've resolved professional life and domestic responsibilities.

24 Injured

PEMBROKE, Ont. (CP) — Twenty-four persons were injured Wednesday when a Voyageur Colonial bus and a small truck were in collision about a mile east of here.

Extent of their injuries was not known, but none was believed serious, although the bus left the road.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Highway 17 and a road leading to the Quebec border at Allumette Island.

Driver of the bus, headed for Ottawa from North Bay, was Georg Lauzon, 46, of Pembroke while Richard Plummer, 19, of Pembroke was driving the truck.

Provincial police are investigating.

Aries (March 21-April 19). You might as well be working a four-day week for all you'll be likely to accomplish today. Job projects reach a dead end, fact-finding is a wild goose chase. Quit early if you can.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Social plans unwillingly postponed until today can turn out to be a big waste of time. You wouldn't be making a thing if you cancelled dates completely.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). When there's a not-so-pleasant job to be done around the house, suddenly everybody's busy conversing. Three guesses who's stuck with the dirty work again.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Calls, messages are of import, once today but the fact you need to contact are all out to lunch or just not home. Serious talks have best postponed until tomorrow.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Roughly half your day is due to be spent looking for things, particularly small personal possessions. Absentminded Leos can get locked out of the house.

Virgo (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). The discovery of a slip-up on your part can give you a few anxious hours, especially if there are additional boo-boos that could be uncovered. Keep your fingers crossed.

Scorpio (Oct. 22-Nov. 21). A fast-paced social set that you've been yearning to join can look far less glamorous at close range. You had more fun with your old neighborhood buddies.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Difficulties in reaching a decision are completely self-generated. Don't become bogged down with a long list of pros and cons—stick to the basic issue.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). While your closest partner is swooning back and forth over a choice, you can be doing a slow burn. Set a time limit and demand a reply. You can't wait forever.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). The job at hand is far from simple. Enlist as many helpers as you can to insure that things go smoothly. This isn't the time for a one-man show.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Opportunities should only be accepted if they promise to be permanent. Substituting for a regular or taking a temporary assignment won't lead to anything new.

Today's Birthday—Do as much preliminary investigating as possible before deciding to switch goals this year. Career changes are tricky, so don't take the first thing that comes along.

Cable Firms Irate

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Cable Television Association has protested to the Canadian transport commission about an "abuse of a public monopoly" by Bell Canada.

Robert Short, association president, said Wednesday the association also believes Bell is illegally restraining trade through conditions the company sets for use of its telephone poles by cable companies.

The association has called on the commission to order changes in these conditions. Bell may reply within 30 days.

The cable association brief, submitted 10 days ago is the latest move in a long-standing feud between Bell and cable operators about contracts for use of telephone company poles or underground conduits.

Cable operators say Bell has set such strict limits on the use of cable equipment that it threatens the efficient development of telecommunications in Canada.

Bell Canada told the Canadian Radio-Television Commission at Montreal cable hearings in April that the medium should be separated from the message. The medium should be owned by the common carriers, such as the telephone companies, and the broadcasters could provide the message.

The telephone companies say this would be the most efficient use of equipment. Duplication of services could be eliminated.

Telephone Employees Reach Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — While still locked in a contract dispute with 9,000 telephone operators, Bell Canada has reached a one-year contract agreement with 21,000 service and office workers in Ontario and Quebec.

The new contract, announced Wednesday, provides for salary increases of between 8.5 per cent and 6.9 per cent for top-rated workers.

Fully-qualified craftsmen will receive a $15-a-week increase to $132 a week. Service representatives will receive a $9 raise to $141. Top paid clerks will receive a 6.8-per-cent increase to $109 a week.

The agreement was reached in negotiations Wednesday between Bell Canada and the Canadian Telephone Employees Association and will become effective Dec. 1.

Still to be settled is the bargaining deadlock between Bell and the Traffic Employees Association representing telephone operators. The previous contract expired in August.

In-plant Phones At Issue

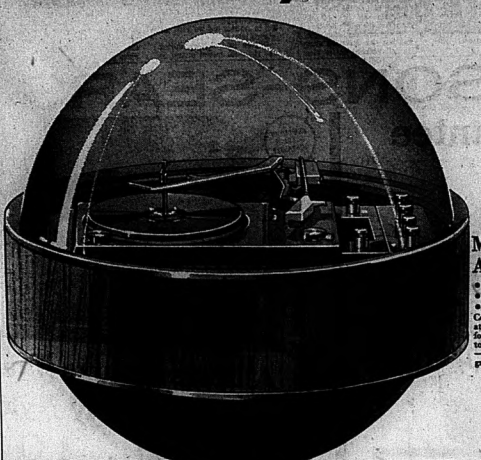
TORONTO (CP) — Perception Industries Ltd. of Toronto won the first round Wednesday of a legal battle against Bell Canada's policy over installation and operation of internal telephone systems.

Mr. Justice E. L. Haines of the Supreme Court of Ontario ordered Bell to reconnect lines and services disconnected from Perception's offices Oct. 21 after the electronics firm installed its own internal telephone system.

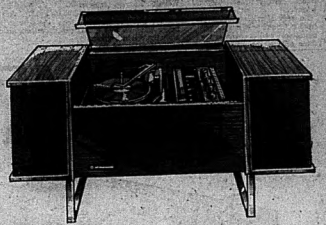
The judgment was in the form of an interim mandatory order. Its effect will be to maintain the Perception equipment in service until at least Nov. 24 when the hearing on Perception's application for a permanent injunction will resume.

In the judgment, Mr. Justice Haines said Bell was to be afforded a right to inspect the internal equipment "forthwith on reasonable notice." But at the same time he rejected a Bell request to disconnect the service once more if the equipment was unsatisfactory.

If Bell considered that the Perception system was adversely affecting external Bell lines, the company could "apply to me on 24 hours' notice" for a further ruling.



Perception lawyer William McMurty said to his knowledge the case is the first test of Bell's assertion of a legal monopoly over the installation and operation of telequipment on private premises.



The equipment installed by Perception was purchased from Northern Electric Co. Ltd., a wholly-owned Bell subsidiary.

Kingston Trial Continues

Court Told Convict Drank Toast in Blood of Beaten Man

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A toast in the blood of a man being beaten was described here Wednesday at the non-capital murder trial of 13 convicts.

A witness said prisoner Glen Morris, 24, of Stanmore, Ont., caught the blood in a cup as it drained from the man's leg wound, then put salt in the wound.

He said Morris, standing in front of a number of prison "undesirables" tied to chairs in the dome area of the prison, said, "Here's a toast," drank some of the blood and walked away.

Morris is one of 13 convicts charged in the deaths of Brian Rowe, 26, and Bertrand Robert, 39, during an April riot at Kingston penitentiary, two of those beaten.

Under cross-examination by William Murphy, representing Morris, the witness admitted he had not identified Morris to the police when he was questioned after the prison beatings.

He also agreed he had not identified Morris at the preliminary hearing in July as one of the attackers or made any mention of blood-drinking.

When asked why, he said: "I had too many things on my mind . . . I was all shook up the first time in court." He agreed with Mr. Murphy that it was an unusual incident.

Mr. Justice William Henderson has instructed the news media not to use the names of prisoner or ex-prisoner witnesses.

Wednesday's witness, now on parole and living in Vancouver, is a 31-year-old convicted thief with a criminal record reaching back to 1957.

He said another of the accused, Edward Johnston, 22, of Clarkson, Ont., picked up a man who had been in the circle and dropped him on the floor on his head. He said he saw blood gush from the man's head.

"I walked away after that. I was just sick. I walked away." He had watched chairs placed in a circle around a radiator in the centre of the dome floor, and the assaults became bearable if he didn't he might be made to join the circle.

He said William Shepley, 24, of Windsor, Ont., a speaking through a loud hailer, told hundreds of convicts watching the scene from an upper-storey catwalk: "We'll get all the guiders, stool pigeons and rapers out in the ring and we'll kill the guards later."

Guards held hostage during the riot were moved around so prison authorities would not know where they were kept, he said. Their uniforms were removed and they were dressed in regular prison garb.

Several prisoners were dragged from segregation cells to the dome by Shepley, Edward Foster, 18 of Toronto, Ernest Bigler, 34, of St. Thomas, Ont. and Brian Beaucage, 23 of London, Ont., he said.

They all are charged with non-capital murder in the two deaths. He told the jury that about 15 or 16 convicts took part in the beatings. He called them "the big wheels, the tough guys — they were having a party."

"I think the guys who were watching were scared," he said. "The majority of the men didn't even want to have a riot."

Also charged are: Harold St. Amour, 29, Pembroke, Ont.; James Gay, 24 and brother Donald Gay, 26, both of Lasalle, Ont.; Wayne McCurgin, 22, Toronto; David Birt, 24, Charlottetown; Brian Dodge, 27, Petrolia, Ont. and Robert Robidoux, 18, Toronto.

Old Soldiers Remember

While Boer War veterans John Keeble, 99, right, and Robert Forbes, 91, left, pay tribute to comrades who died at the end of the century, First World War veteran Leroy Madden lights a single candle at an empty placesetting in honor of soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice in the two world wars and the South African War. Last night, hundreds of veterans, their wives, and friends, gathered for their annual Remembrance Day banquet. For story, see Page 3.

Crash at Roblin Kills CPR Trio

Track Car Hit By Freight

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

ROBLIN (Staff) — Three railyard track repairmen riding a rail motor car, were struck from behind and killed Thursday by a westbound freight train near this hamlet.

Dead are Wallace Provost, 51, of Tweed, and Roslin residents Roy George McLaren, 60, and Joseph Jordan, 43.

Killed instantly by the impact, the men were found lying beside the rails on the main CPR line from Smiths Falls. The cart, virtually undamaged was found approximately a mile down the line.

J. F. Crate, superintendent of the CPR's Smiths Falls division, said railroad investigators today were still probing causes of the triple fatality.

The three men were struck by a Smiths Falls — Toronto 76-car freight being hauled by three diesel units. Provincial police described the train as an "unscheduled" freight.

Mr. Crate said the men "definitely" would have been aware that the train — which he estimated was travelling about 50 miles an hour at the time of impact — was in the area.

"We run trains at any time," he said. "There are some trains that run on a schedule but there are other trains that run any time, but these men are all aware of that. They are all made aware of what times the trains are leaving — and so on and so forth."

The mishap occurred about 2.50 p.m. on a curve. The vehicle used by the men — described as a track motor car — is motor powered, but is not enclosed although equipped with a windshield. Police said the vehicle was not radio-equipped.

At the time, the men were engaged in the "routine duties" of section men which "consists of several things," and what type of work the men were doing was among matters being investigated, said Mr. Crate.

Price Thaw To Be Slight

"Remember when Canada liked us and China didn't?"

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's price commission says frozen prices will be thawed just enough after Saturday to make up for new increases in business costs.

That is the core of a complex cluster of price guidelines announced Thursday and aimed at keeping the average of all post-freeze price increases down to 2.5 per cent or less.

Meanwhile, the pay board completed work Thursday night on regulations to implement pay policies after the freeze ends at 12:01 a.m. Sunday. The regulations are built around a general 5.5-per-cent ceiling on pay increases.

Pay would be lowered as price increases

Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, told a meeting of Wall Street leaders Thursday he expects the pay board's 5½-per-cent guideline to be lowered as price increases level off next year.

"I do not think we can stand an increase in wages of 5½ per cent indefinitely," Burns told a meeting of about 50 leading financial figures at the New York Stock Exchange.

The price commission also announced:

1. Rents will remain frozen for the time being on existing homes and apartments.

2. Retailers must display conspicuous lists of freeze-level prices of food and some other items where customers can compare them with new prices.

3. Profit margins may not increase after the freeze.

The commission's policy statement does not mean that all prices will increase by 2.5 per cent.

Commission Chairman C. Jackson Grayson put it this way: "This means that some prices will go down. Some will not increase at all. Some will go no more than 2.5 per cent."

The aim is to get the average of all price increases to that level, he said. If that doesn't happen, some changes will be made.

Ownership Not Real Criterion

TORONTO (CP) — A Canadian monthly magazine today published what it called "an abbreviated but authentic" version of the report on foreign ownership in Canada prepared for the federal cabinet by Revenue Minister Herb Gray.

As printed in the Canadian Forum, the report says there is need for "direct intervention by the government" to control the inflow of foreign investment. But it says ownership alone is not an appropriate basis on which to judge a firm's good corporate behavior.

"On the basis of the evidence on the relative performance of Canadian and foreign controlled firms, this memorandum does not recommend that the government use Canadian ownership as a viable proxy for better performance. It recommends a more cautious approach, viz., looking directly at the performance of foreign controlled firms through a screening mechanism."

The report is carried in The Canadian Forum, a 50-year-old monthly publication which describes itself as "an independent journal of opinion and the arts."

Managing Editor Abraham Rotstein told a press conference that The Forum obtained the report from "someone who is not a party to the current dispute within cabinet."

Prime Minister Trudeau has indicated that the report itself will not be made public.

The Forum's editorial board includes Melville Watkins, head of a group which made a special study for the federal government on foreign ownership of Canadian industry in 1968 and now is associated with the so-called Waffle Group of the NDP.

Professors Say Happy Days Lie Ahead for Our Economy

TORONTO (CP) — Three University of Toronto professors have predicted the Canadian economy will rise in the second half of 1971, bringing a 5.1-per-cent gain in the gross national product.

The over-all GNP for the year would then be about $82.2 billion, say Professors G. V. Jump, J. A. Sawyer and J. W. L. Winsor of the Institute of Policy Analysis at the university.

They predict that the recovery in economic activity that began early this year will continue through the second half and into the first six months of 1972 and then taper off.

They also predicted that consumer spending will increase at an annual rate of 8.5 to 9 per cent with the stimulus coming in part from rising incomes after gains in personal income tax. Spending on durable goods such as cars is predicted to be strong in late 1971 and early 1972.

Little increase is forecast for business fixed capital, any growth coming mostly from price increases.

Government spending is projected to increase at higher than normal rates especially in the first half of 1972 when the government's job-creating measures come into effect.

The nearly $400-million surplus of exports over imports in the first six months of 1971 would almost disappear by the end of 1971 and become a deficit in 1972.

Chinese Arrive At UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The delegation of the People's Republic of China was to drop into the UN today but apparently was not due to other countries in considering world problems until Monday.

Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua will meet Adam Malik of Indonesia, president of the General Assembly, this morning, less than 24 hours after his delegation arrived in New York.

The UN announced that a special welcoming meeting of the General Assembly will be held Monday, so it is assumed the Chinese will make their first visit since being voted into the assembly Oct. 25 purely a courtesy call.

Secretary-General U Thant, who has advocated throughout his 10-year tenure in office that China be admitted to membership, will not be on hand when the Chinese delegation finally puts its feet in the door.

Thant is suffering from a duodenal ulcer and is in hospital.

The arrival of the Chinese more than two decades after they drove the Nationalist government to the island of Taiwan has overshadowed all events here this week.

Preparations for the arrival were extraordinary. UN officials cancelled small when a special meeting of the assembly has been planned to greet a new delegation.

Military Aid Bill Is Okayed

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The House of Representatives was expected to put back into one probably larger package the two foreign aid bills that have been cleared by the Senate.

By a surprisingly large margin of 65 to 34, the Senate Thursday partially restored the battered foreign aid program by approving a $1.5 billion bill for military aid to 46 countries.

The vote followed the Senate's action Wednesday night in approving a separate $711 billion bill for economic and humanitarian aid.

It was two weeks ago tonight that the Senate surprised governments around the world by rejecting a foreign aid bill for the first time since the program was launched in 1948.

The two new bills, which the Senate foreign relations committee drafted as interim measures pending a revision next year of the whole foreign aid program, now go to the House.

Woman Delivers Baby After Seeing TV Show

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mrs. Frank Martin has delivered her first baby and drew on practical experience while doing so — she got her basic knowledge from watching a television talk show.

"Gee, I've always wanted deliver a baby," Mrs. Martin told her husband as they watched the Dick Cavett show Tuesday night and listened to true or false questions about delivering a baby.

She got her chance at 7 a.m. the next morning when neighbor Robert Walsh hurried over to the Martin home to report his wife Terry, who has gone through false labor three times, really meant it this time.

While Walsh called for a doctor and an ambulance, Linda Martin handled the delivery — muddling through with the help of the TV advice — and mother and daughter are doing fine.

What did Mrs. Martin learn from the talk show?

"They said not to slap the baby on the bottom to make it cry but to turn it on its side and tap it," she said.

Hard Line On College Costs Held

TORONTO (CP) — Despite the pleas of Canada's university presidents, John White, minister of colleges and universities, apparently has no intention of relaxing his hard line on university spending nor his demands for change.

When he took office in the spring, Mr. White imposed tough restrictions on university spending — "more scholar for the dollar," he said — and demanded changes.

Since then, university presidents have pleaded they can't live within their budgets and they have been further hurt by an unexpected drop in enrolments.

"I'm not prepared to accept responsibility for those miscalculations," said Mr. White. He said the Council of Ontario Universities, which represents presidents and administrators, last spring forecast a shortage of 2,500 places for freshmen this fall.

However, 3,000 fewer students than planned actually did show up.

"The first thing they have to do is not their costs," said Mr. White. "They have to attract more students to their institutions to get them up to a scale which is economical."

That cannot be done by people sitting around the boardroom wringing their hands."

Entry to Seaway Is Barred So Ships Are Not Trapped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe said Thursday the U.S. government will do everything it can to prevent trapping of ocean freighters in the Great Lakes by the enforced winter closing of the St. Lawrence seaway.

Volpe said the joint announcement Wednesday by U.S. and Canadian seaway officials of a conditional cut off at midnight tonight, for entry of ocean carriers into the seaway-Great Lakes system, was the first step.

Procedures are being worked out for orderly movement of the unusually heavy late-season ocean traffic into Great Lakes ports, Volpe said.

At the latest count, he said, 224 ocean vessels are in the Great Lakes-seaway system, compared with 119 a year ago, and 182 more are scheduled to come in. An additional 75 are expected to request entrance, Volpe said.

Thus, without some restraint the seaway might have been called upon to handle more than 400 ocean vessels in the month before the Dec. 12 closing date, he said.

Volpe said ocean vessels entering the seaway after today must accept the possibility they may be trapped in the system for the winter.

Interest in City Growing In Home Ownership Plan

Belleville families in the $9,000 to $7,000 income bracket are showing interest in the possibility of becoming home owners under the new CMHC (Home Ownership Made Easy) Plan, according to Alderman Ross Davis, chairman of the special council committee formed to investigate the plan, is evidenced by the number of telephone calls received by him and at city hall.

The first meeting of the council committee was held this week but no formal release of proceedings will be made until some preliminary decisions are formulated for presentation to council.

"The whole purpose of this exercise," said Ald. David, "is an attempt to make home ownership possible for the large segment of our population in the $9,000 to $7,000 bracket by way of provision of public money land and financing by CMHC at very favorable interest rates."

Ald. David said senior governments were encouraging local governments to innovate and stimulate new ideas in planning and servicing.

In Belleville the proposal being investigated is the use of city-owned land for use through the HOME plan.

If the proposal is carried through the Belleville plan could be a first in Ontario, Ald. David said Belleville area families would have the opportunity to apply in the prescribed manner and under rules that would be established.

National Aviation Museum May Replace Trenton Plan

TRENTON (Staff) — A National Aviation Museum to be located in Ottawa is the current front runner among plans being discussed now as replacements for the fated Trenton RCAF Memorial Hall of Aviation History project.

Air Marshal Larry Dunlap, chairman of the memorial fund, told The Intelligencer today he has been engaged in preparing a feasibility study on the Ottawa museum concept, recently revealed to the RCAF Association in convention at Saskatoon.

"The new plan involves construction of a new home for several, perhaps most aviation collections, particularly those in the Ottawa area through co-operation of the department of state.

The proposed museum, cost estimates for which have not been completed, would house the national aircraft collection now located in vintage hangars at Rockcliffe, the aviation section of the National Museum of Science and Technology, exhibits from the National War Museum and a modest RCAF Memorial.

Air Marshal Dunlap said the hangars at Rockcliffe "are not at all suited for the priceless collection" of museum pieces housed there, nor is it for the secretary of state will have room for the replacement of these," he stated in an interview today.

The memorial chairman revealed that the department of state has given "general recognition that the collection needs to be rehoused." However, he added that although the department has been quite helpful it has not committed itself.

"It would be feasible to action with them (state department)," said the air marshal. He said it is the consensus of the memorial board organization that such co-operative scheme as the Ottawa museum idea should be explored in full.

"We are not likely to have the financial means to be independent in realizing a memorial," he indicated. The plan necessitates federal government financial assistance. He called the National Aviation Museum concept "a fairly good solution".

The air marshal will be discussing it with directors of the various collections concerned in the next few weeks, although no decision date is in sight for acceptance or rejection of the proposal.

Other ideas are still receiving close scrutiny but not to the scale of the now formulated museum plan, which received support yesterday in an editorial in Contact, the CFB Trenton newspaper.

Also being considered is a memorial park surrounded by historic aircraft on pedestals. The Trenton site of the original RCAF Memorial project is one plot of land receiving serious consideration for this.

Planning Board Costs Lower Than Expected

Quinte Planning Board is less than a year old and already its books are showing a surplus.

When the board first began meeting five months ago, each of the seven municipalities was levied 7-12 of the cost or running the new organization on the seven months of 1971 remaining.

However, costs have fallen $16,000 behind funds collected to date, and the board last night resolved to exempt their members from further costs until 1972.

Each month, the planning board collects $1,100 in operating costs.

As of November, they have collected $38,000, with expenses running to only $42,000.

The budget was introduced, based on a staff of 10, they did not assume their positions until September, four months after the board was formed.

A letter will be forwarded to municipal clerks involved, advising them of the decision.

Mayor, Solicitor Life Members

Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott and City Solicitor John C. Miller have been made honorary life members of the local Duke of Edinburgh unit of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans in Canada.

The framed membership certificates were presented to the city officials this week by J. C. Lundberg, Dominion president of the DEAFV, J. C. McArthur, national secretary, and William Ford, vice-president of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit.

The inscription of the certificates notes the life membership was given in consideration of outstanding service to the veterans' association.

Mr. Lundberg said the DEAFV was particularly appreciative to the city of Belleville for its efforts in maintaining the Cenotaph.

"It has a quiet air of dignity that is missing at many other memorials across Canada," he said.

The Dominion president said the association's membership was also appreciative of Mayor Scott's interest in the welfare of veterans.

New $10 Bills To Be Introduced

OTTAWA (Staff) — For the first time in more than 30 years, the Bank of Canada is issuing Canadian bills, one on which a portrait of a person other than a reigning monarch appears.

Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's first prime minister, appears on a newly issued series of $10 bills, now being delivered to Canadian banks.

The Queen remains on the $1 and $2 bills, as she does on the new 20s, released last summer.

The new series of bills will also feature former prime ministers Sir Robert Borden (1911-1920) on the $100 note, Sir Wilfrid Laurier (1896-1911) on the $5 and William Lyon Mackenzie King (1921-1926 and 1935-1948) on the $50. They will be issued later.

Previous to the reign of King George VI in 1937, Canada regularly featured various members of the royal family, prime ministers and governors-general and noteworthy Canadians on pseudo-Canadian currency. The first notes featured Jacques Cartier on the $1 bills and Generals Wolfe and Montcalm on the $24.

The new $10 Macdonald bill retains the dominant purple color of the present 1954 series, with the rainbow effect of the new $20 bill.

Although chartered banks started receiving bills for distribution this week, they are not expected to find their way into the hands of the public until at least mid-November.

When the 1969 rainbow series $20 bills were first introduced, an Intelligencer survey among storekeepers revealed many reluctant to accept the new notes. Some flatly refused to cash them.

Cablevue Plans to Initiate Community Programming

A five-year program designed to move Cablevue interlakes into the field of community programming and to extend services to the Foxwood area, Thursday, by Gerald Morton, president of Cablevue (Belleville) Ltd.

Mr. Morton said the company hopes to be able to provide a time-weather, community billboard service within 90 days.

Under the proposal one of the three unused channels will be used for community information, enabling non-profit organizations in the community to promote their activities without charge. This service will also include background music.

Cablevue plans to move further into the field of public information and has initiated negotiations with the Ontario Educational Television Authority for the provision of up to five hours a day of adult educational programming.

Once negotiations are completed, a weekly schedule to be broadcast on a Monday-to-Friday basis will be offered. This would be fed to Cablevue by videotape from the Toronto - based educational television authority.

These programs will be made available to subscribers at no additional charge as the time-weather, billboard service.

The actual date of commencement has not yet been set, pending formal approval has to be given from the Canadian Radio - Television Commission for special service. The commission is concerned over the quality of the service and it is anticipated the necessary authority will be forthcoming within 90 days.

It is hoped that further development of the community programming will take place eventually.

Coupled with the decision to extend programming is a five-year program of extension of services to those areas in the licensed area which do not have cable television.

Top priority is being given to extension of services which started this year with servicing of the area along Highway 2 between Belleville and Trenton.

In 1972 Cablevue plans to extend services north of Trenton to the Barry Heights area, Glen Miller, Batawa and Frankford.

The 1973 service will be extended to the Redeerville area by means of a submarine cable across the Bay of Quinte to the north shore of Ameliasburg Township. This service will be extended to Fenwood Gardens as well.

Service will then move south of Trenton to the Roseland Acres and Carrying Place areas and then along the south side of the bay to Albury and a link up with the Redeerville cable system.

In 1975 the final construction phase will take place with extension of services to the Consecon, Consecon area north of Belleville.

The five-year program involves about $1 million in extended cable service and will provide a service to a potential 13,000 additional homes. Service now covers 11 per cent of the City of Belleville and 73 per cent of the homes in Trenton. The Highway 2 extended service is expected to be operational within 10 days.

Mohawks to Seek Aid Under Province Plan

TYENDINAGA RESERVE (Staff) — Chief Earl Hill of the Bay of Quinte Mohawks, said last night he will look into possibilities of qualifying for a provincial government winter works grant to help rebuild the Mohawks council house.

The $35-million incentives winter works program does include Indian bands among local groups that may apply for grants.

Meantime, says Chief Hill, the Mohawks have received a commitment from the Dept. of Indian Affairs and Northern Development for a $12,000 grant toward the $50,000 project.

The council house — centre of Mohawk community life — burned to the ground and the Mohawks have been busy ever since raising funds to restore the building.

Already, it's estimated they have raised $15,000. Such is the federal grant, should boost funds past the hallway mark.

Developers Say 'All Systems Go'

Dr. Robert Patrick, Quinte Planning Board member from Trenton, expressed concern that construction of board offices at the junction of Wallbridge - Loyalist Road and Highway 2, had not begun yet.

He said assurances of occupancy by February of 1972, from Montreal plaza developers had been received, but work has begun.

The board will rent office space from the developer.

Planning board chairman Jack M. Hall said he had been in contact with Lease Corporation, who confirmed that "all systems are go," and construction will begin Nov. 29.

Both A and P food stores and Zellers will locate large outlets on either end of the $1.3 million mall. Construction, it will be centred on the middle portion, which will house offices and boutiques.

Banquet Speaker

Veterans Must Unite To Get Proper Benefits

Veterans across Canada must unite in their efforts to gain maximum benefits from the federal government, which too long has been making veterans dance to the tunes of politicians, Hugh Chadderton, executive secretary of the War Amputations of Canada told veterans who gathered at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall last night for their annual Remembrance Day banquet.

Although the federal government had a new pension plan, Mr. Chadderton said, they are "playing football" with veterans requiring more adequate benefits.

He recited several cases of war widows, amputees and totally incapacitated veterans who are receiving much less than the maximum, benefits set down in their categories. One widow of a brigade commander is receiving only $220. a month, with which she raised her only son and sent him through college. A paraplegic veteran, whose spine was damaged by an 88 millimeter shell, received $3,400 when he could be collecting $5,400 from the government.

The executive secretary of the war amputees association said benefits in 1919 amounted to the same as wages received by basic civil servants — $1,320 maximum. In 1971 they are the same, he said.

"We're getting gypped out of $1,000.

"What we want is to be treated fairly. We want to ensure that the pension commission will not exist. We're tired of the political can-can game Mr. Dube (The Honorable Jean-Eude Dube, Minister of Veterans Affairs) is playing," he said, to thunderous applause from the gathered veterans and guests.

"Mind you, there has been some great steps forward, but there are still some very big loopholes in it," he added, compared with what he referred to as the "super pension plans" of Sweden and France.

Only by calling on the "grass roots" veterans will the national association have more power to voice in their own affairs. "They aren't going to take the pension commission chiselling more out of the veteran's pension."

Mr. Chadderton said the association doesn't like "to be compared to trade unions. We don't go down to Parliament Hill waving flags. We go down armed with sheafs of statistics."

Chief instigator of the Words report on veterans affairs, Mr. Chadderton recalled the origin of Canada's national war veterans association.

"This is one of the few ways we have left where we can really communicate."

"I make no apologies of being commercial in making my address to you," he said, "but we're not going to give in, we're going to keep fighting."

Public response to those who saw service in the great wars and other military confrontations is a touchy subject which veterans will rally to when they are told interest is waning.

He blamed the press for some of the disinterest, recalling the John Lennon and Yoko Ono "lie-in" in Montreal.

"Veterans were pushed off the front page by their lie-in — in the same hotel in which we were holding our convention.

"I just don't buy it that we have to teach these kids respect. Maybe if they got a little older, they will realize what it's all about.

"The politicans throw back in our faces 'you have to get out and teach these young people of the horrors of war. If you don't go out and teach them, we can't sponsor you.' This is the coward's way out," he charged.

And to illustrate his point, Mr. Chadderton drew attention to Belleville's own Nov. 11 services.

He said Belleville "is one of the greatest veterans' towns in Canada."

"I honestly believe Ottawa, with all its politicians and TV cameras, couldn't beat it."

Three Dead

He said there were "all kinds" of railroad safety rules governing such operations.

The three men had worked together as a team for quite some time, said the superintendent.

They had varying lengths of service with the railroad: Mr. Prevost 11 years, Mr. McLaren, 43 years and Mr. Jordan, 20 years.

The train was manned by an all-Toronto crew.

Acting Sergeant W. J. Stewart, who has yet to be questioned by police, was alerted to complete his run so that a second train, travelling on the same line, could proceed.

A post mortem has been called for by Dr. Robert McLelland, coroner for Napanee. Constable John Peoples was the chief investigating officer. CPR officials were present at the scene, near the Robindale station.

CP Rail Tracks Planning Issue

Of the question of relocation to be considered by committees preparing Belleville's official plans, Alderman Downing noting before will be the matter of Canadian Pacific Railway tracks along Dundas Street.

Belleville Alderman Arthur Keegan told members of the Quinte Planning Board at its regular meeting of the CPR tracks will hinder planning for the whole area."

Mayor J. Russell Scott, commenting on the matter, said that while this has already come before council, and a special meeting between municipalities, railways and other governmental agencies was held, the board members the department of transport and transportation must be approached from a municipal level.

Citing the case of Pembroke Dr. Scott said the provincial department agreed to pay 85 per cent of the more than $100,000 the result of a study of their track relocation needs.

He said once figures were available for Belleville the city had to foot only seven per cent of the bill.

"The request must come from the municipal leaders — with support from planning boards."

Several consulting firms have entered proposals for preparation of Belleville's plans.

When planning staff and the persons concerned meet with various consultants, planning director Bert Keegan said last night they will be asked to consider preparing plans with the tracks involved, and a second without the rails.

Total Down Slightly

24,073 Enrolled In County Schools

The official head count has been taken in county schools and the total counted — 24,073 students. This total is down slightly from 19705 total of 24,121.

These enrolment figures are taken, for official purposes, on Sept. 30 of each year.

On that date in 1971, there were 15,183 elementary school pupils, 8,017 secondary and 73 in schools for the retarded.

The enrolment in the elementary schools is broken down between junior and senior levels, a decrease from a peak of 15,663 in 1968. But the secondary enrolment is continuing to expand rising from 6,790 in 1968, the year before amalgamation of individual boards into the county system.

The statistics show that Quinte Secondary is the largest secondary school, with an enrolment of 1,466. Second largest is Trenton, with 1,381 students. Bayside secondary school is Bayside with 616 students attending. Trenton High School on a split shift until their building is completed.

Largest elementary school in the system is Barry J. Clarke, in Belleville, with 794 pupils.

The age group with the largest number of students enrolled is the 14- and 15-year-olds. There are 2,400 students under five in school, and at the opposite end of the age scale there are 1,498 students 19 years and over in school.

Drugs in Industry Speakers' Topic

The Belleville - Trenton section of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association will hear J. D. Caldwell, industrial consultant with the Addiction Research Foundation in Toronto, at a meeting and dinner Wednesday, Nov. 17, in the Trenton Golf Club.

Mr. Caldwell will relay pertinent information on drugs as a management concern before answering questions from local management personnel.

Earth Not So Bountiful

Change of season is no more rapidly shown than at farmer's market in Belleville. With winter on the way, the bounty of summer is gone and choice of fruits and vegetables is now sharply reduced — a fact starkly shown yesterday as Gerald Mumby, RR 2, Belleville, tended his stand on Market Square.

Many Quinte Centres Show Population Drop

Canadian population figures have generally increased since the last (partial) census in 1966 but several of the Quinte area urban centres seem to be getting smaller.

In a second preliminary bulletin of population counts taken in the 1971 census in June, Statistics Canada shows that while Belleville has grown, Bloomfield, and Madoc has declined.

The population for Picton is given as 4,860 as compared with 5,027 in 1966, or a drop of 167. The figure for Bloomfield is 724, compared with 750 five years ago.

The village of Madoc also dropped slightly — from 1,385 to 1,361 while Cobourg dropped from 11,524 to 11,214 a decrease of 310.

On the other hand, Belleville showed an increase of 1,713 in the five-year period — to 34,498 from 32,785 in 1966.

The census report showed that the village of Wellington also gained slightly in population. The count in June was 969 as compared with 908 five years ago.

Country Closer to Federal System

French-Speaking Belgians Make Gains in Election

By CT. FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The results of the Belgian general election have cast a shadow over the constitutional changes which had been hailed as a crucial step towards permanently easing the chronic division between the country's French-speaking and Flemish communities.

The changes provide for the granting of extra power—short of federalism—over their cultural and economic affairs to the Dutch-speaking public of Flanders and to their franco-phone compatriots in Wallonia.

There was also an attempt at a compromise solution to the stormy problem of ethnically-mixed Brussels.

The national capital, which serves also as the organizational hub of the expanding European Common Market, is a powerful force for the spread of French ways into surrounding areas of Flanders.

Thus, as a means of proving his spirit of compromise, Premier Minister Eyskens' pre-election government had won parliamentary approval for limitations on the further expansion of the dynamic French metropolitan area.

To placate the city's French-speaking population, Eyskens agreed to water down proposals for extending Flemish educational rights in the capital.

The election results seem to have sustained the strength of the socialists and of Eyskens' own Social Christian party across Belgium.

But, largely at the expense of the pro-government Liberal party, the balloting gave new strength to Walloon and French-speaking parties in southern Belgium's Walloon area and in Brussels itself.

In less spectacular fashion, the election gave extra parliamentary muscle to the Volksunie, a party loudly championing the regional rights of the Flemish.

In northern and southern Belgium as well as in Brussels, the radical, ethnic-oriented parties have long been pressing for outright federalism which they insist is the only way of achieving a peaceful settlement of the linguistic frictions plaguing their country.

Before the latest election, an apparently increased pre-occupation with economic rather than language problems had helped to dampen the passionate traditional with political campaigns in Belgium, geared as they usually are to the linguistic war.

Yet this inequality was deceptive. For one thing, the Walloons have shown themselves to be still fearful for their rights and nostalgic for their old-time economic prosperity in the face of a surge of Flemish development.

In Wallonia, the voters continue to be resentful of the additional privileges newly granted to the Flemings, while in Brussels the francophones have reacted angrily even to government-decreed educational changes and against what they term the "stranglehold" placed on their booming city's growth.

The latest electoral gains for the French-speaking radicals at the polls together with the progress of the Volksunie indicate that whoever among the middle-of-the-road politicians leads the next Belgian government will feel mounting pressure for drastic solutions to the regionalism verging on all-out federalism.

Relations with U.S.

Prime Minister Trudeau launched into one of his more convoluted statements when asked in Windsor about anti-American feeling and policies in Canada. He spoke of the need to "steer a middle course," and defended Canada's right to have dialogue with "one of the most powerful . . . and basically, one of the most progressive" countries in the world."

All this we took to mean the Soviet Union. Well all right, but we had better remember who our real friends are: Americans or Russians? The former alone can lead mass and basically are our kind of people while the Soviets are not. Should it come to the bit the defence of the "true north strong and free" will be a matter for Canadians — and Americans.

Having said that we recognize that the United States had better not take us for granted either. When President Nixon notes, as he did a while back, that Japan is Washington's biggest customer he betrays lack of knowledge as well as causing irritation here.

Canada, the president's nearest, if not dearest, friend, is the States' best customer. Fortunately, there are signs of concern among American politicians at the current low state of relations between the two neighbors. There is nowhere for these relations to go but up; for this to come about, however, Ottawa must show itself to be more neighborly. Similarly, in Washington they will have to do more homework on matters affecting Canada and show us a little more regard.

Students Write

We have received a sudden flurry of letters from Centennial students — a one-two-three blast in fact from a trio of Belleville wives who append their names on the typewritten pieces but without signing them. And signatures, as we frequently point out, are required for publication. Also, we would take more kindly to letters from young people if they would avoid such pitiable language which, unhappily, creeps into one of these missives.

The subjects to which the letters refer, incidentally, were discussed back in September and October so it appears the students have been mulling them for some time. First of all, school dress. We had referred to the "uniformly tidy, well-scrubbed and whole-some" students on an overseas magazine cover. They were in uniform blazers and we noted this was the exception rather than the rule in Canada. We made no criticism of the system here which, for the most part, allows students to wear what they like. That some look more tidy and well-scrubbed than others in uniform or not, is one of the facts of life.

Noting that dress apparel here should be whatever one wants to wear "as long as it is suitable to the school or occasion" (a moot point), one student adds: "The wearing of uniforms as optional or compulsory sounds ridiculous to me. A lot of people haven't got time to wash, dry and iron a clean uniform for school. There are homework and extra-curricular activities to take up their time. It is bad enough having to go out to work in a uniform."

Another letter, after a thinly-veiled suggestion that our viewpoint on school dress, specifically our praise of uniforms and the well-scrubbed look, was old-fashioned, added: "Most people realize that the dress of a person doesn't have any bearing on their personal ability or present any confusion of sex."

Now to drugs. On September 2 we referred to a drug survey in Belleville which showed that 40 per cent of 120 pupils interviewed were drug users. We went on to quote Globe and Mail columnist Richard Needham who made the point that "many or most high schools in Ontario are hotbeds of drug pushing and drug use."

Now we have this letter from a student who thinks we are confusing the 20-year-olds in the survey with high school students or even grade students. We did not say that — the two situations were mentioned separately — but be that as it may our friend goes on to say: "Sure there is a fair amount of drugs used in the schools, but how much is being used all the time. . . " and he cites coffee, cigarets, aspirins, alcohol and so on. "Why condemn us, your kids, perhaps the leaders of tomorrow , he says, for doing whatever turns us on. After all, you did the same when you were our age."

Well some of us did, indeed, at the same age. And some still do. But no number of wrongs will make a right. People use the more damaging of these substances at their own risk.

Davis Wants More Emphasis on Research

By DON O'HEARN

TORONTO — The federal-provincial conference in Ottawa will be deliberating for three days on the economy.

In school buildings across the province there will be hundreds of men and women who will be probably for the most part paying little attention to the conference.

Yet if these people could see the future they would have an absorbing interest. For they are guidance counsellors. And in Ontario's plan for the economy they will play a key part.

In a statement during the election campaign Premier Davis outlined the government's thinking on the economy and the future.

He said there were really only two fundamental choices. One would be to devote ourselves to exporting our natural resources and providing services to one another in Canada; thereby lowering ourselves and our living standards.

The other would be to continue to compete internationally in secondary manufacturing, with success in this depending on whether we can stay competitive in the area of high technology.

Ontario naturally chooses the second.

But high technology is a hard league these days and to stay at the top in it will require extraordinary effort.

As the premier explained there will have to be much emphasis on research.

Economic planning will be very important, and it is already underway with studies of all locations, transportation and other factors.

There will have to be product selectivity. We will have to specialize in those products in which our production is most efficient (Dominantly those related to our natural resources), and phase out the manufacture of low-technology products which can be produced more cheaply in countries with low-wage costs.

But above all we must have the skilled labor force with background and training for the technologies to which we are directing.

And this is where the guidance counsellors come in.

For the labor force that is needed youth will have to be guided into the training that is in demand.

The counsellors in our schools, now rather unimportant in the system though not properly so, will have the initial obligation. If we are to have success they will have to be smart people, close to the economy and wise in its needs.

It is not to be said that never has so much depended on so few. But they will be important.

Canadian—U.S. Relations Are Cool

Moncton L'Evangeline:
There was a time when relations between the two great countries of North America, Canada and the United States, were much friendlier.

Canadians were contents to enjoy the benefits of American prosperity and were very happy to see American businessmen and entrepreneurs exploit our natural resources and create thousands of jobs.

It is only in the last half of the 1960s that true Canadian nationalism has been born. Businessmen, economists, teachers, journalists have raised a cry of alarm that Canada is becoming a United States satellite. . . .

The Maritime Provinces are always the most affected by an economic crisis. Our three provinces are the last to benefit from an economic boom and the first to suffer the consequences of an economic crash. . . .

The political leaders of the three provinces recognize that our best future lies in a greater economic exchange with the states of the U.S. eastern coast.

But that does not excuse the laziness of too many Canadian multi-millionaires who prefer to see Americans take all the risks. Canadians must have a little more confidence in their capacity to develop a more Canadian economy.

Canada is going through a period of uncertainty in its relations with the United States. Although it would be close to disastrous for Canada to try to wage economic war with the Americans, pressures on the Canadian government for retaliation will be heard from one end of the country to the other to the extent that they will damage the economic attitudes. . . .

If the Americans continue to ignore Canada they risk quickly losing their best northern friend. . . . It is to be hoped that the visit of President Nixon in the spring will mark a thaw in the cold war between our two countries.

China May Further Fragment East-West Battle Lines

By STEPHEN SCOTT
UNITED NATIONS (CP) —

The arrival of the Communist Chinese here probably will speed up a process of erosion that has been evident for the last few years in what is rapidly becoming difficult to consider issues purely in an East-West context.

Not many years ago almost any issue before the United Nations or any other international forum was between the United States and the Soviet Union, with their allies approving what the super powers decided.

Even this fall, at the opening of the General Assembly, the United States was talking along the lines of the settlement of the world's major problems by the Soviet Union and the United States.

The Americans were talking realistically to a degree. In such areas as disarmament, the two powers did in fact reach an agreement and the rest of the world was invited to accept this agreement.

But on lesser issues, erosion has been evident for some years.

The talks are not always East-West. There also was North-South—the developed opposed to the undeveloped. The super powers could not always count on their allies on all matters. Blocs had started the process of disintegration.

There still is talk here of the Afro-Asian bloc, the Latin American bloc, the Western bloc—Western Europe, Canada, the United States, Australia and New Zealand—and the Soviet bloc.

But these descriptions have lost much of their meaning.

The Afro-Asians are falling apart, even over such an emotional issue as apartheid in South Africa. Some Africans are talking dialogue with South Africa. To others this remains anathema.

In the India-Pakistan dispute there is the strange co-ordination of China and the United States regarded as supporters of Pakistan and the Soviet Union supporting India.

In Latin America, some countries are becoming more leftist and anti-or nationalistic and are breaking away from what once was "Western" thinking.

Newcomers, European Common Market heads in the direction of becoming 10 countries, cannot be expected to support the United States on all issues.

For some years, the U.S. has been unable to count on Canada to support its positions.

Romania's break from Soviet dominance is well known. But the extent of its independence is the feeling of restiveness of other Eastern European countries.

Now sifting comes China, creating a further new international scene, with the angles being formed by China, the Soviet Union and the United States.

China has made it clear that it is in nobody's corner.

It can be expected to side here with nationalism and leftism and thus increasing the cleavage in various blocs.

This may become most apparent in what the "Soviet bloc", thinks about issues.

Romania's apparent ecstatic about the arrival of the Chinese. The Chinese are on record as being unalterably opposed to such actions as the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

The Perils of Christmas!

United Church Board of Evangelism and Social Service:

"Tis the season to be wary.

That's right — wary not merry.

Christmas just isn't what it used to be. Artificial logs, plastic lights on the tree, holly, mistletoe, carols, Santa Claus and all the rest of seasonal stuff. Joy, innocence, a contentment.

Take Christmas tree lights for instance. They're a No-No! On all lights used on the tree department would rather you didn't use them at all. But if you insist they be them out of the house if possible — they're a fire hazard out there in the woods.

The yule log used to be so much fun. Now it's a bummer. It only adds to the pollution problem. For the ingenious minister, it could have serious implications for the population explosion. The fireplace bowl is definitely out. If you drink, don't drive. Better still if you drive — don't drink.

That leaves us with Christmas dinner. What about that fork! Don't take a chance. With all those additives, cyclamates, calories and mercury the fork could be dangerous. It comes a meal of death. Besides somebody somewhere has likely got a cranberry boycott on the go. Well, you wouldn't be able to wash the dishes because detergent is a dirty word.

Of course, you can always go to church. On second thought, better check with your psychiatrist first. He can tell us about your guilt complex when you tell him you're going to be around again until Easter.

Winter Fair Explains Farming to Consumers

TORONTO (CP) — While cattle fanciers admire some fancy livestock at the opening of the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair today, housewives were finding out why beef costs as much as it a pound.

The 49-year-old fair always has appealed to different people for different reasons, says General Manager John Moles, but this year organizers are more aggressively emphasizing a broad base of attractions.

Mr. Moles says the fair still tells the story of agriculture, but this year it will attempt, among other things, to explain what it means to the consumer.

One display relates the economics of farming to food budgets.

"We want to show why a steer that sells for 35 cents a pound on the hoof costs as much as $2 a pound by the time it gets to the supermarket," says Mr. Moles.

As well as its traditional offerings of such things as the horse show, livestock exhibits and organic oddities (a 353-pound squash, for example), the fair this year features living examples of the rustic existence.

Representatives from the Kitcheener Mennonite community are demonstrating quilting, broom-work and other handicrafts in a display building at the fair.

The winter fair also puts a little country in the city, and Mr. Moles hopes, with a $3,000 budget, to put a little showbiz in the barnyard.

This year for the first time live entertainment will be featured every day at the fair. Much of it, says Mr. Moles, has been obtained inexpensively, including the musicians from the Junior Farmers' Music Festival last summer. They will receive no musicians' fees, but will have their travel expenses paid.

Today, fair officials threw the gates open free to senior citizens. And the opening day musical horse show was free to everyone.

Jet Lands in N.S.

YARMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — An Iberian Airlines jumbo jet, forced to make an emergency landing at the tiny airport here Thursday afternoon, left for New York early today with only its crew on board.

A 12-man team searched the Spanish Boeing 747 jetliner for 2½ hours without finding a bomb that an anonymous caller told Iberian officials in Madrid would explode at 3 p.m. AST.

The bomb threat was relayed to officials at Kennedy International Airport in New York, the plane's destination on a flight from Madrid. New York officials instructed Capt. J. Arango at 2:45 p.m. to land at the nearest airport.

The Spanish captain didn't waste any time, taking the jumbo jet with 241 passengers and 18 crew members from 28,000 feet to ground level in nine minutes. Although the jet normally needs a 8,000-to-9,000 feet to land, Capt. Arango used only 3,000 feet of the 8,200-foot runway

Six Cadets Injured

TORONTO (CP) — Six cadets returning to Fort York armories from a Remembrance Day service in Streetsville, Ont. were injured when the army truck they were riding in left a ramp, crossed a median and another ramp and hit a guardrail. Five cadets were treated in hospital and released. Another suffered [illegible] The wives of their attackers [illegible] common: We all have to sit at home at night worrying whether our menfolk will come home."

The two police officers were shot down while inquiring about a robbery at a liquor store 50 yards from their heavily guarded barracks.

Court of Cathedral in, ordered the storekeeper to lie on the floor, and cut the officers down in a hail of automatic gunfire.

The known death toll in two years of Northern Ireland violence now stands at 107.

Meanwhile, the IRA issued a statement condemning the tarring of Catholic girls who courted British soldiers.

The official wing of the IRA demanded a halt to these "dastardly acts" and said anyone defying this ruling would be dealt with immediately.

Three girls have been daubed with tar or painter's lok this week and had their hair cropped.

One 17-year-old girl who was a victim of such a brutal assault Thursday is still recover-corted her back home.

Policemen's Wives Ask Terrorists' Wives' Help

BELFAST (CP-Reuter) — An extraordinary and moving women's plea urging wives of Northern Ireland's extremist gunmen to help end the bloodshed was made just hours after two unarmed police officers were shot dead in a Roman Catholic area of Belfast Thursday.

It came from the wives of police serving with the Royal Ulster Constabulary after a year which has seen 11 police officers die violently. Non of the police murders have occurred in the last 12 weeks.

The Police Wives Association issued a statement urging that police officers should be given automatic weapons to match those of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, now battling to end Ireland's partitition.

Addressed to the gunmen's wives, the statement said: "Use your influence to end this violence. Keep your men off the streets. Both police wives and the wives of their attackers

Another girl, who was attacked Tuesday, is believed to be determined to go through with her plans to marry a British soldier later today.

The third girl said she would never go out with a British soldier again.

In Londonerry today, the IRA stepped in to save a teenage Catholic girl from the tarring ordeal.

Hooded women of the Londonderry's Catholic Bogside district pounced on the girl and hauled her off to have her head shave and her face plastered with tar.

Just as the girl was being bundled into a car, IRA men arrived, released her, and es-

NEW PLAN FOR CALLS WITHIN ONTARIO AND QUEBEC STARTS NOVEMBER 28th,

When to call Long Distance to get the lowest rate.

You'll get the lowest rate available with the new "Sunday Visit" Plan. DIAL DIRECT on Sundays between 8:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m., and you'll get three-quarters off the regular rate.

Or, you can get two-thirds off the regular rate with the "Late Night" rate — between 11:00 p.m. and 8:00 a.m. when you DIAL DIRECT. But remember, this new plan does not become effective until November 28th.

The following changes in discounts on Long Distance calls have been approved by the Canadian Transport Commission for a six-month trial period.

They apply to calls within Bell territory in Ontario, Quebec, Labrador and N.W.T.

New "Sunday Visit" Plan

On Sundays, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. when you dial direct you'll get a discount of 3/4 off the full direct regular charge, as shown in Table 1, for the initial minute and each additional minute of your call. That means if the regular rate for your call is $1.00 you'll be billed 25 cents. The "Sunday Visit" rate is not exactly the same as the "Family Calling" rate — in some cases it works out to be a little more, in others less—but it's close. From 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. a discount of 1/2 applies. See table 2.

	From November 28th. "Sunday Visit" Plan 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.		Before June 6th "Family Calling" Plan 10-12 p.m. & all day Sunday
For example:	10 mins.	20 mins.	10 mins.	20 mins.
North Bay to Toronto	$ .81	$1.61	$ .80	$1.55
Kingston to Toronto	$ .73	$1.46	$ .75	$1.50
Ottawa to Cornwall	$ .53	$1.06	$ .60	$1.10

New "Late Night" rate

From 11 p.m. to 8 a.m. you get a 2/3 discount off the regular rate, when you dial direct. That means if the regular rate for your call is $1.50, you'll be billed 50 cents. For typical comparisons see Table 3 below.

New pay phone and hotel rates

There is a 3-minute minimum on station-to-station calls from pay phones and hotels, and discounts do not apply to this initial period. Discounts (Table 2) will apply only to additional minutes, as shown in Table 1 — provided that you pay for the call by inserting coins or, in the case of a hotel phone, on your hotel bill.

Since this is provided as an alternative to dial-direct calls, the discounts do not apply to collect calls, credit card calls, or calls billed to a third number. Pay phone charges are rounded to the nearest nickel.

	Customer-dialed call weekday evening	Similar call from pay phone or hotel, weekday evening		Credit card, collect calls or calls charged to a third party
For example:	3 mins.	10 mins.	3 mins.	10 mins.	3 mins.	10 mins.

Illegitimacy Rate Double That of Wartime

OTTAWA (CP) — New social attitudes seem to be reflected in a rising rate of illegitimacy which is unprecedented in the last 30 years, even in wartime.

Beginning about 1963, the rates have risen steeply to 9.2 illegitimate births for every 100 live births in 1968. Between 1926 and 1963, the rate had never reached five per cent even during the Second World War.

The rise in the rate was steady from 5.3 per cent in 1963 to the present, a new study by the federal health department indicates.

"More than three-quarters of illegitimate births are to women between the ages of 15 and 24," it says.

"This figure indicates the great need for an educational program in family planning that would begin at the elementary school level."

The illegitimacy rates are one of a variety of data examined in the study of the current status of family planning in Canada, an area to which the federal government is devoting increasing resources.

In 1968 the national infant death rate was 19.3 per 1,000 live births. This was exceeded by Nova Scotia, Quebec, Newfoundland, Manitobe, Prince Edward Island and Saskatchewan among the provinces.

Rates in the Yukon were nearly double and in the Northwest Territories they were more than double—52.9 per 1,000 live

Canada Bows to Big Two

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada bowed before United States and Soviet pressure Thursday and withdrew a seemingly non-controversial amendment to a proposed convention designed to provide compensation to victims of objects falling from outer space.

The convention was approved by the General Assembly's main political committee 90-0 with four abstentions, including Canada. Later it will be approved by the General Assembly and then be opened for signatures. It was eight years in the making.

The treaty provides that a country that sends an object into space is responsible for paying compensation for any damage that that object might cause when falling to earth in another country.

If there is no agreement on compensation then the matter is sent to an international arbitration board. Canada has long objected that the arbitration is not binding.

In a last-ditch attempt to keep in the principle of binding arbitration, Paul St. Pierre, parliamentary assistant to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, moved an amendment earlier this week which had the effect of inviting all who sign the convention to agree to binding arbitration.

The Soviet Union was against even this, and the United States obviously was afraid that the convention as amended was in danger of losing support.

Both countries are reported to have put strong pressure on the Canadian government and the Canadian delegation to withdraw the amendment.

Canada finally agreed Thursday.

Legislators Get Golden Chance to State Canadian Viewpoint

WASHINGTON (CP) — A group of Canadian legislators was given, as one member put it, the kind of exposure for the Canadian viewpoint "not even a cabinet minister could expect" in a one-day meeting with U.S. congressmen Thursday.

The all-part Canadian delegation was back in Ottawa today after taking up with their American counterparts U.S. protectionist moves and their impact and possible repercussions in Canada.

The 12 MPs and three senators came to Washington for talks billed as an extraordinary meeting of members of the Canada-U.S. inter-parliamentary group, which normally meets once a year on a get acquainted basis.

Robert Kaplan, chairman of the Commons finance committee, said on his return to Ottawa Thursday night that he found the U.S. congressmen sympathetic to the idea that Canada should be exempted from the 10-per-cent U.S. import levy that is imposed on about 25 per cent of Canada's exports to the U.S.

Of the approximately two dozen U.S. legislators the Canadians talked to, Kaplan said he found a few were hostile, a few were fence-sitters, but the majority appeared sympathetic.

Before his departure for home, Kaplan (L—Toronto Din Valley), said of the meeting: "It's the kind of exposure for the Canadian viewpoint that not even a cabinet minister could expect."

House Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said following the talks that the Americans the Canadians met were "already our friends."

He described the talks as a success in that the visitors had supplied arguments for American colleagues to use in asking exemption for Canada from the import levy, or some other relief.

Kaplan said there was a "great feeling of sympathy" that Canada should be exempt from the import levy, but added later he got the feeling that many of their hosts just weren't aware of damage the Nixon measures were causing in Canada.

Senator Frank Church, one of the Canadians' hosts, said following the meetings that "there was no question of threatened moves of retaliation by Canada, but the range of possibilities was discussed."

The Democrat from Idaho noted that he had "already expressed my grave concern about the anti-Yankee feeling growing in Canada."

Bruce Howard, Liberal MP from Okanagan Boundary, said, however, that the question asked was what retaliation Canada could take against the import levy and other U.S. measures.

Howard said the Canadians had not visited Washington to discuss policy matters and did not outline any possible retaliatory measures, although Canada "would have to make some kind of arrangements" to off-set the surtax effects, particularly on employment, if there was no relief soon.

Church and Howard said the question of the U.S.-Canada auto pact and energy sales to the U.S. came up during the discussions.

The Canadians arrived at a time when Congress is particularly busy with legislation and committee meetings, and many of the congressmen had to break off their talks with the Canadians to answer roll-calls on the floor of the House of Representatives. Still others were called away to urgent committee sessions.

The whole administration tax package, including several measures which could further adversely affect Canadian industry, is due to come up for debate in the Senate today.

During the morning, the whole Senate broke off its foreign-aid debate to salute the Canadian delegation and virtually every senator on the floor made a point of greeting each visitor with a handshake and a few words.

Lloyds Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) said he had good out on the street after the delegation's arrival here Wednesday night and asked passers-by if they were aware that Canada-U.S. relations were going through a strained phase now.

"I found considerable understanding for Canada just among the ordinary people," he said. Or most told him he didn't know what the U.S. was trying to do to Canada, but he didn't like it.

Most of the talks were held at a three-hour meeting in a Capitol conference room. Later, the Canadians pressed their case at an overflow luncheon attended by more than 25 U.S. legislators.

In Ottawa, Kaplan said the Canadians pointed out that some of the features in the new tax package already are big fit in Canada. He said the proposed Domestic-International Sales Corp., which would encourage U.S. firms to export from plants in the U.S. rather than through foreign subsidiaries, already is hurting Canada.

The Federal Government is putting 498 million dollars to work, through a series of specific programs, to help create jobs for Canadians. This message is designed to give you program details.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH THE INDIVIDUAL

We're encouraging you to act on your own initiative or through local government, local organizations and service groups to come up with ideas for our Local Initiatives Program. For example, your community may wish to develop services for the handicapped, or elderly, or a day care centre, or a new skating rink, or any number of things that will make your community a better place.

There's also a Training-on-the-Job Program that will work through business and industry to expand opportunities for those who are unemployed or have little work experience.

If you have some basic experience, we've extended the Canada Manpower Training Program to help provide you with additional learning.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY

There's a program of tax incentives or direct payments to employers to encourage them to add trainees to their staffs through the Training-on-the-Job Program. This will help the trainee get work experience that he can use in many jobs.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH THE MUNICIPALITIES

The foundation of all municipal activity is the previously mentioned Local Initiatives Program. This will help you support and spur community projects that will give jobs to people in your community who find themselves unemployed.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH THE PROVINCES

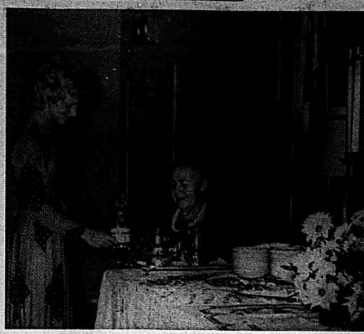
Obviously, the municipal Local Initiatives Program will tie in closely with the Provinces. So will our Special Development Loans Program that will finance new capital works projects. We'll be speeding up mortgage approvals through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to get homes, student housing and sewage treatment projects under way.

We also will be making loans to exhibition commissions, boards and associations to get you working on multi-purpose fair and trade buildings.

WORKING TOGETHER WITH FEDERAL WORKS

On our level, we'll be working to give you more job opportunities on maintenance and improvement activities on Federal buildings; transportation facilities; forest and park projects; and many others.

WHERE IT ALL WORKS TOGETHER



The job starts at your Canada Manpower Centre. For advice and assistance on any of the programs that you feel apply to you or your community, contact your local Canada Manpower Centre. They'll be happy to help you with all the information they have.

When Canadians get involved together, Canada works.

Sons of Jacob Tea Has Hanukkah Theme

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

Candlelight flickered and glowed on the polished surfaces of the silver tea service, casting tiny shadows on the pure white table cloth. The occasion was the Sons of Jacob Ladies' Auxiliary annual tea and bazaar held on Wednesday afternoon at the Synagogue. The flames held a special significance at this event for they commemorated Hanukkah, the ancient Jewish festival of lights celebrated by Jews all over the world with a mixture of ceremony and merrymaking. The festival commemorates the light which burned miraculously for eight days shedding its lustre throughout the Temple at Jerusalem, hence the special significance of the candlelight.

Prominently displayed on a wall was a 'Menorah' a symbol resembling a candelabra with eight branches signifying the eight days over which Hanukkah is celebrated. The decor was in blue and white, the traditional Jewish colors tastefully worked into the tea room and bazaar section.

The main tea table was appointed with a blue and white cloth embroidered with 'Menorah' motifs. Nestling beneath a candelabra holding blue and white candles were twin bowls of colorful flowers. The small tea tables were alternately centred with blue and white candles.

Tea was poured by Mrs. J. Goldberg and Mrs. J. Burke while the tea room hostesses were Mrs. M. Karten, Mrs. S. Fainbloom and Mrs. B. Katzman. Tea room convener was Mrs. S. C. Rom assisted by Mrs. I. Shulman.

Bowls of assorted flowers marked the dividing line between the tea room and bazaar booths were decorated in blue and white with Hebrew characters spelling out the word Hanukkah on each table.

In charge of the home baking table were Mrs. J. Albert assisted by Mrs. M. Feinmayer, Mrs. A. K. Black, Mrs. T. Schwab, Mrs. M. Lear and Mrs. I. Lindenberg. A particularly tempting array of goodies was displayed on this table, including fluffy, moist cakes with chocolate swirls, and a variety of specialities including babka (yeast cake), Hanukkah bread and strudel squares.

A gardening table was convened by Mrs. L. Yanover while Mrs. M. Levine, Mrs. S. Schein and Miss V. Baig presided at the white elephant table. The decor was planned an executed by Mrs. L. Yanover, Mrs. S. Fairbloom and Mrs. B. Karten.

In the basement, a number of dresses were offered for sale in a shop atmosphere. This section called 'The Room' was convened by Mrs. N. Albert assisted by Mrs. B. Pollock. Later, an auction of miscellaneous items was held. The other conveners were Mrs. C. Lear and Mrs. R. Zalkowitz. The door prize was won by the holder of ticket no. 480.

A Yule Forerunner

Teresa Brown, Muriel Clapham and Natalie McPherson supply finishing touches to the Christmas Market in Picton

Yule Market Successful

PICTON (Staff) — Toyland staged a one day welcome for grown-ups yesterday when the Christmas Market sponsored by women workers of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene opened in the Parish Hall.

Hundreds of shoppers crammed display counters throughout the afternoon to buy holiday decorations, gifts and stocking stuffers.

The church group raised more than $2,000 at the Christmas Market featuring exclusive items, many of them handcrafted, for sale.

Mrs. Charity Clarke, a member of the Anglican church women's organization explained that the money is split on a per centage basis between the local parish and foreign missions. Funds from yesterday's bazaar will be supplemented by money earned by the church group for catering services and from rummage sales.

The Christmas Market, held Wednesday for the third year, featured gifts ranging in cost from 25 cents to $12. Most of the sale items were designed to appeal to children young and not so young.

Perched rakishly on one of the display tables Raggedy Anne and Andy were among the first stuffed toys to find homes. A shaggy lion also was adopted almost at once.

A jolly pond featured a family of stuffed bull frogs which promptly sold as conversation cushions.

Among the many novelties that proved sell-outs was a stable of hobby horses made from wool stockings and decorated with felt nostrils and ears and sporting colorful bridles of braid and tassles.

Other items offered for sale included a pine cradle, Christmas tree decorations, decorative waste baskets, baked goods, jewellery, stuffed dolls and sachets.

An apron tree also proved popular among buyers.

"It was like a visitation of the locusts," said a tired but happy Mrs. Clarke, describing the success of the bazaar. She remarked that by 3 p.m., just three hours after the market opened, nothing remained on the tables except the table cloths.

The church worker attributed part of the market's success to its noon opening which allows store employees to shop on their lunch hours while enjoying a cup of tea and sandwiches at the bazaar.

The unusual gifts sold at the Christmas Market are representative of a year's work on the part of the Anglican Church women. Prices on all items are marked as reasonably as possible to keep gifts in the $12 range.

Shoppers generally agreed a visit to the Christmas Market seemed like a walk through Santa's workshop.

as they wait for its noon opening. The Anglican church workers and their enthusiastic cohorts raised more than $2000 selling novelty gifts such as the items shown.

Hagerman – Haggerty

St. John's Anglican Church, Stirling was the setting for the October 23 wedding of Linda Dianne Haggerty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Haggerty, and of Russell John Hagerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Hagerman. Rev. Charles Staples was the officiating clergyman while Mrs. Gail Faulkner, organist and Norman Middleton, soloist provided organ music for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of crystal peau with an empire waistline and a wedding band collar with a lace frill. The bodice featured a square Venice lace yoke. The long full sleeves were gathered at the wrist and edged with a wide Venice lace frill. The full skirt was bordered at the hem with two wide Venice lace frills while a band and bow with streamers accented the waistline. A cathedral length veil of pure silk illusion was held by a headpiece of wired Guipure lace oak leaves trimmed with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of red sweetheart roses and white carnations entwined with ivy.

The maid of honor Miss Holly Goodison wore a floor length gown of pure silk with a silk velvet bodice. The bodice and sleeves were of royal blue velvet and the full skirt was of hand painted pure silk with flowers of royal blue and burgundy on a champagne background. A large emerald green band with a bow at the centre front accented the waistline.

The bridesmaids Diane Reid and Ruth Hagerman the bridegroom's sister were dressed identically to the maid of honor. Each girl carried a bouquet of white mums and red roses.

The best man was Leslie Pryse while Grant Hagerman the bridegroom's brother and Grant Reid the bride's uncle were the ushers. Mark Hagerman, the bridegroom's nephew, was ring bearer.

The reception was held at the Madrid Room Sun Valley Motor Inn, Belleville. Greeting guests was the bride's mother in a floor length hot pant ensemble.

Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother in a street length dress of deep purple crimplene. Both mothers wore corsages of cymbidium orchids.

For the wedding trip to points South the bride donned a chocolate brown hot pant outfit with dark brown accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations and bronze pompon 'mums.

Upon return the couple will reside at RR 1, Stirling.

Ann Landers

Young Daughter Feels Responsible for Miscarriage at Five Months

Dear Ann Landers: Our young daughter had a miscarriage a few days ago and she is in a deep depression. This was her first pregnancy and she lost the baby in the fifth month. A friend told her if she had held the baby another week it could have lived. Now she blames herself for not being more careful. She is sure she killed the child because she and her husband went dancing the night before.

I'm no doctor, Ann, but I don't believe a fetus of five months can survive. Please find out and let us know.—Maryland Mom

Dear M.M.: A fetus cannot survive at five months. Anyone who says otherwise does not have an honest coat.

The "friend" who gave your daughter that cheery bit of information sounds like a pain in the neck—and I moved the locks, up a few feet in the interest of printability.

Dear Landers: You have distressed me in your column screaming mothers. What about a screaming daughter? I am one and I hate myself for it. For years I have been aware of my problem and felt guilty. For years I have talked to myself before I wished into the house.

Tonight you are going to be kind and gentle and keep your voice down—no matter what."

For years I have failed.

I have some clues as to why I am like this, but it doesn't help. My parents scream at each other constantly, and they have always screamed at me. I am 34 years old and college graduate. Either all my psychology courses were science fiction or my parents should take a good look at themselves. Granted, my grandparents probably screamed at THEM, but the time has somewhere between environment and self control.

Parents should examine the experiences they are giving their children in day-to-day living. These experiences will shape their children's lives. How can parents expect children to be kind and gentle when they have experienced nothing but hostility? Please answer. I need to know your views on this.—My Mother's Daughter

Dear M.D.: Children learn what they live. A child who grows up with hostility will be hostile. But hostility can be dissipated. The ability to admit that you have undesirable traits and negative feelings is the first step toward conquering them.

Your letter indicates that you have unusually good insight and a genuine desire to kick the problem. Give it a whirl and some counseling and win the battle.

Dear Ann Landers: I'll bet this question has come up in other families but no one thinks about asking an authority. Will you please settle it for a great many people?

When friends or relatives come to your city and stay in the home of another friend or relative, who should make the first telephone call? Is it OUR place to call up the guests and say, "We heard you are in town and we would like to see you?" Or, should the visitors call us and say, "We are in town and would like to get together?" My husband and I were up half the night arguing over this. Please put your answer in the paper. Our mailman has a big mouth and if he saw a letter from Ann Landers it would be all over the neighborhood.—Aberdeen Reader

Dear Ab: The out-of-town visitors are supposed to call and say, "We are here and would like to see you." It is polite to assume that when out-of-towners do NOT call, their time is already taken up so you leave them alone. P.S. Sorry about your mailman.

Trio of Desserts Using Apples

By ALICE DENHOFF

How nice it is to get one's just deserts in the form of delicious desserts. Here is a terrific trio that is pleasing and a bit on the proven, old - fashioned order. They have been revised a trifle to make things easier using convenience foods such as canned apple sauce. The recipes are perfect for this time of year.

APPLE SAUCE with a hint of lemon and spiced with graham cracker crumbs and walnuts is baked and served hot or cold.

BROILED APPLE CRISP

2 cups canned apple sauce
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ cup brown sugar
1-3 cup graham cracker crumbs
1-3 cup chopped walnuts
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons melted butter

Combine first three ingredients. Spread in greased eight-inch cake pan or shallow baking dish. Combine remaining ingredients and sprinkle in a two-inch band around edge of apple sauce. Bake in 400 degree F. oven 10 minutes. Then, broil about 3 inches from source of heat for five minutes or until crumb edges are toasty brown and caramelized. Serve very hot or very cold, plain or with vanilla ice cream.

Serves four to six.

APPLE BREAD PUDDING

8 slices bread, toasted
6 tablespoons melted butter
2 cups canned apple sauce
½ cup seedless raisins
½ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 eggs
¼ cup sugar
1½ cups milk

Arrange four slices toasted bread in bottom of greased nine-inch square baking dish. Brush with half the melted butter.

Combine next eight ingredients; pour over bread in dish. Top with remaining toast slices; brush with butter.

Beat eggs; add sugar and milk. Pour over ingredients in dish. Cover with aluminum foil. Set baking dish in pan of water. Bake 45 minutes at 350 degrees F.

If desired, serve whip cream.

Yields six to eight servings.

APPLE NUTMEG PUFF PIE

1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup lard
2-3 cup milk, approximate
1-3 cup sugar
1½ teaspoons nutmeg
Melted butter
4 cups canned apple sauce
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
¼ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca

Combine flour, baking powder and salt; cut in lard with pastry blender. Add enough milk to make a soft dough. Form into 16 small balls.

Combine 1-3 cup sugar and nutmeg. Roll puffs in melted butter, then in sugar mixture. Set aside.

For the pie, combine apple sauce, ½ cup sugar, orange rind and juice. Stir in tapioca. Pour into nine-inch pie pan. Place nutmeg puffs around edge of pie and in centre. Bake in 400 degrees F. oven 30 to 50 minutes or until puffs are brown. Serve warm or cold with or without cream—good any style. Makes six to eight servings.

Mothers Go to Camp To Share Experiences

EDMONTON (CP) — This fall about 60 mothers went to camp to learn what goes on at camps these days for children.

It was also a kind of "women's lib thing" — except that the mothers were liberated from children and household chores, said Marjorie Long, divisional director of Alberta Inter - Varsity Christian Fellowship, an organization promoting Christian leadership on university campuses and in high schools.

"So many mothers came to us and asked if we could provide a camp for them, too," she said.

"They wanted to share in the experiences their children were having."

The mothers' camps started three years ago with about 15 mothers and have proved popular, she said.

The mothers have a choice of camp activities at the IVCF's year-round camp at Sundre, about 85 miles northwest of Calgary. There's horseback riding, swimming, hiking, craft work, discussion groups and "just lounging."

Couple Wed 25 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Haggarty the former Arlie Bright, were married 25 years ago at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. K. R. Bright, RR4, Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. Haggarty have five children who were all present for the dinner — Sharon who teaches school in Marmora, Dennis, who is married and lives in Belleville and Sharlene, Christine and Nadine at home.

Tito's Wife at Centre

OTTAWA (CP) — Two-year-old Jennifer De Wolf took a moment away from painting pictures to beam a smile at an important visitor: Jovanka Broz, wife of Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito.

The president's wife, smiled back and said hello to Jennifer and several other tots at Carleton University's days care centre for children of students and faculty members.

The children appeared unconcerned at the crowd of people accompanying Mrs. Broz and some were so daubing both paper and painting bibs with color.

Earlier, the president's wife had watched a group of three and four - year - olds in a nursery school run by the psychology department.

Her two hours at the university, which elicited only mild curiosity from the students, included discussions with about 50 students and faculty members in the 200-storey lounge of the new arts building.

Successful Living

Popular Magazine Improves Reading Skills

By DORIS CLARK

World Traveller is a small magazine started two years ago for language-handicapped readers. Much of the material is adapted from the National Geographic School Bulletin. Its simple language, in large print, it makes easy and entertaining reading for anybody from grade three on.

In it I read a fascinating story about Indians who still live in caves, and have a highly organized civilization in Colorado. Other issues told a story about the festivals and celebration held around the world, showing how people of different cultures have similar festivities.

World Traveller not only helps to improve reading skills; it also instils in the reader a feeling of friendship and understanding for people very different from himself and in far corners of our globe. It is published by the Alexander Graham Bell Association for the Deaf with the co-operation of the National Geographic Society.

Dear Doris: Married three years, I have complimented myself on having a rarely successful marriage. Yet my husband puts pretty strict limits on what I do — away from home.

I have been a cosmetic saleswoman in our community, and my boss is taking me with her on a demonstration trip which will cover two weeks in the city. Because it will be late at night when we finish the second one, she suggested we stay over at a hotel and drive the hundred miles home in the morning.

I said this to my husband and was taken aback when he said I should come home the same night. — Fenced In

Dear Fenced In: Sounds unusually like what has happened in a few thousand other cases. I don't usually hear about them until 20 years later, when Wifey has yielded, stayed home, become housebound and habitually silent. Then discovered how henpecked in she has become.

Marriage, ideally widens horizons. A husband sees his wife as a creative individual who decides her own ways of managing. He wants her happy and will put himself out to help her work out her special plan which will make her so.

Didn't he want to be alone in the house? Or was it the thought of getting his own breakfast that stumped him?

Philosophical as you are inclined to be, this issue ought to be aired right now, before the pattern is set — set for a heap later on, when you finally explode.

Dear Doris: I am 15. I met a 16-year-old boy and spent a great deal of time with him this summer, playing tennis, golf, swimming. As the summer went on, it became like a routine and needless to say, my interest in him waned.

School started, and I would like to politely, but firmly, end this "summer romance." I have tried avoiding him, but he just came back nicer than ever.

I still like him, and would like to be friends. I don't want him to be angry with me. How can I get the point across? — Hopelessly Confused

Dear Hopelessly: Why not have other plans when he asks you out? Your pals can and will diverge. If he still wants a showdown, the kindest thing is to tell him what you have told me. You must widen your horizons eventually; why not now?

Are you in doubt about the proper etiquette to use for your special occasion? Ask Doris, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for her reply.

Mirror of Your Mind
by JOHN CONWELL
Are happy parents apt to have happy children?

YES; if they are genuinely happy a mother and father are sure to head a happy household. Moods are contagious, and there is nothing so "catching" as a happy state of mind. Besides children are the greatest imitators of life. If they see that parents are happy most of the time, the youngsters will come to regard life as a "fun thing," an experience that they can enjoy rather than regard with dread.

Must an effective therapist have personality?

YES, but the successful therapist who is getting good results also knows that he should not over-power his patient with his personality. The therapist who gains the confidence of his patient is well aware that there could be a setback if the patient begins to feel that his innermost secrets are being "extracted" from him, rather than he, the patient, willingly yielding information useful to his therapy.

Do we deserve the leaders we get?

YES; no one can really "grab the reins of power" without the consent of those who want to be led around and have the decisions made for them. Take almost any group of people who have assembled for the first time. They will still around alien lessly until one dominant person indicates a desire for control. From then on, that individual is the leader until someone more dominant displaces him.

Canadian Dead in Four Wars Remembered

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

About 5,000 people joined Prime Minister Trudeau Thursday in a solemn tribute to Canada's war dead in Remembrance Day ceremonies at the London, Ont., cenotaph.

Elsewhere across the country, Canadians braved the chilly November weather to remember 102,303 countrymen who died in four wars this century.

As cannon fire reverberated in a 21-gun salute, the black-suited prime minister stood silently with his head bowed after placing a wreath on behalf of the Canadian people.

Security was tight for the ceremony as a crowd, estimated by police at about 5,000, ringed the cenotaph in London's downtown Victoria Park.

The prime minister was in London as part of a two-day tour of southwestern Ontario.

In Ottawa, about 800 veterans, servicemen and government officials joined a crowd of about 600 as the National War Memorial.

As a 21-gun salute sounded, a 74-year-old Metis widow, Mary Anderson, of Selkirk, Man., who lost her two sons during the Second World War, placed a wreath on behalf of all Canadian mothers.

Two teen-agers, Marguerite Neveu, of Campbellton, N.B., and Carol Hearn of St. John's Nfld., chosen through a Royal Canadian Legion literary contest to represent youth, also placed wreaths during the nationally-televised ceremony.

Wreaths were placed by Gov.-Gen. Michener, Veterans Affairs Minister J. E. Dube, Gen. F. R. Sharp, chief of defence, and Quebec Judge Redmond Roche, Royal Canadian Legion president.

One veteran, Carson Bradley, 80, of Ottawa, collapsed as he hurried along a downtown street to join others placing wreaths. In hospital he was pronounced dead of a heart attack.

In Cornwall, another veteran, John Gallop, 76, collapsed and died, apparently after a heart attack, during ceremonies at the city's cenotaph.

RCMP Ready to Check Colleges

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday the RCMP doesn't go fishing for trouble on university campuses "but if there's fishing to do they will do their best to fish it out."

"The RCMP is too busy these days to go fishing," he told a questioner, but he added:

"When we have real cause to believe there is subversion we will investigate."

In one of the strongest statements he made during his two-day tour of southwestern Ontario, Mr. Trudeau said in a public question-and-answer period the police will do their duty if they suspect assembling is amiss at Canadian colleges.

The questioner at Centennial Hall did not pursue the issue further and the prime minister did not elaborate.

Mr. Trudeau dealt with a variety of topics, some in a lighthearted vein. The news media, he said, are "a pretty bad bunch."

They fairly frequently get their facts wrong," he said. "But more than frequently they get their opinions wrong.

"They're a very touchy bunch."

Answering another questioner, the prime minister said the federal government would consider support for a community in Canada's northland, using ideas set down by young people.

"If I was young and free again, I might go up north to build a commune," he said. However, his responsibilities as prime minister would not permit him to participate in such a venture now.

It was Mr. Trudeau's second day of a swing through the area before leaving by plane for Ottawa late Thursday night.

Weekly Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP) — Trading was active for the top grades of slaughter steers and heifers and lower grades suitable for further feeding at the Ontario public stockyards Thursday.

Cow prices made further seasonal declines. Bull, replacement cattle and veal calf prices were steady. Hog and lamb prices were lower.

The statute governing the chairman's office specifies that after age 65 the term may be extended a year at a time until he reaches 70.

Mr. Kennedy will be 70 Oct. 22, 1972 and the extension will last until the end of that month, he said Thursday night.

Trudeau Aids Girl Who Fell

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A 19-year-old blonde coed who desperately wanted Prime Minister Trudeau's autograph missed her chance when she was knocked to the ground by an overenthusiastic crowd.

Instead of getting the autograph, Janet Minicly was helped to her feet by the prime minister, asked whether she was okay, then received a kiss on the cheek before Mr. Trudeau continued his walk.

Smallwood Plans to Resign in January Even If Recounts Keep Him in Power

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The man who has ruled Newfoundland for 22 years will abdicate in January at the latest.

Joseph Smallwood, who led the island province into Canada in 1949 and has been one of the country's most colorful political figures ever since, will quit as Liberal chief even if his party emerges victorious after recounts from the close Oct. 28 provincial election.

The 70-year-old premier made his decision known Thursday night in a province-wide television and radio broadcast.

He said a Liberal leadership convention some time in January would select a successor.

"I shall resign as leader and I will not accept renomination.

"Should I be premier then, I'll resign that position a day or so afterwards."

Mr. Smallwood's party won only 29 of the 42 legislature seats. He plans to apply for recounts in five of the closest ridings.

Frank Moores, whose Progressive Conservatives won 21 seats, expressed a feeling that was probably widespread in Newfoundland Thursday night.

"To see him go . . . even I, I look at it nostalgically."

But Mr. Moores, who has been assured the support of Tom Burgess, New Labrador Party leader elected in Labrador West, said that despite his moment of nostalgia he believes Mr. Smallwood should have resigned already.

"What amazes me is that he'll go off to the conference in Ottawa Monday without taking an heir-apparent along or myself as leader of the PC party.

"He seems to have great difficulty in accepting reality."

Mr. Smallwood said earlier he planned to attend the two-day meeting of premiers with Prime Minister Trudeau.

The premier said the government would resign the government if recounts, which should be completed by the end of November, showed the Liberals still trailing. But he would wait for the recounts to "tell us who was actually elected."

Leprosy Bacilli Has Been Isolated

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Lazlo Kato, known world-wide for his research into leprosy, said Thursday he has succeeded in isolating leprosy bacilli in a test tube, first step in the search for a vaccine against the disease.

News of Dr. Kato's achievement came through the Cardinal Leger and His Endeavours organization, a group collecting funds and material for the former Roman Catholic archbishop of Montreal now doing missionary work in Cameroon, Africa, among lepers.

The development in leprosy research is the culmination of 12,000 different tests by Dr. Kato and associates at the University of Montreal's Institute of Microbiology, and of more than 100 years of similar attempts in research laboratories of Europe and North America.

Dr. Kato, who has been working on disease at the institute for more than 20 years, said in an interview "we just succeeded a few months ago" in isolating the Hansen bacilli, cause of the most acute lepromatous type of leprosy.

Two youngsters got quite a surprise Wednesday morning as they left a bedroom at 278 Dundas Street West.

The owner, Robert Lanning, had returned home only to discover the pair emerging from his bedroom at 11.12 a.m.

He managed to hold the pair and contact police. Because of their age, the names of the youths have not been released. Both were arrested and charged with break and enter.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample 'A is used for the three Ls, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Blood Clinic Close to Target

PICTON (Staff) — A blood donor clinic sponsored in Picton Tuesday by members of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary almost reached its target of 300 pints.

Co-convener of the clinic, Shirley Matthies reported yesterday that 262 pints of blood were given in response to an urgent need for donations.

She added that 38 rejects were recorded.

Mrs. Matthies said student response was excellent and noted that pupils with consent forms had been allowed time out from classes to give blood.

The next donor clinic held here will be in March, 1972.

Christmas Starts Early for Ray Burris

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

MADOC — For Ray Burris of Madoc, Christmas is a year-round business.

In lots northeast of here on the Black River Road, and other sites near Actinolite, Mr. Burris and his family cultivate Christmas trees.

It's no easy task, he says.

Although many people seem to think cultivation of trees for the Yuletide season consists of entering the woods armed with an axe or saw, there's a lot more to it.

Early each year, thousands of sprigs are purchased from the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests for $14 per thousand. Furrows are ploughed, ready to receive the carefully developed saplings, some not more than six inches high.

The infant trees must be placed not less than six feet apart to allow proper growth. Experiments with plantings closer together have resulted in overcrowding by the sixth year.

These trees are then not touched by pruners until their third year.

Disease and damage inflicted by Scotch Pine weevils is a constant worry for plantation owners. Because of this, continuous culling, is necessary to keep growths properly developed.

Every July or August — in the hottest period of the year — the family and several part-time employees take to the homegrown forests for two weeks, armed with clippers.

"It's pretty hard, hot work reaching up with hand clippers. But you have to start shaping them in the third year so they will become properly developed Christmas trees," said the 300-acre plantation owner, pointing to a pile of dud trees awaiting burning.

By the time fall rolls around the eight-year-old sections are ready for harvesting. It takes that long for the tree to become properly developed.

All trees to be harvested are carefully tagged for cutting crews to start work early in November. Asked why glean-ing takes place so early and not closer to Dec. 25, Mr. Burris replied "Christmas, my major product, if left too late loses color. The earlier the cut, the better."

"On the other hand, spruce, which is becoming a very popular now, should be cut no sooner than 10 days from Christmas."

Scotch Pine could last from September to April without loosing needles, whereas the spruce begin shedding once they become dry.

The Black River Road, on which the Burris family has planted their first growths 15 years ago, twists and turns its way north of Highway 7.

Theft Charged

On foot patrol at the rear of Front Street Wednesday, Belleville police Constable Jack O'Donnell discovered a youth going through a parked car.

The boy noticed the officer and ran from the scene. He was apprehended on Front Street following a foot chase.

Police discovered a rock and a stereo tape machine on the floor of the car and one of the rear speakers nearby.

A North Park Street youth has been charged with theft.

New Construction To Top Million

AMELIASBURG (Special) — For the first time in township history new construction in a 12-month period is expected to reach the $1 million plateau.

At the monthly council meeting Tuesday night, building inspector Harry Bisbee informed councillors the permits he issued so far this year represented $972,000 in new construction starts. He reported the permits issued during the first week in November accounted for over $100,000 of that.

The total property values in the township will pass $21 million with the addition of the latest figures, records kept by clerk William Nigh, auditor show. In 10 years of the upsurge in residential construction, total property assessment has increased $7 million or 25 per cent, the clerk pointed out.

"The result is definitely an asset when it comes to maintaining an acceptable mill rate in light of rising costs," he said.

"The present rate of 21 mills should remain for 1972 tax purposes."

Once known as the Queensboro road, the dirt and gravel track at one time supported the weight of massive logging trucks. North of the plantation, abandoned sites where crews of lumberjacks once dwelt, are still visible.

Because the Department of Lands and Forests do not encourage developers of commercial Christmas tree plantations, the family has produced a forest of red and white pine as a natural balance for their commercial harvests in the original 100-acre plot.

For miles in every direction, visitors are confronted with orderly rows of pine and spruce, waiting for brightly-colored baubles and the laughter of children.

"We only developed 300 acres for our plantations," says Mr. Burris. "Any more and we couldn't handle it."

The total is divided into three separate sites in case one is destroyed by fire.

The trees are cut by hand. Power saws have proven to be a hazard. Deep in bush country, cars can't reach an injured man.

Three or four cutters are employed each year with another three operating the baling machine. Some people refuse to buy a baled tree, but for this reason, retailers open the branches on selling lots.

Baling does not injure the tree, Mr. Burris emphasizes.

Years ago, everybody tried to cash in on the Christmas tree game. Because of this, hundreds were left to rot in dumps and old sale lots.

"There is nothing deader than a tree after Christmas. People have big hopes of making money, but this often doesn't work out," Mr. Burris added.

To this end, numbers harvested each year are carefully regulated so that excessive quantities will not be wasted.

One case which points out the sadness of waste occurred several years ago. Mr. Burris recalled sending 1,200 trees to Boston. When the trucker arrived, the retailer refused to take the shipment.

"He didn't want them." How popular are natural Christmas trees?

Mr. Burris says approximately 54 per cent on the market are now artificial. Apartment dwellers and young childless couples seem to prefer the tinsel and tin type over the forest-grown tree.

Profits are going down. "When we first started, you could get $5 or $6 for a tree. Selling now for a couple of dollars, we're lucky to clear 40 or 50 cents each."

"We need to market 2,000 trees to make it worthwhile."

Last year several lots in Toronto were forced to pay 25 cents per tree for people to take them away after Christmas. These were used shrubs and bushes.

Because of the changing trends, the BUrris family also had to revamp their operation. Now, they not only supply but they also retail trees. Several members of his family man lots in nearby towns and cities.

"People seem to be pulling away from Christmas; you know, the tradition, the church and the like.

"But there'll always be Christmas — there'll always be a demand for trees."

Stirling Protests Dual Membership

The village of Stirling's request to get out of membership in the Quinte Planning Board in favor of membership with the Hastings County Planning Board, ran up against stiff opposition at last night's meeting of the nine-municipality planning board.

The request met with an unbesitating vote of opposition by Quinte board members.

Stirling was not represented at the meeting. Their spokesmen are Reeve Robert Anderson and Donald Rodgers.

The problems of dual support crops up in the case of Quinte Planning Board on Sept. 13, when the village of Stirling passed a resolution requesting authority from the minister of municipal affairs to withdraw from the QPB and join the Hastings board. The QPB executive committee shorned the move.

The matter was forwarded from the department of municipal affairs, asking for QPB reaction.

Following the meeting, Jack Bush, chairman of the Quinte Planning Board, said "this is a very contentious point. The board felt there should be no changes made in the organization as it was set up — at this time."

When both the Quinte Planning Board and Hastings County Planning Board were organized this year, municipalities were required to pay double bills. The villages of Stirling and Frankford and the townships of Sidney and Thurlow, all members of the QPB, successfully lobbied for a reduction of membership costs in the county board, to 25 per cent of the original levy.

Snow Soon

Light snow has reached the fringes of the Quinte district and the area may have a few flurries before the weekend is out.

Light snow was reported by Department of Lands and Forests ranger Andrews at Tweed and Deseronto and Dacre last night and this morning.

The Bancroft area is still clear of snow.

Dull overcast weather in the Belleville-Trenton area could be replaced by sunny periods Saturday, says the duty forecaster at CFB Trenton.

However, there may be a few snow flurries tomorrow and Sunday," said the weatherman.

Think of Peace Theme Appropriate Says Minister

PICTON (Staff) — Veterans of two world wars paraded to the Picton cenotaph yesterday morning to participate in Remembrance Day services conducted by Rev. Robert Sherwin, Picton United Church and Rev. Robert Black, First Baptist Church, Bloomfield.

Prince Edward's "old soldiers" formed their lines near the monument as the Picton Junior Band led by Creighton Lockyer played a stirring military march.

A small crowd of students and townspeople turned up their coat collars against a raw wind and joined the veterans in singing O Canada.

"Rev. R. Sherwin opened the Remembrance Day service with a passage titled The Souls of the Righteous taken from the Book of Wisdom.

He followed this reading by remarking that the Scottish highlands today remain dotted with many piles of loose stones representing a silent chronicle of Scotland's history.

Throughout many generations of Scottish soldiers it was traditional for each man to cast a stone into a pile to mark his entry into battle. When he returned home safe from the wars he would return and pick up a stone tossing it from the rest.

The stones which remained at the close of the war became a tactk tribute to the fallen.

Mr. Sherwin said that throughout Canada today, equivalent cairns of remembrance stand for those men and women who responded to their country's call, left to fight and did not return.

"Without remembrance we stand in danger of falling prey to irresponsible use of our liberties, our civic privileges and our national and spiritual heritage which have been purchased at the cost of blood, sweat and tears," he added.

The minister observed the theme of this year's Royal Canadian Legion remembrance service was 'If you can't remember, think.'

He explained that 60 per cent of the population today is comprised of persons under 30 years of age and commented that this group is too young for personal involvement in past wars.

The thrust of the message, according to Mr. Sherwin, is that young persons should think of peace if they cannot remember war. He suggested this is far more constructive than a hypocritical pretense to remembrance.

The message of Remembrance Day is one of hope and future, not of death and past.

Mr. Sherwin declared that in these days of vociferous protest groups it is important to hear the phrase "responsible citizenship". He suggested citizens must resolve that the men who died did not do so in vain.

The minister illustrated this by reading a passage from Lincoln's Gettysburg Address urging man to consecrate sacrifice through commitment to a search for peace.

It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion.

The speaker stressed that dedicated to the task of peace perhaps man can wipe the scourge of war from the earth.

He closed his remarks with an observation made by a veteran who asserted, "It remains for civilization to prove their martyrdom was not a dirty swindle."

Color parties from the Picton cub and scout troops and Branch 178, Royal Canadian Legion lowered their flags to the ground as bugler Creighton Lockyer played the Last Post. The colors were raised again to the notes of Reveille and memorial wreaths were placed at the cenotaph.

A wreath from the town of Picton was placed by Mayor Margaret Ackerman while Warden Allan Anderson placed the county's memorial tribute to the war dead.

James Taylor MPP, Prince Edward - Lennox also placed a wreath.

Major John Ing, Picton presented a wreath from the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment.

Rev. Robert Black pronounced the benediction when all wreaths had been placed.

Following the service, veterans marshalled by the County Buildings where municipal officials saluted them from a reviewing stand.

R. J. Needham Sales and Ad Speaker

Globe and Mail columnist Richard Needham will be guest speaker at the Nov. 18 meeting of Belleville Sales and Ad Club.

Mr. Needham, who has written a daily column for the Toronto newspaper for several years, is the author if four books. He estimates he has written 16 million words in his 42 years of working for Canadian newspapers from coast to coast.

The columnist was born in Gibraltar, brought up in India and attended school briefly in England and Ireland. He left home in 1929 and came to Canada, where he worked as a farmhand in the Kemptville area before going into newspaper work with the Toronto Star.

Sales, Women and Canadians is the subject of his Belleville address.

Remembrance Day Not A Day for the Elderly

Ray Burris Finds Tree Pruning Hot Job

TRENTON (Staff) — A wartime commander of the Royal Canadian Regiment, Col. Stronie Galloway told a Remembrance Day dinner at the Legion Hall here last night it is regrettable "youth see the day as something for the aged".

The retired officer said this is particularly regrettable in view of the fact so many dying for Canada in war have been so young. He recalled having seen gravestones in Flanders of men as young as 13 and 14.

Col. Galloway, a prolific writer in military journals, told the gathering of 250 not all that should be remembered is sad. For himself, he said, "Remembrance Day is one of mixed emotions and memories ... besides much sorrow, the war also recalls days of boisterous comradeship."

The former Canadian military attache to West Germany stated he finds it disturbing that the 50-year-old world War II fever has trouble relating to the 75-year-old Great War infantryman. "The aim was the same, the foes the same," he said.

He paid particular tribute to the Great War vets "whose agony was prolonged and who exhibited the heights of human endurance".

In a lighter vein, the speaker told his audience he had recently been to Armentiers where, he said, if the women there today are anything like their grandmothers, it is no wonder they had not been kissed in 40 years.

During the afternoon Quinte area World War I vets were entertained and feted at a gathering at CFB Trenton's South Side Sergeants' and Warrant Officers mess. During the "old sweats" party, two local men, Percy McTaggart of Belleville and Art Young of Trenton reopened an acquaintance that ended 28 years ago when their battalions disbanded in England.

Remembrance Day observances at Centennial Park at 11 a.m. drew a somewhat larger crowd than previous years and Branch 118, Canadian Legion president Vic Burtt says the preceding parade "was the largest here for a long, long time".

At the Cenotaph, Major The Rev. S. G. Horne, CFB Trenton's Base Chaplain implored those assembled for the observances not to fail those who laid down their lives. Linking November 11 to Canada's future, he said, "May God help us the day we stop remembering them."

Large numbers of wreaths were laid during the solemn proceedings, with one of Trenton's two Silver Cross Mothers, Mrs. H. Menzies, who lost a son in World War II, presenting the Government of Ontario wreath.

Appeal Total

The total of donations and pledges for the Belleville United Appeal, as of Friday, Nov. 12, is $190,200. Target for the appeal is $145,000.

Kitten Club bunny Beverley McLean serves World War I veterans Percy McTaggart of Belleville and Art Young of Trenton at a party yesterday organized for the area's "old sweats" by CFB Trenton's South Side Warrant Officers' and Sergeants' Mess. Mr. Mc Taggart and Mr. Young had not seen each other since 1918 when their battalions disbanded in Britain at the close of the Great War.

Getting Together

Kings Snap Slump at Sabres' Expense

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A change of venue and goaltenders appeared all that was needed for Los Angeles Kings to mend their slovenly ways.

Gary Edwards replaced shell-shocked Rogatien Vachon in the Kings' goal Thursday night and backstopped them to a 4-2 win over Buffalo Sabres, presenting new coach Fred Glover with his first win after five National Hockey League losses.

In other games, Boston Bruins downed California Golden Seals 5-2 despite a penalty-filled first period, and Simon Nolet's ninth goal of the season—equalling his 1970-71 output—provided Philadelphia Flyers with a 4-3 margin over Vancouver Canucks.

The schedule resumes Saturday with Montreal Canadiens visiting Minnesota North Stars, Vancouver at Toronto Maple Leafs, Buffalo in New York against the Rangers, the Flyers entertaining Detroit Red Wings, Los Angeles at Pittsburgh Penguins and St. Louis Blues at home to California.

Sunday, Montreal is in Buffalo, Toronto at Philadelphia, Vancouver at New York, Los Angeles at Boston and California visits Chicago Black Hawks.

The Los Angeles win at Buffalo ended a seven-game losing streak and prevented Buffalo from climbing into fourth in the East Division, ahead of Toronto.

The Sabres remained tied with Vancouver, each with 13 points, one behind Toronto.

Edwards, a rookie, had played most of the season for the hapless Kings, whose victory moved them into a tie with St. Louis for sixth place in the West.

But when Vachon was acquired from Montreal two games ago, it was assumed the 23-year-old Toronto native would serve in a back-up role. Glover, who took over as coach five games ago from general manager Larry Regan, probably had a change of heart after Vachon and the Kings were drubbed 7-1 in New York Wednesday night.

Using Edwards against his old team-mates—he was drafted by the Kings from Buffalo in last June's NHL draft—probably was a stroke of genius on Glover's part. It lifted the team to its third win of the season.

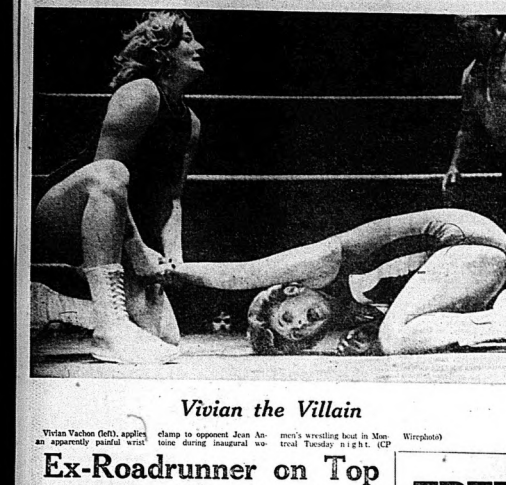
Rookie Jean Potvin's first goal of the season was the winner but it was Bill Flett's score into an empty net with 16 seconds left in the game that insured victory over Punch Imlach's Sabres.

Imlach, in his post-game analysis, said the turning point in the game was early in the second period when Buffalo's top rookie candidate, Richard Martin, missed an open net on a breakaway that would have given the Sabres a 2-0 lead.

On the ensuing Los Angeles rush, Ed Joyal beat Buffalo goalie Roger Crozier with the equalizer at 1:33 of the second period, and three minutes later defenceman Gilles Marotte's backhander sent the Kings ahead.

Another rookie goalie, Gilles Meloche, came under fire in Boston where the aroused Bruins were coming off a successive losses—to Montreal and Chicago.

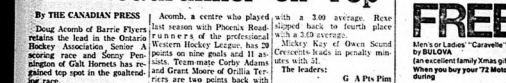
Meloche, who blanked the Bruins 2-0 at Boston Garden in his first start for California two weeks ago, wasn't so fortunate this time around.



The Bruins, assessed 11 minutes in penalties to two for the Golden Seals in the first period, drilled 27 shots at Meloche, 14 in the second period.

Boston centre Phil Esposito, who scored a record 76 goals last year, scored twice in the middle period, his second breaking a 2-2 deadlock.

The Bruins sent most of the opening period killing off penalties, including a five-minute fighting major to rookie defenceman Bob Stewart from Charlottetown for his one-sided scrap with California's Don Donnelly.



Nolet's unassisted score at Philadelphia came at the expense of Vancouver defenceman Dale Tallon. The three-year Flyer veteran skated up the right side, faked Tallon, then sent a blistering shot along the ice.

Canucks goalie Dunc Wilson made the stop, but the puck trickled into the net off his skates and enabled the Flyers to pull into a fourth-place tie in the West with California.

Anybody Got $6 Million ?

TORONTO (CP) — No Canadian city has expressed any interest in a National Hockey League franchise, Harold Ballard, Maple Leaf Gardens president, said Thursday replying to criticism implying that the NHL is ignoring Canada in its expansion plans.

Tell me what city in Canada has tried to get an NHL franchise?" he asked. "I would like to see another Canadian team in the NHL, if one produced the proper qualifications and credentials (meaning a $6 million franchise fee)."

Ballard said he believed Winnipeg, Edmonton or Calgary could support NHL franchises, pointing to the success of hockey in St. Louis and Philadelphia, cities that virtually knew nothing about the game.

"In Winnipeg, for example, the people already know hockey," he said.

Eagleson WHA Fan .

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson, executive-director of the National Hockey League Players' Association, said Thursday he admires the World Hockey Association, whatever its future, has had an immense, positive influence on hockey.

"The announcement of the formation of the WHA had led the NHL to drop clause 13C from its player contract, has hurried expansion and improved the climate for contract negotiations," Eagleson said.

Clause 13C allowed a team to release any player on two weeks' notice if his performance was judged inadequate. With the clause deleted, a player must now be paid for the duration of his contract.

Some Ball Game!

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Now that's what I call a sport!

Only one piece of equipment to worry about, and virtually no rules. At least, not enough to spoil the game.

I am referring, of course to "Monster Ball," which made its debut today between the 25-yard-lines of Loyalist College's football field.

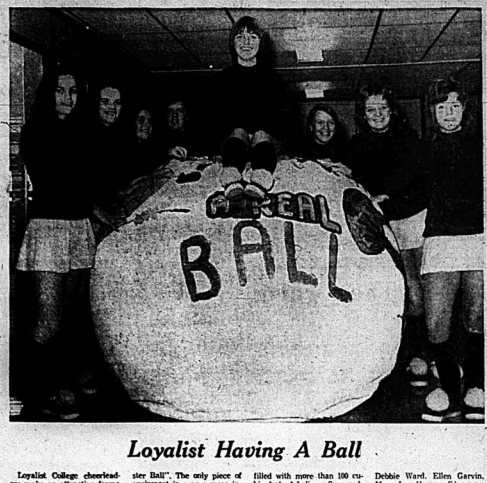
Loyalist student representative Rob Stinson is the person who will be either acclaimed or blamed for potting the new activity on the college's calendar of activities. Stinson read a Mad magazine satire about a sport called G-man squash, learned from a friend that Humber Community College students were playing a game with canvas-covered balls six feet in diameter, and the idea was born.

A $300 deposit was required before Stinson could borrow a Monster Ball from Humber this week. "It has a thick rubber bladder about a quarter of an inch thick inside. We fill it with about 113 cubic feet of helium," he explained.

"The ball should bounce about five or six feet in the air. But it'll come down — we hope!"

Today's game, actually part of a student rally to drum attention to this week-end's intercollegiate season opener by the basketball and hockey teams, had a minimum of rules.

There are two teams, preferably opposed to one another. Each team is composed of 42 players, unless the team captains would rather have more or fewer. The object of the game is to push the ball over the opposing goal-line, players, or what-ever happens to be in the way.



"Once the referee puts the ball in the middle and blows his whistle — that's where the rules end", Stinson explained. "Anything goes, except for rough play." Penalties have yet to be determined.

Many games will probably end in scoreless ties, eliminating the need for statisticians. However should a goal (to be known as Monster Ball as an avalanche) be scored, it is not yet clear whether assists will be given to the last 30 persons touching the ball before the scorer, or merely the last dozen or so.

The sport has its drawbacks. It will be a poor crowd-pleaser, since all spectators participate in games.

And, until such time as Loyalist students invest in their own equipment, a poorly-placed Monster Ball shot — referred to as a puncture) — could cost the shooter $300.

Storage is no trivial matter itself. The Loyalist organizers found that out for themselves when they inflated the ball for pre-game inspection Thursday in a college corridor, only to find that they couldn't get it out any door in the building.

Loyalist Having A Ball

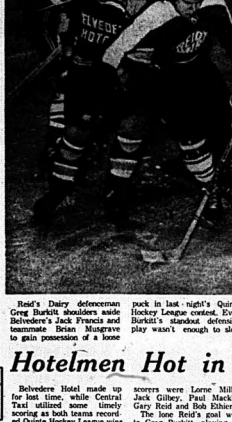
Loyalist College cheerleaders make an attractive frame for the latest kick on campus, a six-foot diameter "Monster Ball". The only piece of equipment in a new game introduced at Loyalist today, the canvas - covered ball is filled with more than 100 cubic feet of helium. Surrounding precariously perched Joanne Warriner are, from left, Debbie Ward, Ellen Garvin, Mary Lou Hanson, Sharon Clegg, Vera Burge, Karen White, and Lynda Cartwright.

Quintes Shuffle Lineup Against Galt

Whatever kind of luck Belleville Quintes have in trying to snap a three-game senior A hockey losing streak tonight, no-one will be able to say afterwards it wasn't because of a lack of changes.

Coach Gene Poirier has made some fairly drastic line-up shuffles in preparation for this weekend's home - and - away series with league-leading Galt Hornets.

Top club trigger-man Al Ferguson, with nine goals in nine games, has been moved from his familiar right wing spot with George Gorlon and Lorne O'Donnell and replaced by Archie McLennan, the Syracuse camp cut who played his first Quinte games against Orillia last weekend.



Ferguson will play on a line centred by Doug Senior, with Paul Perras filling the left wing slot. Tonight's game will mark the first time this season the speedy Peterborough rookie hasn't been playing at centre.

"We need more balance, Fergy was going good with the other two guys, but we need to change something after last weekend," explained Poirier.

Last weekend's two losses to Orillia evened the Belleville won-lost record at 5-5 and dropped the Quintes into a fourth-place tie with the Ferriers. Depending on the outcome of other league games a win tonight could boost Belleville into a second-place tie.

Other than the fact he plans on starting Dave Jones as a third line centre, Poirier said all other forward positions were "up in the air" for tonight's 9 p.m. game. Poirier would also only name Lionel Boily, Greg Marchen and Doug Potts as definite starters among five defencemen he hopes to dress.

Their last series with the Hornets was a relatively successful one for the Quintes. They dumped the defending Allan Cup champs 5-2 here, then were shaded 3-2 back in Galt in a game that could have gone either way.

Reid's Dairy defenceman Greg Burkitt shoulders aside Belvedere's Jack Francis and teammate Brian Musgrave to gain possession of a loose puck in last night's Quinte Hockey League contest. Even Burkitt's standout defensive play wasn't enough to slow down the league leaders as Belvedere coasted to a lopsided 10-1 victory for their fourth win in as many games this season.

Hotelmen Hot in Last Half

Belvedere Hotel made up for lost time, while Central Taxi utilized some timely scoring as both teams recorded Quinte Hockey League wins last night.

The unbeaten Hoteliers were held to a scoreless tie for the first 30 minutes of their bout with Reid's Dairy before erupting for a 10-1 win.

Elmer Cain and Larry Marshall connected for two goals each to pace the scoring for the league leaders, while Bob Henderson notched a goal and three assists. Other Belvedere scorers were Lorne Miller, Jack Gilbey, Paul Macklin, Gary Reid and Bob Ethier.

The lone Reid's goal went to Greg Burkitt, playing his first Quinte league game of the season. The losers drew 11 of the game's 21 penalties including two majors to each club.

Stinson's	0	4	0	7	24	0

Central Taxi also turned on the scoring power in the latter minutes of their game to record a 6-3 win over Stinson's and remain two points behind the league leaders.

Dwight Rathwell rapped in two goals for Central with the others going to Tom MacDonald, Andy Prudden, Grant Hagerman and Al Walker. For Stinson's it was Ted Waite, Rick Rotebush and Paul Hall.

Central was assessed the only three penalties of the contest, all minors.

Food City Eaten Alive

The Oshawa novices certainly didn't play like novices last night, administering a decisive 6-2 setback to the Towers Food City team.

Darrell Coltman and Steve Mofina were the only Belleville goaltenders Oshawa outshot the visitors by a 29-19 margin.

Watch Out For Unexpected In West

CALGARY (CP) — Look for the unexpected when Saskatchewan Roughriders and Calgary Stampeders clash in the best-of-three Western Football Conference final. First game is here Saturday afternoon.

History has shown they have a knack for the heart-throbbing play.

Consider these examples:

—The last game between the clubs ended in a tie in Regina. Flanker Gerry Shaw of Calgary got a touchdown with four seconds remaining and Larry Robinson booted the tying convert.

GERRY SHAW

—The Stampeders won the series 2-1 last year with a 15-14

Monroe Big Hit In Knick Debut

NEW YORK (AP) — East Monroe's magical name was barked over the loud speaker system, signalling an avalanche of ear-splitting cheers at Madison Square Garden.

About a half-hour later, the flashy guard scored his first points in a New York Knicks uniform.

"It sure was strange playing with the Knicks after playing against them all three years," said Monroe, who was acquired from Baltimore Bullets shortly before Thursday night's National Basketball Association game with Golden State Warriors.

Playing in an unaccustomed reserve role, the newest of the Knicks scored only nine points in a 112-103 losing effort to the Warriors.

Monroe, who had been having contract troubles with the Bullets' more management, last played a game Oct. 19 before being suspended by the Bullets. The inactivity—and a sore left ankle —kept the Pearl well under his lifetime scoring average of 25 points a game.

verdict in the final contest at Regina. Robinson kicked the winning points with a 33-yard field goal on the last play of the game. He was facing winds gusting between 35 and 45 miles an hour and the temperature well below zero.

—The other two games in last year's series also offered the unexpected. Calgary won the opener when quarterback Jerry Keeling hit former team-mate Jim Hammer for a 94-yard touchdown early in the final quarter. Calgary was leading 15-11 at the time and took a 28-11 decision.

—In the second game, it was Ed McQuarters of Saskatchewan who came up with the key play. The big tackle intercepted a Keeling pass and ran for an 89-yard touchdown, giving the Roughriders an 11-3 win. Before the play, Saskatchewan was leading 4-3 with about a minute remaining, but Calgary was on the Roughriders' 20.

Saturday's game, to be televised on the CTV national network at 4 p.m. EST, is the fifth successive Calgary-Saskatchewan final and their 28th meeting. Including two exhibition games, since 1967.

East has 13 wins and two WFC playoff titles during the five-year period.

Shaw, who caught 30 passes for 478 yards and three touchdowns in the regular-season play, says the Stampeders "have to depend on our defence to give us good field position."

"The defence has to give us the ball on turnovers and let the offence go from there."

A 29-year-old graduate of Washington State but a Hamilton native, Shaw said it's a question of who makes fewer mistakes in the playoffs.

"Mental errors are costly . . . you've got to go out and generate the first downs and hold the ball, but the most important thing is not to make the big mistake that costs you crucial field position."

He said Saskatchewan should have momentum because of its 34-23 win over Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the sudden-death semi-final.

"It's bound to help them. When you're in first place you sit back and say: 'We're cool; we finished on top and nobody can beat us.'"

But Shaw remembers when Calgary finished first in 1967 and 1965 but was eliminated in the final despite home-field advantage.

"From a mental standpoint, it's almost an advantage to finish second or third."

Ron Payne, Calgary's rookie offensive coach, says the key to beating Saskatchewan is taking care of middle linebacker Wally Dempsey, with honorable mention to defensive end Bill Baker.

Ticats' Turf in Their Favor

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats, who showed their best offence of the year last weekend to get into the Eastern Football Conference final, have a couple of things going for them in their two-game series against Toronto Argonauts.

The Argos, runaway winners of the EFC schedule, are coming off a two-game losing streak and have yet to win this year on artificial turf—one of the elements they'll face here Sunday.

Two of Toronto's four losses in 14 season games were on the mud sod, at Vancouver's Empire Stadium and their first encounter with the Ticats this season at Ivor Wynn Stadium.

The Ticat defence carried the club into the playoffs, scoring twice in the final scheduled game in a stunning 23-15 win over Toronto at CNE Stadium.

The Argos, however, will be a healthier club than the one that faced Hamilton two weeks ago and should go into Sunday's first game of the two-game total-point final here as favorites. The game will be carried in full on the CTV's national network starting at 2 p.m. EST.

Argos' can be expected to throw a lot with rookie Joe Theismann calling the plays. Toronto coach Leo Cahill hasn't indicated this week he'll rotate his quarterbacks as he did earlier in the season, even with Barton's recovery from a finger on his throwing hand.

But any passes thrown by Argos will be going into one of the slingiest defensive backfields in the country with leader Garney Henley ably supported by John Williams, Al Brenner and Gerry Sternberg.

Brenner and Henley each picked off eight enemy passes this season and Williams snapped up another eight. The three returned one for at least one touchdown.

In all the Hamilton defence scored nine touchdowns, one-third the Hamilton total for major scorers.

And while the Hamilton of-

fence finally jelled into a cohesive unit for the Ottawa game, it will be the Ticat defenders again who can be expected to decide the outcome of Sunday's game.

The battle against the Hamilton defence will be guided by Theismann and feature running backs Leon McQuay, eastern nominee for national outstanding player honors, and Bill Symons.

It could be a repeat of the last time the two clubs met in a conference final, in 1961, when the Ticats came from an 18-point deficit after the first game to tie the Argos after regulation time in their second meeting.

In the overtime, the Ticats exploded for 28 points to win the series 53-37. The Grey Cup lost to Winnipeg Blue Bombers that year, 21-14, was anti-climatic by comparison.

Nicklaus Keeps U.S. Team Close

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus plunked a five-foot birdie putt in near darkness Thursday to keep the favored United States team close while the guest backers from Romania and Libya simply faded into the Florida sunset.

Nicklaus was topping off a four-under-par 68 to capture the individual lead in the World Cup golf championship while he and partner Lee Trevino stayed within three shots of the leading South African duo, Gary Player and Harold Henning.

Trevino struggled to a 75 on the treacherous 7,096-yard East Course, giving the Yanks an aggregate of one-under-par 143 and a second-place tie with New Zealand's Bob Charles, 71, and John Lister, 72. Player battled a virus to carve out a 69. Henning had 71 for a four-under-par total of 140.

Substantial Results Unlikely at Provincial-Federal Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — The provincial premiers and Prime Minister Trudeau meet in a closed conference next week in study the economy and inter-governmental financial arrangements.

But informants don't expect substantial results.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson told the Commons Wednesday the government has no additional plans to announce for combatting winter unemployment. His $498 million program of additional spending and lending, announced Oct. 14, is just starting.

Statistics Canada reported Wednesday that 447,000 persons were unemployed at mid-October, 28,000 more than a year earlier. It was the first significant increase in jobless numbers since the decline began last May, signalling the high-activity summer season.

The statistics bureau also reported Tuesday that the consumer price index rose in October to 134.9, hovering close to its August record reading of 135, on the basis of 1961 prices equalling 100. The latest report shows living costs 3.5 per cent higher than a year ago.

The economic situation is expected to dominate the three-day meeting starting Monday in the government conference centre.

Government leaders usually issue some statements.

What they actually say in private is to be kept secret to permit free discussion, officials say.

After the general economic affairs discussion, they are to go over fiscal arrangements, including ways to put a lid on rapidly-mounting health and welfare costs.

They also will debate ways to bring mayors and reeves into periodic discussion of federal-provincial affairs. Municipal leaders always have been excluded on grounds that the municipalities are simply creations of the provinces and not entities with which Ottawa should deal directly under the constitution.

Current fiscal arrangements expire March 31, 1972. This conference is likely to be only the first round concerning their renewal. At the heads-of-government level, Finance ministers met here two weeks ago for a preliminary skirmish and will meet again early in 1972.

Of the $14.5 billion the federal government plans to spend and lend this year, about half—$7.3 billion—goes in tax transfers and subsidies and loans to the provinces, through whom the money reaches the municipalities.

Included is $2.4 billion in health and welfare support, $1.1 billion in unconditional transfers and more than $500 million in aid to higher education. Ottawa also passes on more than $1.3 billion in provincial taxes on individuals, corporations and estates.

Under the revised tax legislation now going through the Commons, which the government hopes to put into effect next Jan. 1, the provinces will be expected to revise their tax structures to conform. That discussion also is on next week's agenda.

So are new equalization and stabilization formulas. Equalization is the process by which Ottawa ensures that revenues of the poorer provinces are brought up to the average of the wealthier ones. Stabilization puts a cushion under any falloff of provincial revenues from one year to the next in order to guard against undue fluctuation.

There will be discussion of shared-cost programs in post-secondary and college students, hospital and medical care, and welfare ministers for more than a year have pondered a new federal proposal to stop the rise of health and welfare costs. Under the existing plan, Ottawa pays part of whatever increased costs the provinces certify they must pay. Under the proposed new formula, there will be a growth-rate ceiling geared to the long-term average growth rate of the country.

Next week's conference originally scheduled to be held in December. It was moved forward in response to pressure when the September unemployment figures showed an alarming rise to more than seven per cent of the labor force, figures on the seasonally-adjusted trend basis that takes account of seasonable ebbs and flows in the job total.

That figure dropped in October to 6.7 per cent. It was the government's hope, expressed last summer, that by the year end it would fall to six per cent or below.

While the subject of this conference is to be economic and tax matters, fundamental constitutional issues are expected to be raised—as they were when first ministers met last June in the federal-provincial conference in Victoria, B.C.

After that meeting, Quebec withdrew its opposition to the revision of the British North American Act to recast it as a Canadian statute. Some of Premier Robert Bourassa's demands fit right in the centre of new federal-provincial fiscal arrangements he is expected to raise them again next week.

He wants more exclusive provincial powers and responsibilities in programs affecting family life, such as family allowances, plus a new fund to promote economic growth in the weaker provinces during periods of economic recession.

Premier Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan has said he will be looking for more federal help in overcoming the unevenness of the province's farm-based econo y.

Mr. Blakeney has pronounced the agenda for next week's meeting as most unexciting. He has conferred with his fellow NDP premier, Manitoba's Edward Schreyer.

Premiers Blakeney and Peter Lougheed, Alberta Conservative premier, will be the new boys at the meeting, both having been elected since June.

To Your Good Health

Gradual Slowing of Functions By Age Can Cause Dry Mouth

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dr. Thosteson: Please write about the cause and possible remedy of dry mouth. I am a man 67 years old, in fairly good health. I gave up all smoking and alcohol nearly years ago.

The only symptom I seem to have is a white coating on the tongue but this condition is driving me batty.—A.J.G.

There's gradual slowing down of our various bodily functions, and dry mouth is one that I call rare at your age, as the salivary glands, along with others, are not as active as they used to be.

Smoking and alcohol can contribute to this trouble but they can't be blamed in your case.

Mouth breathing could account for the dryness as well as the coated tongue.

A deficiency of vitamin B is another.

Allergy, undue nervousness, a sensitivity to denture material also are possibilities.

Aside from correcting any of those situations, if present, there are no other options. Rinsing your mouth with a solution of glycerin or syrup before meals may give some relief. Or sucking a tart candy—lemon or lime drops—also may help, the tartness stimulating more activity by the salivary glands.

Dr. Thosteson: I have a nasal catarrh and with it a dripping in my throat which sometimes makes it difficult for me to swallow at times. What can I do to get relief?—D.P.

That drip in the throat (postnasal drip) is a natural result of chronic nasal congestion. The key to correcting it is to find out what is causing that nasal congestion. Allergy? Allergy? Sinus infection? Small fault in the nose? Excessive smoking? As a rule, it isn't too difficult to find out which it is, and if the cause is known, treatment can be effective.

Dr. Thosteson: Would you explain an amoeba? My doctor has given me two medicines and told me I would have to take one the rest of my life because the amoeba cannot be killed. I wonder if any other treatment is known.—Mrs. F.M.

The amoeba is a microscopic single-cell organism of the protozoa family, which can infect the digestive tract, causing weakness, fatigue, abdominal distress, diarrhoea, possibly mild fever. The diarrhoea is usually a watery type and may contain blood.

The drugs you mentioned are commonly used with good effect. I can't agree that amoeba cannot be killed. A general stool specimen free of the parasite indicate success.

In some resistant cases, a medication called emetine followed by an antibiotic may be necessary, and there are others that also can be used.

Re-infection (infestation with the parasite) is usually a disorder of warm climates. Travellers may pick it up from contaminated food or water. Contamination is spread by a carrier, such as a food handler who harbors the parasite, or by flies picking it up from infested excreta.

Dr. Thosteson: I am a 12-year girl and have not started my periods yet. Almost every week a whitish vaginal fluid appears. Is this normal?—M.S.

It is normal. Your periods will probably appear in the next year or 18 months.

Drapeau Battles Montreal Hotel

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau's dispute with the plush downtown Windsor Hotel over his now defunct restaurant turned into a chaotic confrontation in the hotel Thursday.

Scuffles, threats of legal action and the serving of court orders marked the dispute over the ownership of furniture and equipment from Mr. Drapeau's restaurant Le Vaisseau d'Or—The Golden Vessel—closed since last January.

At the heart of the dispute was some $19,000 worth of glassware, linen and china which both the mayor and the hotel claim to own.

At a late news conference Mr. Drapeau said he would take legal action over the dispute.

The two parties settled out-of-court last Friday the hotel's claim for $42,000 in back payment of rent and damages from the mayor's restaurant, which was in the hotel basement.

The trouble started when movers/arrived at the restaurant to carry out the terms of the agreement, removing what the mayor was to keep and leaving the rest for the hotel.

Mayor Drapeau said "someone connected with the hotel has a personal animosity to settle with me," and added he would start legal proceedings.

Earlier, the hotel's general manager, Lorenzo Tomassi, said he laid a complaint with Montreal police that the mayor was illegally removing hotel property.

But George Gould, lawyer for the hotel, said the police ignored the complaint.

Mayor Drapeau dismissed these charges as "a little tempest in a teapot" and added he would start legal proceedings.

He obtained an order of seizure before judgment Thursday morning, allowing him to move the furniture out.

Mr. Gould said the court now would decide who is the legal owner of the disputed property.

Mr. Drapeau said the furniture was to be removed Thursday night but this was changed to Thursday morning because the hotel "was removing Vaisseau d'Or belongings."

It was then that most of the trouble occurred. Movers scuffled with hotel security men in front of the hotel and Mr. Drapeau engaged in a brief shoving match with a security man inside.

"He tried to stop me from entering my restaurant. Mr. So I pushed him out of the way, he pushed me and I pushed him again," the mayor said later.

The hotel tried to stop the removal of furniture by putting a lock and chain on the restaurant's door but several security guards hired by Mr. Drapeau broke the lock on the door.

The mayor discussed the dispute with reporters after he conferred for nearly four hours in the restaurant restaurant with lawyers, advisers and police.

He said the agreement signed last Friday gives the restaurant all the furniture and equipment but mentioned in an annex to the agreement as staying with the hotel.

But Mr. Gould said the agreement does not mean what it appears to mean.

"By the other goods not mentioned, we certainly didn't mean the goods—fixtures, china, silverware and glassware —which the Windsor Hotel bought for the use of the restaurant and which were never the property of the mayor from the beginning."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By B. Jay Becker

(Top Record-Holder in Masters' Individual Championship Play)

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Four Spades (North leads ace-king of clubs. (Trumps are divided 2-2). How would you play the hand?

♠AKJ78 ♥K9 ♦95 ♣T43

♠Q1093 ♥8T7 ♦KJ108 ♣A6

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Six Notrump and North leads the jack of spades. How would you play the hand?

♠AT33 ♥A8 ♦KQJ4 ♣KQ642

♠K6 ♥KTQT4 ♦103 ♣K652

1. The contract is in danger only if North has the ace of hearts and you misguess the diamond finesse. Thus, if you cash the club lead, draw trumps and lost a diamond to North, he might be cunning enough to put partner on lead with a club, and in that case a heart return from South would again expose you to ignominious defeat.

To prevent all this from happening you must organize a third heart trick for South, the dangerous opponent, cannot take the lead for a heart return through your king. In line with this, you start by ducking the king of clubs in order to sever communication between North and South in clubs.

Let's assume North leads another club. You win with the ace, draw two rounds of trumps, lead the jack of diamonds from dummy and finesse. Even if the finesse loses, you are sure of your game because North cannot profitably attack hearts.

2. There is only one danger, namely, that one opponent has all the missing diamonds. Consequently all your thoughts are directed to guarding against this one possibility. The threat can be met very simply by winning the first trick with the ace of spades and playing a low diamond towards the ten.

If North has all the diamonds, the best he can do is score the jack whether he plays it at once or permits it to win the trick. If South has all of them, he can win the ten with the jack, but his remaining diamonds will then be easy to trap.

The safety play in diamonds, though unusual, is well worth the price. It guarantees the slam, come what may, a 50 per cent premium declarer pays for this insurance is a paltry 30 points.

What the Stars Say

Saturday, November 13

Aries (March 21-April 19). Partners can be all strewn up this morning to get out and do things. Don't bank on this enthusiasm lasting long. Stay home and be lazy today.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Togetherness with loved ones results today from sharing a domestic chore. Working side by side can be more rewarding now than going separate ways for fun.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). The day's yours to do as you like. In fact, the entire weekend shapes up to be free from annoyances and interruptions. Plan accordingly to create an oasis of peace.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). You can be perfectly satisfied to spend the day quietly by the fireside, pursuing your favorite pastimes and enjoying simple family pleasures. Lock your doors to outsiders.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Today's plans should loom more for the unexpected, as last-minute invitations can provide the best fun. You can be quite surprised to hear from someone.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). This is one Saturday that's custommade for bargain hunters and window shoppers. Wait until after lunch, however, to head for the store. Morning hours can be hectic at home.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). The prospect of a free day after a grueling week on the job can tax your ambition to exceptionally plush too many personal tasks. Don't drive yourself to exhaustion.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). The best way to handle a secret crisis is to do nothing at all for the time being. Don't be forced out into the open by sneaky manoeuvres from competitors.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). This weekend's drive point is to entertain or arrange an outing. Be greater the chances with something will go wrong. Attempts to make a big impression should be dismissed.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Job responsibilities have a way of invading the calendar, and you can find yourself setting up a weekend office at home. Make sure kin keep out of your hair.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Stay out of range of a sharp-tempered mate this morning. Domestic humor won't brighten until lunchtime, so go back to bed.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Your fast-growing reputation as a blabbermouth can make it impossible to learn a big secret today. Don't drive your luck by playing guessing games. They're just not taking.

If Your Birthday Is Today—Just one chance should be all you give to those who pledge their support you. You can't risk being deceived twice, even if it's close kin who let you down.

Ontario Dentists in Favor Of Dental Care Insurance

TORONTO (CP) — A survey by by five University of Toronto dental students shows that 81 per cent of dentists in Ontario favor a dental-care program to parallel medical insurance.

The survey, made public Thursday, also showed that 91.7 per cent of the public questioned favored free dental care. The percentage dropped to 43.2 per cent when a monthly premium of $10 to $12 was suggested.

Last spring Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence said he favors gradual introduction of dental care in a program that would provide free dental care to one grade of school children, gradually increasing to more children and eventually the entire population.

Thursday, Mr. Lawrence said unless the economy goes downhill, the province should become involved in dental care for kindergarten children "within a year or two."

Hamilton Postmen Join St. Kitts Strike

HAMILTON (CP) — City letter carriers and nearby Burlington letter carriers voted Thursday to go on strike in support o St. Catharines postal employees who have been on strike since Tuesday.

The St. Catharines workers are protesting the hiring of casual help, which they say is contrary to their contract agreement with the federal government.

Sid Spencer, president of Local 168, Letter Carriers Union of Canada, in Burlington, said the letter carriers will go on strike, but he did not know when.

A spokesman for the St. Catharines workers said the strike may spread to the Niagara Peninsula by Monday.

Dissatisfied Workers Die At Earlier Age

MONTREAL (CP) — Sidney Lirtzman, a management consultant and professor of management, says employees who are dissatisfied with their jobs are often in poor health.

Mr. Lirtzman told an international conference of personnel administrators Thursday that recent studies have shown a direct relationship between expressed job dissatisfaction and a rise in cholesterol rates among workers.

"Making allowances for age and type of occupation, the higher the rate of dissatisfaction the worker group, the higher the death rate," he said.

"In business organizations, worker dissatisfaction becomes a real question of life an death."

Philippine Diplomat Said Drug Smuggler

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A Philippine diplomat and a Bangkok merchant were arrested Thursday and charged with smuggling $13 million worth of heroin through John F. Kennedy International Airport, authorities said.

Domingo S. Canieso, 59, who is attached to the Philippine embassy in Vientiane, Laos, and his travelling companion, Siu Tsien-chou, were arraigned in federal court before United States Magistrate Max Schiffman. He ordered them held in jail in lieu of $200,000 bail each pending a hearing Nov. 22.

U.S. Attorney Robert Morse said the narcotics bureau learned of the smuggling attempt and had an agent trailing the two men when they left Vientiane Wednesday.

At the airport, Canieso claimed two suitcases in which the heroin was later found. On the basis of his diplomatic passport, he was allowed to pass through customs without examination and boarded a cab with Chou. Customs and narcotics agents followed them to the hotel.

The two each face a maximum sentence of 15 years.

Eight Hours of Terror

• Air Canada Captain Axes 'IRA' Hijacker

Ian Robertson

Under the Ball

Only the brave or daring attempt the game of monster ball. Because of its six-foot girth, the giant sphere cuts a swath through unsuspecting players wherever it appears. On Loyalist Colleges back 40 yesterday afternoon, teams were more interested in eluding the monster than in scoring. For what happened to victims . . . see first page, second section.

Montana Town Raises $50,000

CALGARY (CP) — Eight hours of high-altitude terror ended early today when a crew member of a hijacked Air Canada DC-8 jet apparently clubbed the hijacker with a fire axe.

It was reported that Capt. Vern Ehman of Montreal knocked the man unconscious as he bent over to put on a parachute while the aircraft was approaching Calgary International Airport at 3,000 feet.

However, an Air Canada spokesman who talked to the crew after the plane landed said "things weren't quite clear because the crew was tired and in a state of shock." They were to tell their story later today.

The hijacker, a short swarthy man with dark, curly hair presumed in his late 30s, said he was a member of the Irish Republican Army. He was armed with a gun and 19 sticks of dynamite, RCMP said early today they found a sawed-off shotgun on the plane.

He apparently threatened to blow out the back of the plane unless an emergency window was opened to allow him to bail out.

The large jet returned here about 12:05 a.m. MST today, more than eight hours after it had left here with 118 passengers and nine crew members on Flight 812 from Vancouver to Toronto.

The passengers earlier were released at Great Falls, Mont. None was harmed. They were flown to Toronto on an Air Canada relief plane from Calgary early today.

When the plane landed here the hijacker was whisked by ambulance to Calgary General Hospital. Dr. Raymond Chow said the man, under RCMP guard, had a concussion and a two-inch laceration on the back of his head and was in the intensive care unit in fair condition.

The Calgary landing ended an unprecedented Canadian hijack-

Shotgun Fired, Dynamite Ready

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (CP) — The chief purser "probably kept everybody alive," said Robert Scolnick of Toronto, a passenger on an Air Canada DC-8 hijacked Friday.

Mr. Scolnick, who sat across the aisle from the hijacker in the first class section, praised John Arpin of Toronto "for performing efficiently throughout the ordeal."

"The purser was exceptionally good because I know several times he kept the man calm when he thought he was going to set the dynamite off.

"He told the man he would do whatever he wanted and not to hurt anyone on the plane."

Mr. Scolnick, vice-president of Inter-Provincial Diversified Holdings Ltd., was interviewed after he and 117 other passengers were let off the jetliner after it landed here for a second time.

"The crew was very good. They kept the economy class completely in the dark and kept the first class people very calm. The only persons who heard the shot the hijacker fired from a shotgun were in first class. I talked to persons in economy and they heard it but didn't realize it was a shot."

He said "they didn't even

Davis Will Seek Ways • To Provide More Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Faced with another winter of high unemployment, Premier William Davis of Ontario will be in Ottawa Monday to seek federal initiatives to curb the problem and spur the provincial economy.

He'll also be looking for long-term economic solutions at the federal-provincial conference on the economy which is scheduled to end Wednesday.

Last week, Mr. Davis and four of his inner cabinet spent three days in seclusion to map Ontario's plans to prime the provincial economic pump. The solution will be dealt with at a special legislature session later this month or in early December.

One of the first items of business at the special legislative session will be to extend the federal three-precent cut in federal income tax to Ontario's share of the tax.

Mr. Davis has also promised a $63 million program that would provide 42,000 winter jobs. Winter works projects that cost $7.5 million last year would be tripled.

Another part of the program would provide for 5,000 trainees in industry. Mr. Davis also plans to assist small and medium-sized exporting firms.

The programs are an attempt to" inspire greater confidence in the economy and accelerate economic growth."

The government also plans to speed up capital works worth $35 million and push ahead its Ontario Housing Corporation projects which Allan Grossman, minister of trade and development, says will provide 21,000 construction jobs.

Sea Pollution Group Lists 23 Basic Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — A 42-nation working group on marine pollution has approved 23 basic principles outlining the responsibility of nations to prevent pollution of the seas.

The group was established to help prepare for the United Nations conference on the human environment in 1972, and Friday's approval marked the first broad international agreement on how the seas should be preserved.

An elated Canadian delegate told a news conference the principles could be the basis of international environmental sea laws.

Among the principles, hammered out in a five-day meeting are:

—That coastal states which pollute should compensate damaged states;

—That coastal states should be allowed to take "appropriate measures" to prevent pollution from accidents on the high seas, conceivably being able to take control of a damaged ship of another nation.

—That all states should ensure that their vessels comply with international standards of design, construction and operation.

New Brunswick NDP Outlawed

OTTAWA (CP) — A spokesman for the New Brunswick New Democratic Party said Friday the provincial association has been temporarily expelled from the federal group, Alastair H. Robertson, elected president of the provincial group at a convention Oct. 17, said the action was taken at a closed meeting of the federal council of the NDP here.

He said the federal council passed a resolution which stated that until such time as the New Brunswick party can produce evidence satisfactory to the federal officers that they have conducted a proper convention, "that we consider that we do not have a New Brunswick Party."

Gray Report - - or One Draft of Study ?

Government Agency to Control Foreign Investment Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — A report to the federal cabinet says a government agency with broad powers should be set up to control foreign investment in Canada.

The report was prepared by a committee under National Revenue Minister Herb Gray and delivered to cabinet six months ago It has never been officially released.

But long excerpts from it were published Friday by The Canadian Forum, a monthly magazine which devoted the entire December issue to the Gray report.

Managing editor Abraham Rotstein, an associate professor in political economy at the University of Toronto, said Friday he thinks cabinet members who do not consider foreign investment a problem are blocking release of the report in Ottawa.

Robert Stanfield, Progressive Conservative party leader, promptly called on the government to deny the authenticity of the Forum version or "stop playing the secrecy game" and release the full report for public debate.

In Ottawa, a statement from Prime Minister Trudeau's office confirmed that the December issue is based on a cabinet document but said it is "only one draft of a study prepared for official discussion at one stage in the preparation of documents to be submitted to the cabinet."

There was little other immediate reaction.

Proposals in the report revolve around a "screening agency" which could be either a tribunal or an agency responsible to a cabinet minister.

"In light of the government's industrial strategy, the screening authorities would seek to secure the best possible deal from foreign investment and to keep its entry where it is not beneficial."

The agency, the report suggests, would be concerned with the impact of exports, imports, research and specialization on such things as industrial efficiency, the level of economic activity and employment and the quality of goods and services in Canada.

"The guiding principle would be that Canada controls everything for itself and must, therefore, specialize between industries . . ."

The report recommends the screening approach over other alternatives such as majority Canadian-control rules or the "Key sector" approach. Past government directives should be specified that certain industries such as broadcast stations and banks must be Canadian controlled.

Las year a Commons committee, headed by Ian Wahn, Liberal MP for Toronto St. Paul's, recommended that al enterprises be brought under Canadian control.

The report rejects schemes to buy back control of companies now owned by foreign interests as being too costly and not necessarily effective. Both the majority control and the key sector proposals would involve purchasing firms now foreign-owned.

The report says national governments and multi-national enterprises are on a collision course.

It details the growing size power and influence of multi-national enterprises and suggests that eventually the world's economy could be dominated by 200 or 400 of them, mostly United States controlled. Some could have up to one million employees.

It says the growth of these super companies is likely to mean that national governments will lose the ability to control their own destinies.

In a world dominated by these giant corporations, to whom would their non-elected boards be responsible? the report asks.

However, it says host countries have some bargaining powers and can exercise some influence on the parent and perhaps the home government "as appears to have happened under the Canada-U.S. auto pact Agreement."

The report calls on the proposed federal screening agency to:

—Bargain with the multi-national enterprise for the location of research and innovative activities in Canada;

—Bargain for foreign technology through licensing agreements or joint ventures rather than direct investments;

—Have the power to look at the terms of royalty agreements;

—Either buy the technology in the name of the government and sell it or make it freely available to Canadian enterprises.

Major Points of Magazine's Version of Gray Report

TORONTO (CP) — Highlights of the Canadian Forum magazine's publication of what it says is an abridged version of the report on foreign ownership to the federal cabinet by Revenue Minister Herb Gray:

A government agency should be formed to screen activities of foreign firms and have power to block foreign investment.

Rules requiring majority Canadian control would be too costly and may not be beneficial.

The key-sector approach—such as the present policy which requires Canadian ownership of financial institutions —would be less effective than a screening procedure.

Foreign control of Canadian business activity has led to an industrial structure which largely reflects the priorities of foreign corporations.

Canada has become locked into a situation of accepting a pattern of innovation and technological development originating abroad.

Foreign-controlled firms constitute a high proportion of Canadian corporate activity, concentrated in resource exploitation and manufacturing.

Foreign takeovers often result in no significant growth in Canadian employment.

Takeovers have been a major route through which foreign control has grown.

Canadian subsidiaries of foreign companies are generally marginal operations and seldom have the capacity to survive independently.

Canada should encourage the development of Canadian multinational companies.

Hijacker Carried Dynamite

know the plane was hijacked until the aircraft landed in Montana the first time."

Mr. Scolnick described he otdeal this way:

"It was an hour out of Regina when this man with two parcels took one of them and went into the first class lounge just aft of the cockpit area.

"I had gone into the washroom, then to the lounge and saw the man had a gun and had it directed at a stewardess' head."

Mr. Scolnick said he was told to go back to his seat by the purser.

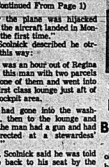
"Later, the chief purser came back and asked that we all stay calm and not create any activity because the man had 10 sticks of dynamite and if he got too nervous or scared he intended to blow up the plane."

After the aircraft was hijacked, Mr. Scolnick said "the man gave instructions to the pilots to go to Great Falls where he was supposed to pick up some money."

"He must have kept the plane up there for 2½ hours, or at least the time it would have taken to land in Toronto."

When the plane landed the first time in Great Falls, the passenger said the hijacker told the pilot to taxi to the end of the runway and there would be someone with a parcel or bag with some money.

"After picking up the money . . . the man told the pilots to fuel up the plane."



"The pilots argued they didn't have enough time, he told the purser to close the door and the plane was in the air within 30 seconds."

Mr. Scolnick said the purser asked the man to let the passengers off in Great Falls during the stop.

"He said he wouldn't because he didn't think the Americans would treat Canadian passengers properly and he didn't want to inconvenience the passengers."

A relief aircraft flew 113 of the passengers out of Great Falls early this morning and touched down in Toronto at 7:42 a.m.

The majority of passengers interviewed in Toronto said they did not see the hijacker and that the Air Canada crew did a "superb job" of keeping everyone calm.

Tourist Trailer Camp Gets Priority

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

As a result of a joint meeting of tourist - minded groups in the city, intensive efforts will be made in the coming weeks to find a site for a tourist trailer camp, to be located in or adjacent to the city.

Frank Murray, president of the Chamber of Commerce, in his address to the group said, during the past summer we found a definite need for run into problems if we use parks of this kind through information gathered from our tourist trucks.

"It is urgent to get a plan under way right now so that best advantage could be taken of the make - work programs for the summer in the coming weeks," said Mr. Murray.

While much of Mayor Russell Scott's address to the group was encouraging, he did object to the projected size of the park.

Size of the final park, but for the moment, it is not worth it to develop a facility of that size," the mayor said. "It sounds strange in line to have a ten-acre site and there may be help from the Ontario Parks Assistance plan for the buying of property."

Through this plan, which includes aid for building of trailer parks and marinas, the provincial government contributes 50 per cent of the land cost.

The mayor said "we may be the Parks Assistance Plan. If we use this plan we may find ourselves exempt from federal grants for the labor costs."

James Staveley of Canada Manpower, said that these grant problems could be worked out and that the Chamber of Commerce should have no problem in its submission for funds.

Again confronting the mayor, Ald. Paul Russell said, "I think it would be a mistake to make the park only

Planning Board Function Defined

Since Sept. 1, there have been numerous indications that some confusion exists among local councils and planning boards regarding the precise role of the Quinte Planning Board, a report tabled by planning staff at the Thursday night meeting of the QPB says.

The eight - page document emphasizes that planning boards are advisory bodies which do not have power to legislate or implement any planning recommendations. This power rests with councils, the ministry of municipal affairs, the Ontario Municipal Board, local committees of adjustment and local land division committees.

Planning staff point out members, have as a long-range task, preparation of an official plan for the planning area and preparation of zoning bylaws.

The Quinte Planning Area was officially defined by the department of municipal affairs owing to a lack of coordination between the municipalities. Under the board's guidance, the nine municipalities — Belleville, Trenton, Stirling, Frankford, Brighton, and the townships of Murray, Brighton, Sidney and Thurlow — can prepare their planning futures in relation to each other.

Many of these municipalities had prepared official plans and partial plans, which are slowly being absorbed into an over-all scheme. Separate and partial plans, which are slowly being absorbed into an over-all scheme. A general planning staff has assembled, tabulated and analyzed data, undertaken special studies and prepared special studies.

Working in conjunction with the board, are special planning advisory committees, appointed by the municipal councils. These committees submit reports dealing with subdivisions, rezoning and amendments to any official plans. Deed consents can also be handled on an advisory basis for committees of adjustment and land division committees.

The staff will be dealing with all planning proposals with a view to their over-all regional significance.

To date, only official plans for Brighton village and township have received ministerial approval. Some others have submitted their plans for provincial sanction. The remainder are either still awaiting council approval or work to begin on the documents.

Target dates for long range planning programs range from 1981 to the year 2000.

The staff recommended that one target date for a report by all municipalities involved and individual plans be amended accordingly.

The board accepted this and a second progress report, in principle. They will be referred to the various councils and advisory boards for their approval and any possible revisions.

The board has requested comments be dealt with at its December meeting.

All Military To Be Green

TRENTON (Staff) — After January 1, 1972 uniforms other than the standard green Canadian Forces' issue will not be allowed in the Canadian military establishment.

At Trenton the greens have been changed for the past two years but there are still enclaves particularly in the sea element of the Forces where old service uniforms are still worn religiously.

In one of the final public displays of green in the form of the Royal Canadian Air Force, a flight of former RCAF men mustered in formation at Remembrance Day observances here this week wearing their air force blues. Soon the old blues will be a memory.

Axe Fells Hijacker

ing saga during which the plane was diverted to the plane to Great Falls, Mont., 300 miles southwest of Regina, where $50,000 was waiting for him.

The money was raised by Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

It all started in late afternoon just east of Regina when the hijacker, who used the name Dennis, held a gun on a stewardess and demanded $1.5 million and a flight to Northern Ireland.

He diverted the plane to Great Falls, Mont., 300 miles southwest of Regina, where $50,000 was waiting for him.

The money was raised by Alberta, Sask. and Manitoba while the aircraft circled for more than two hours.

When the money was being delivered, an FBI agent tried to talk with the pilot by radio, but was warned that the hijacker had a radio set. The communication then ceased.

The plane then left for Regina and the hijacker said the passengers would be released only if he got the remainder of the money.

Only the passengers in first class were immediately aware of what was happening. The others found out when the plan stopped at Great Falls.

On the way to Regina, he changed his mind and told the pilot to return to Great Falls.

The DC-8 turned and was escorted back by U.S. Air Force fighter aircraft.

At one point, the hijacker, who wore a long black coat, told Capt. Ehman that he was willing to die for his cause.

Later, Sean Mcmurry, North American leader of the IRA, said in Vancouver there was no connection between the movement and the hijacking.

When the plane landed at Great Falls for the second time, the passengers were released.

Frank Carney, 21, calmly changed his mind about Ireland, thought they were in Toronto, he said.

He said the passengers remained calm throughout the flight.

When the plane returned to Calgary, it was parked about 100 feet away from the terminal, near the edge of a runway. Police cordoned the area and would not allow anyone near the scene.

A fire truck was parked by the aircraft and a group of men, believed to be bomb experts, were working on something outside the plane.

New Outlet on Dundas Street

Service Stations Jockey for Position

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Completion of the Dundas Street bypass south of the Bain subdivision section and possible future changes in traffic patterns in other areas of the city are resulting in a flurry of new or proposed service station and gas bar locations in the city.

Since the bypass was completed, two new gas bars have been located in the area and a third is shortly to open just west of the city limits on the Trento Road.

And with the possibility of traffic patterns changing in other parts of the city, there has been a flurry of other station proposals — all aimed at capturing a share of the customers' dollars when traffic volume moves.

During the past summer, a new Shell gas bar and automatic car wash location was opened at the entrance to Dundas Mall on North Front Street.

And a new Esso gas bar and car wash is shortly to open in Dundas Street just between the new Dundas Street bridge and Bay Bridge Road.

Earlier hopes were that this new location would be opened at the end of this week, but paving of location is still incomplete and the opening will not be until about the middle of the month.

Next door to the new Esso location, a new Petrocan gas bar was opened two months ago, while further west on the Trent Road just outside the city limits a new D-X diesel fuel gas bar is being readied for operation.

And even before this summer's flurry of installations along Dundas Street West, there already were five service stations or gas bars.

It appears that Coleman Street might become a busier traffic artery than was caused Pioneer Petroleum to show interest in the corner of Moira and Coleman Streets. Application was made some weeks ago for a building permit for this location, but with main north-south arterial route still undecided by planners and city council, the firm is not proceeding immediately with the proposed station development.

Another gas discounter has shown interest in a Camilton Road location in the Redd Street area with a construction permit being applied for, several weeks ago.

But now with the possibility of the proposed grade separation over the CN double tracks being constructed east of Camilton Road, the company has not followed up its permit application for this area.

The reason, no doubt, is that when the proposed grade separation is constructed — either an overpass or a subway — Camilton Road will become a dead end street.

And construction of a new bridge over the Moira at the end of Pinnacle Street, could result in some jockeying for station positions in this area by the major oil companies.

In the meantime, Texaco has been denied a zoning change for a proposed service station location on the corner of Bridge and Herchimer streets. Already there are two gas stations on the corner.

The corner of College and Sidney Streets is another location where the major oil company is showing interest.

The city plans construction of a new four-lane grade separation over the CN double tracks at Bridge and Moira streets and, with prospects of traffic volume, Texaco has made application for a zoning change at southwest corner of Sidney and College for a low construction of a service station.

Here, however, the council advisory planning committee has recommended a public hearing to determine if there is objection from area residents.

And prospects are that there will be objection as already area householders have objecting opinions on the matter.

But while service stations and gas bars are springing up in new locations, existing stations in other areas are vacant.

The Golf station at the corner of Front and Dundas streets has been vacant for several months, while a Texaco station on Bridge Street West formerly operated by Eric Watkins, is also without a tenant.

Coin Laundry Closing Protested

MARMORA — The largest delegation ever to attend a Marmora Township council meeting was on hand Monday night to protest the closing of the village's coin laundry.

The coin laundry was closed some time ago on orders of Dr. C. R. Lenk, medical officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward counties health unit.

Effluent from the holding tanks at the laundry had been running over, leaving water lying on the ground and causing a disagreeable odor in the area. The problem could be solved by installation of a sewage disposal system in the village.

Vincent Lynch, speaking on behalf of 19 businessmen, read a statement to the effect that Marmora business men were losing $250 a day because of the closure of the laundry. The estimate was based on the $5 a trip Mr. Lynch said Marmora people spend in Havelock, Madoc and Stirling when they drive to those centres to do their laundry.

In the two-hour discussion that followed Dr. H.G. Parkin, owner of the coin laundry building claimed that the effluent is more of a public nuisance than a health problem.

He said the public health officials told him that they would not have closed the laundry down if Marmora council had not "kept digging" them. He added that Marmora cannot afford to be that particular.

Reeve Jack Reynolds rejected the charges that council was irresponsible about responding to the needs of the community. He said that nearly $4,000 worth of fill has been trucked to the proposed park this year and if the laundry effluent continues to spill over into the park it will no longer be able to keep the topsoil there.

"The park, when completed, will create more business for Marmora because facilities for swimming, boating, and camping will be available," he said. "It is our duty to do something about the laundry problem: we, as a council, cannot close our eyes to it."

It was proposed that the laundry operate on a restricted basis, three or four days a week, to give the sewage system time to dispose of surplus water. Dr. Parkin offered use of land to the south and east of the holding tank and tile system so that more tiles could be laid to alleviate the problem of flooding.

Dr. Parkin's suggestion that the problem be left in the hands of the health unit and laundry operator Tom Barton of Madoc was backed by Mr. Lynch and his fellow delegates.

Council agreed to this proposal, provided improvements are carried out to the east and south to confine the effluent and a weekly check is made and a written report is submitted to council by the health unit.

The Ontario Municipal Board will hold a public hearing in Marmora Dec. 1 to consider the village's financial situation and the objections regarding a proposed $1 million sewage installation. But if the OMB approves the village's application, it will be two years before the installation is completed.

Trenton Body Approves Highrise Rezoning Bid

TRENTON (Staff) — After two meetings, one Wednesday evening and the other Thursday afternoon, Trenton and Suburban Planning Board has approved the bid of Stan Klemencic to have the old Fraser estate rezoned for a highrise apartment tower.

Planning board has referred the issue now to council which is expected to take the matter again before the Ontario Municipal Board for rezoning and approval for rezoning. The planning board had not dealt in depth with the rezoning question before the last OMB hearing this summer.

However, planning board has now reviewed a series of reports on the rezoning bid including the recently - released provincial traffic study on the area.

The long - awaited traffic report indicates the flow of cars will not be significantly affected by construction of the apartments, although it does recommend an additional entrance to the site in addition to the one already planned off Dundas West.

Speculation here is that the further entrance to the property will be on Henry Street, the feeling being that one off Catherine Street should be avoided because it is a route to the hospital. Mr. Klemencic has agreed to put in another entrance on Henry.

Other reports have indicated sewer and water service in the area are adequate to support the new building and parks are adequate.

One Plant to Print County Weeklies?

MADOC (Special)—Weekly newspaper publishers in Hastings county are pondering a proposal to form a co-operative company to print their papers.

At present, the weeklies are printed on the presses on their own premises, or by arrangement with other printers.

The proposal made by the Tweed News Publishing Company last Thursday was formation of a participatory printing company including Intelligencer Publishing of Belleville, The Marmora Herald, The Tweed News Publishing Company and the Campbellford Publishing Company.

The limited company would own an offset press, plate-maker and related materials and equipment. It would be housed in space rented from the Tweed firm and Tweed's camera facilities would be rented also.

Each participating weekly would agree to have one or more of its staff learn how to operate the press and cameras.

The one weekly would pay a stipulated page price for 1,000 copies and increase that for every 500 copies and would agree to abide by an established set of deadlines for publication.

Cost of the operation would be equally by the participating weeklies, based on an eight-page paper with a press run of 2,000 for each weekly.

Officers elected for the proposed printing company are: president, James Bell; vice-president, Jack Golden; secretary-treasurer, Lynn Jones; directors, Lorne Scott, Ted Hanna; and directors B. King, Clyde Hoskins, Sheila Golden and K. Kingston.

Body Recovered Funeral Today

BANCROFT (Staff) — The body of 32 - year - old Bertie Jack Point of Lindsay was discovered at 111.5 a.m. Friday by Ontario Provincial Police diver Constable James McCormick of Madoc.

The body of Mr. Point had been missing since Tuesday, when a hunter found the body of Irvin Frank, 12, of RR 1, Bancroft, floating on the surface of Bastard Lake, seven mile northwest of here. The boys' father, Ernest Leroy Frank 35, was later found by OPP and Lands and Forests officers.

The third body, discovered in a small bay, was not outfitted with a lifejacket.

Ernest Funk and his brother were clearing brush for Ontario Hydro on the lake's shore.

The family had been crossing the lake when the mishap occurred.

Coroner Dr. H. S. Johnson of Bancroft, has not announced yet if an inquest will be held.

Funeral services for the three Funks will be held at the Hattin Funeral Home, 2 p.m. today.

Police to Keep Vandalism Watch

Police say they will be stepping up vigilance in the Ann-Charles - Alexander streets neighborhood of Belleville following recurring vandalism in the area.

Police action will include more patrols and spotting of unmarked squad cars in the area.

Most recent incident occurred on Mount Pleasant Road where 14 tires were reported slashed on cars parked outside a home Thursday night.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie yesterday confirmed the complaints of a Bellevillian that vandalism has been occurring in the district — the complaints including garbage cans being overturned down the hill dividing the area from Great St. James Street.

Some of the incidents, including throwing rocks and rotten eggs, apparently had been a particular problem for one elderly couple in the area.

The chief said a request has gone to the city's traffic and light committee for installation of a high - powered mercury-vapor light near the residence. The police department will support the request.

"There'll be extra patrols up there; it's been brought to the special attention of the men and we'll be putting plain cars up there," he said.

The force's been "a fair bit of trouble" in the whole area since Hallowe'en, the chief added.

Marmora, Deloro Honor Fallen

MARMORA (Special) — Under cloudy skies on Thursday morning, veterans, Legionettes, Ladies' Auxiliary, IODE, Girl Guides, Brownies, Scouts and Cubs assembled in full uniform at the new Legionaires, Ladies' Aux., Legion headquarters; then, led by the traditional color party and marching to the pipes and drums, they gathered in front of the Memorial Building with the citizens of Marmora to pay tribute to the comrades who died in two world wars.

The service was conducted by Percy Gray who was also parade master. Last Post and Reveille were sounded by Stephen Smith.

Rev. John Lombard of St. Paul's Anglican Church read a portion of scripture and led in special prayers.

A brief but inspiring message was delivered by Rev. G. W. Kemp of Marmora Free Methodist Church.

He said the Remembrance Day Service was a time to truly remember our indebtedness to the men who died — it must also be a time of gratitude, a time of sharing with those who were bereaved and a time of hope.

Mrs. James Nash presented the Ontario wreath on behalf of the Silver Cross Mothers.

A wreath was also laid at the Cenotaph in Marmora Protestant Cemetery in memory of those veterans who lie buried there.

At the Remembrance Day Service in the Village Hall at Deloro, Mr. Ray Brown was in charge of the service and Rev. John Peters of St. Andrew's United Church delivered the message.

A good number of children were on hand for the service, although total-attendance was down from last year.

A large wreath on behalf of the people of Deloro Village was presented by Ray Brown.

The Deloro Village Social Association wreath was presented by Costas Parsnuik and Maurice Horvath presented one on behalf of the Deloro Nursing Home.

Mrs. Ken Donaldson presided at the piano for the singing of O Canada.

UC Spokesman Calls For Social Involvement

For every dollar going to the church it costs eight cents to get it there if churches handle the job, 27 cents if it is done by community agencies but $3 if it is done by government, said John Black, new president of the United Church Bay of Quinte Conference, speaking in Belleville Tuesday.

The Kingston barrister, first layman to hold the conference presidency, said the statistics were the results of a study made by the National Association of Life Underwriters, one of the Better Business Bureau.

He urged area churchmen to be more involved in social issues, saying "we have an obligation as committed Christians to speak up fore, fully whether it is popular or not."

He suggested the church may even become involved in low-cost housing projects. "It is little use to ask governments, agencies for alcoholics and drug addicts if the answer is to be found elsewhere," he said.

Mr. Black recommended that urban churches consolidate and amalgamate in the next few years. Not only did he support church union proposals. "It is little use to ask governments, agencies for alcoholics and drug addicts if the answer is to be found elsewhere," he said.

Mr. Black recommended that urban churches consolidate and amalgamate in the next few years. Not only did he support church unions. Churches work more closely "together and with governments," he also advocated closer ties among all faiths.

"There is a great deal of suspicion among churches, due to lack of understanding," he said. "The great sins of our church is this attention of one another," he stated.

Landowners Ask Better Road

MARMORA (Special) — A civil servant, government regulations and Reeve John Wilkes took a severe lashing at Marmora and Lake township council Saturday afternoon as two frustrated township ratepayers made another attempt to get action on their appeal for a better road to their farms.

The four landowners, Tom O'Connor, A. Ridgeway, Lyn Kelsey and William Pigeau, have offered to donate 66 feet for a road because their present long lane makes it impossible to keep open in the winter.

Four different proposals for the road have been turned down by the department of highways. Reeve Wilkes said that all road work has to be approved by the department which pays 80 per cent of construction and maintenance costs.

Since the proposed road has been turned down by the department, council feels it does not authorize such a large expenditure.

Marmora and Lake township's share of the Winter Works Incentive Program money is $1,675. The clerk was instructed to apply for the money and council will decide later how it will be spent.

Two Injured

One man is in hospital and another recovering from minor injuries as the result of a single car, two-tree accident on Camilton road yesterday.

Kenneth Tone, 22, of 14 McFarland Drive, a passenger in the car, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital suffering from what a medical spokesman described as "extensive scalp lacerations and possible head injuries."

Driver of the car, Frank Woodcock, 22, of 77 West Street, was treated for cuts to his nose and mouth and released.

City police report the 1967 Pontiac skidded through a stop sign on Adam Street and crashed into two trees on the west side of Camilton Road.

Considered a writeoff, damage to the car has been estimated at $1,200.

Cheese Milk Price Drops

The Ontario Milk Marketing Board has announced the following prices effective Nov. 1:

Bulk milk for the manufacture of cheddar cheese, Class 5(a), was reduced by two cents from $5.73 to $5.71 per cwt. Bulk milk for brick and colby cheeses, Class 4(b), was reduced from $5.88 to $5.86 per cwt. Can prices for these two classes are 10 cents less. Prices are based on the weighted average price of 72.7 cents per pound of cheese sold on the Belleville Exchange during the month of October.

And at the same time the Board announced an increase in the Group 2 Pool cost which transport rates for producers in the southern part of the province. The reason for the increase was given as rising transportation costs to the Board.

Effective November 1, the charge to can producers is increased from 10 cents per cwt. to 36 cents per cwt. and the charge to bulk producers is increased from 23.5 cents per cwt. to 26.5 cents per cwt.

Library Films Prove Popular

Because of an encouraging response, the administration of the Corby Public Library will be continuing its public showing of films.

Spokesman for the library says "the program was favorably received and the program was repeated Wednesday Nov. 10.

Film was a popular commodity during the month of October, as the number circulated reached 503.

In answer to the large demand for not only films but projectors, the library has added a new machine to their staff.

On the reading side of the library, 18,203 books were loaned through the adult section, while 9,039 books were loaned through the children's library.

Law Students To Be Tested

Potential Ontario law students will be required to write a Law School Admission test as part of their standard entry requirements beginning with the 1972-73 term.

Originating from Education-al Testing Service, Princeton New Jersey, the test was adopted in Ontario as a result of the growing number of applicants in recent years.

Ontario law applicants may contact the admissions office at any one of the five Ontario universities having law schools for necessary forms and further information. The schools are at Queen's University, the University of Toronto, the University of Western Ontario, the University of Windsor and Osgoode Hall Law School (York University).

Most Ontario university campuses as well as major Canadian cities will administer the test and other countries will provide facilities should the need arise. Test dates are: December 18, 1971; February 12, 1972 and April 8, 1972.

Candidates are advised to take the December or February tests if at all possible because of the increase in the number of applications. They must register at least three weeks in advance of each date.

Deadline for receipt of applications at most Ontario law schools is May 1, 1972.

Life of Challenge

Possibly the most difficult quality for a young person to develop, without being overbearing on the one hand, or a loner on the other hand, is individuality. "But, Centennial principal W. J. Musgrove offered some sound guidelines at the Centennial graduation ceremonies recently.

Self-confidence and pride, he told the students, were necessary attributes for success in life. "Your ancestors survived by doing the impossible and you too have that potential."

"Be an individual, unswayed by the emotions of the masses," he said. Mr. Musgrove may have been thinking of contemporary events and the concept of participatory democracy that has grown up in our time. Sometimes this greater involvement is not so much a matter of everyone arriving at his own conclusions as a case of the stronger members of the group influencing the others. The so-called peer group, meaning one's equals, is not so much that as domination by the few.

Or as Irish playwright St. John Ervine once put it: "All changes for the better are made, first, in the minds of individuals. A case could, I think, be made for the belief that all changes for the worse start in the mind of the mob. The mob is a weak and brainless thing, subject to panic and emotion, and easily dominated by empty eloquence."

Now to a group situation which also demands individual ruggedness and determination. We refer to Loyalist College's Outward Bound club and their conquest of Mount Washington last weekend. The New Hampshire pile can be a tough nut at any time of year, being subject to fog and swift changes in climatic conditions. But this time of year is a singularly harsh choice for such an attempt.

Our man on the slopes with the Loyalist group was Colin Bruce and his pictures show a region in total contrast to the landscapes of Ontario. There is amid mountain scenery a sense of exhilaration unequalled by more humdrum vistas. On the peaks there is a sense of timelessness and rapport with the world quite at odds with the daily grind back home.

As one student climber put it: "I have a great feeling of loss leaving the mountain. . ." It had made him feel so good he hated to leave.

'Empress' Bows Out

Travel patterns have changed dramatically with the age of jet flight. If we need further confirmation of this it is to be found in the wind-up of Canadian Pacific's only remaining ocean passenger ship, the Empress of Canada.

No longer will the ship sail the Atlantic and the fact that it is being withdrawn from cruise service also is a measure of these changed circumstances.

A Canadian Pacific spokesman points out that passenger traffic between British and Canada has dropped from 88,000 in 1960 to 23,732 last year. For one thing people simply do not have the time to indulge the slower ocean voyage these days — at least not on such a heavily travelled route as the Atlantic.

What will become of the Empress of Canada? Only ten years in service we hope it may find a new owner, for there are other routes, the South Atlantic and Pacific, for instance, which still lend themselves to seagoing traffic.

Aussies Pull Out

Almost unnoticed in the winding down process of the ground war in Vietnam, so far as the United States is concerned, is the fact that the Australians who at one time had some 8,000 men pitted against the Communists, have withdrawn their last battalion of about 1,100 men. Similarly the New Zealanders have recalled the last of their smaller force.

Along with forces from South Korea and Thailand the Australians and New Zealanders made a significant contribution to the containment of the threat from the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong.

His and Hers

Prime Minister William McMahon of Australia, whose blonde wife, Sonia, a former model, created a stir at a White House state dinner with a wide evening gown slit from both sides almost to the hips, must have decided not to be outdone. Accompanied by his wife he went on a shopping trip to Rockefeller Centre and a store featuring clothing by British designer Hardy Amies. There he was pictured trying on a jacket and standing rather stiffly as Mrs. McMahon looked on approvingly. Did he buy it . . . well, we are not told, but Mrs. McMahon has the look of a lady who knows what suits her husband best. On this occasion, incidentally, she was wearing a long winter coat with white fur collar and cuffs.

Kosygin and Tito: A Couple of Fine Capitalists

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — After two weeks — roughly one each — of seeing, close-up, Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and Yugoslav President Josip Tito, one impression registers indelibly on us if they were born in the purple of the upper-rich.

None of that man of the people - staff of dressing-up practising, hard - line Communist, but they sure go for the sweets of capitalism.

They take the very best that the free enterprise system they hold in such contempt can offer as if they were born to the purple of the super-rich.

To Make Million Was A Thrill, To Give It Up an Experience

MISSION, B.C. (CP) — To retire at age 34 after earning more than $1 million—that was a thrill.

To give away $2 million at age 53 and enter a monastery shortly was a more profound experience.

It happened to Rev. Bede Reynolds, 79, once a Protestant civil engineer, who struck it rich in the oil fields of the 1920s and today is a senior Benedictine monk at the West-minster Abbey Benedictine Christ the King' near here.

When Father Reynolds, born in Michigan as Kenyon Llewellyn Reynolds, met the woman who would become his wife it was the beginning of a spiritual odyssey which would eventually lead him to monastic life.

The first week he knew his wife-to-be he made a discovery.

"I learned that she was a Roman Catholic. What a blow it was for me. If she were a cripple or an invalid that could be cured. But if she was anything like my brother Graham, a fervent Catholic then at a secondary, what was the chance of cure from Catholicism?

They were married, notwithstanding. Later, it was Mrs. Reynolds who was converted.

He was married at 21 and at 28 used his civil engineering skill to build a $1 million plant to extract gasoline from natural gas in Texas.

Mr. Reynolds was part of Pacific Gasoline Co., a little company which sold only to wholesalers. But Standard Oil of California didn't consider Pacific Gasoline Co. so small — it handed over $2 million to buy the partners out.

"I was vice-president of our company at the time, and my share came to a little over a million dollars," Father Reynolds recalled. "And don't forget, that was in 1926. The transaction left me, at the age of 34, with more money than I ever expected to own. I had three cheques sent to me for my three stock certificates and deposited them in the bank—and if you don't think that it is a thrill try it some time."

For the next 16 years, Mr. Reynolds and his wife lived at ease. They travelled around the world. They bought a summer home at McKenzie Bridge, on the McKenzie River in Oregon.

Mr. Reynolds kept up with his hobbies: hybridizing daffodils, angling and archery.

It was during this time that he became a Catholic.

"I observed the tactics of a Catholic saint of a wife for 18 years," he said. "The last year I found my way into the church The last seven years before my wife died, we were daily communicants.

"We had a chapel at our summer home, and a chaplain there who was a Benedictine from Mount Angel Abbey, 100 miles away. So this is how I eventually came to the order."

Mr. Reynolds volunteered his services in the U.S. Petroleum Administration during the Second World War, and after the war he ended, his wife died of cancer.

He remarried then. I figured that as God had given me the faith while I was married, it wasn't expected of me to break up my family to become a priest," Father Reynolds said. "But my wife and I both knew that I wanted to be a priest, when we knew that she had only a short time to live."

It took him three years to dispose of his assets—which had grown to some $2 million by this time.

"The money was distributed both, wide and handsome."

Mount Angel Abbey was establishing a daughter priory in B.C., and by the time he was ordained a priest in 1951, he had moved north.

Father Bede contributed $500,000 and his skills as a civil engineer when the $1.5 million abbey was built in 1953-54.

At 79, he is 15 years older than anyone else at the monastery, and is second in rank among the monks.

Father Reynolds, who has written a book about his life entitled A Rebel from Riches, said he'd never had any regrets about his decision.

"I wouldn't trade places with anybody in the world—not so much because I'm well satisfied with my own doings, but because it is what God has evidently mapped out for me to do."

Gideons' Work Triples

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Three travelling salesmen chatting one night in a Janesville, Wis., hotel lobby, started the idea. Today, 71 years later, it is a worldwide movement of 23,500 men, making the Bible handy for people away from home.

"It's a tremendously growing challenge," says M. A. Henderson of Nashville, Tenn., executive director of Gideons International, made up of business and professional men of various Protestant denominations.

Although its distribution of Bibles has tripled in the last decade, its membership doubled and its budget quadrupled, it recently has been unable to match the expanding needs with to replace worn or pilfered books and to stock the fast-increasing new motel rooms.

"Frankly, we just haven't been able to keep up," Henderson said in an interview. "But we're constantly working to get our members to beat the bushes and try to catch up with the huge growth in opportunities."

"It's a never-ending process," said Henderson, 49, a Presbyterian, and the Gideons' operational executive for 15 years. But the "spiritual fruits" are great, he added, citing the constant flow of letters from travellers and others, telling of lives enriched by the book left for them to read.

Besides seeking to keep a Bible in every hotel and motel room in the land, the interdenominational organization also supplies Bibles in airliners, prison cells, physicians' offices, hospitals, the military, personnel, nurses and school teachers. It also now operates in 87 foreign countries.

Last year, it distributed 7.8 million copies of New Testaments, up 8.3 per cent from the year before, and three times as many as 10 years ago. The total since its founding passed 100 million in August.

As the program has grown, there also have been new problems, including opposition to distributing Bibles in some Moslem and Buddhist countries, and in a few cases, in U.S. grade and high school children.

Besides stocking new hotel and motel rooms, which generally is given priority, the Gideons also aim to replace Bibles in rooms previously stocked every seven years, which is regarded as a book's standard life span, due to wear and pilferage.

The Gideons are organized into 1,185 local "camps" in the U.S., so called in memory of their namesake, the Biblical leader whose small band triumphed over a huge army through daring and faith.

Woman Enjoys Nearly Forgotten Art of Tatting

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

The pleasant, red brick house on Bridge Street is scarcely distinguishable from its neighbors on either side but inside, on a polished dining table, a large array of hand worked dresser sets, handkerchiefs, tray cloths and other articles immediately catches the eye. Nothing startling about that: you'd say, but on talking to Mrs. J. Betts, the creator of all these handicrafts you discover that each piece represents hours and hours, even years of laborious work. What's more each piece is tatted, and tatting once the proud privilege of women of royal blood in England, is now a dying art.

Working with a shuttle and a ball of thread, Mrs. Betts' nimble fingers make a series of knots. The knots are the units which make up the circles, loops and chains that comprise all tatting patterns. So from the thread, shuttle and Mrs. Betts' skill acquired patiently over the years, emerge intricate designs which find their way to her customers' homes and perhaps into the linen collection of many a bride-to-be.

Asked where she gets the patterns for her fascinating hobby, Mrs. Betts replied with a smile that it was extremely difficult to buy patterns these days because even though there has been a great revival of crocheting and knitting, tatting is too slow a process to have gained in popularity with the space-age generation. So Mrs. Betts has to resort to old, old issues of women's magazines for patterns and sometimes she designs her own.

Surveying the array of articles on her display table, one is struck by the variety — everything from the expected tray cloths and dresser sets to novel, cross-shaped book marks and attractive hairbands. The colors are delicate and feminine and some pieces, worked in more than one color have an 'embroidered' effect. A rust coloured lapsacking tablecloth catches one's attention for the delicate but tatted edging makes an effective contrast both in color and texture.

Asked where and how she learned the art, Mrs. Betts replied in her soft, slightly English accented voice that she 'picked it up' when she was a child, by watching her sister doing it. She emphasized that one really has to work at it, practising it for a very long period of time before one has perfected it. "However, it's a hobby that intrigues you, and once you've mastered it, you just can't seem to be able to stop" she said with a twinkle.

Discussing the origin of tatting, Mrs. Betts said that nobody knows where and how it started, but in England in the old days, the art of tatting was a jealously guarded secret of royal ladies. To this day nobody knows how knowledge of it leaked out to the commoners. Queen Victoria was known to have made a tatted coverlet for one of her children. Queens, princesses and other women of royal blood often kept their hands busy at tatting (and their eyes away from the sights un-fit for royalty!) while they rode out on the streets in their carriages.

Mrs. Betts obviously enjoys her work for she estimates that the price she charges for each piece pays her less than five cents for each hour of her labor. She also regrets that soon tatting will be a forgotten art.

"It's ready to teach anyone who has the desire to learn tatting," she offers generously.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

AT HOME

New Pill Is Effective

CHICAGO (CP) — A Michigan doctor has reported that a "morning-after" birth control pill has prevented pregnancy in 1,000 women without serious side effects.

In a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Lucile K. Kuchera says she gave the pill to women of child-bearing age within 72 hours of sexual exposure. Nearly 90 per cent had used no form of contraceptive protection. The probability of conception from a single unprotected coitus is between 1 in 50 and 1 in 25.

Dr. Kuchera gave the women a synthetic estrogen known as diethylstilbestrol twice daily for five days. She emphasized that this was an emergency type of treatment, and advised they use other means of contraception on a regular basis. The doctor asked them to report back on pregnancy, side effects and the type of menstrual period they had following the pill.

No serious side effects developed in any of the 1,000 women taking the pill. More than 45 per cent had virtually no side reactions at all. The most common complaint was intermittent nausea, or nausea and vomiting.

The drug was discovered about 25 years ago. It has been used for estrogen replacement therapy in menopausal women; abnormal uterine bleeding; breast engorgement after childbirth, and breast cancer.

The action of diethylstilbestrol appears to be on the lining of the uterus preventing implantation. It also speeds the passage of the egg through the genital tract.

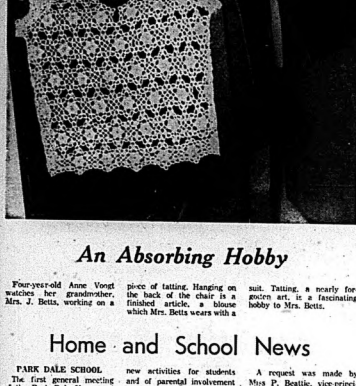
Art Association Holds Exhibition

Currently gracing the walls of the Belleville public library art gallery are the 49 works of members of the Belleville Art Association chosen for the fifth annual exhibition which will continue until November 30. The winner of the best painting award was Lilian Peddle for her painting 'Lorne's Tomatoes'.

Mrs. Kay Kritzwiser, art critic for the Globe and Mail who juried the show was impressed with the over-all quality of the show. "There is a great emphasis on landscape," she said, "in fact most of this collection perhaps lacks daring but there is a lot of good solid painting."

"I am very impressed with the quality of the water color" she continued "because there again excellent technique can produce banal work but the painter with an experimental brush can make his watercolor do extraordinary things".

She commented that she liked the few examples of batiks, paintings on wood panels and other 'modern' materials. "In general it's a tight little show with commendable freshness and my only real criticism is of the framing" she remarked.



Economy cannot always be an excuse for using appalling frames."

The exhibition was opened by Miss Olive Delaney.

Best Painting Award

Mrs. Lilian Peddle receives the award for best painting from Oscar Bonin at the fifth annual exhibition of the Belleville Art Association. In the background is the painting 'Lorne's Tomatoes' by Mrs. Peddle which was judged the best in the show.

An Absorbing Hobby

Four-year-old Anne Vogt watches her grandmother, Mrs. J. Betts, working on a piece of tatting. Hanging on the back of the chair is a finished article, a blouse which Mrs. Betts wears with a suit. Tatting, a nearly forgotten art, is a fascinating hobby to Mrs. Betts.

Home and School News

PARK DALE SCHOOL

The first general meeting of the Park Dale Home and School Association was held September 27 in the school. Mr. Wooster, president, opened the meeting and then turned it over to Mrs. S. Bochnek, vice-president. The officers for 1971-72 were installed by Mr. J. Cox. Upon conclusion of the business, Mr. B. Wright, principal, welcomed everyone and introduced his staff. Mr. Wright spoke on "key tasks of principalship" and Miss P. Beattie, vice-principal, spoke briefly on the new activities for students and of parental involvement with the school. The classrooms were opened at the close of the meeting.

The second general meeting of Park Dale Home and School Association was held October 25. A film depicting the learning processes of children was shown called "Children are people." An informal discussion on the topic was held before the film aided by a questionnaire. The film showed how children are being taught today.

A request was made by Miss P. Beattie, vice-principal, for anyone who could donate cooking utensils to the school for the Home Economics classes to please bring them to the school.

The meeting was held informally, as last month, with parents and teachers intermingled around tables. It was reported that Park Dale has a membership of 75 in the Home and School.

It was announced the next meeting will be held January 24, 1972.

Quinte Medical Secretaries Attend Clinic Day

The 8th annual Clinic Day was held at Scarborough General Hospital recently when a varied program was presented.

Members of the Quinte Medical Secretaries attended the event.

After registration, Dr. O. R. Maher, Chief of Staff of Scarborough General Hospital, greeted the gathering.

Mrs. P. Vakil and Gordon James, social workers from Scarborough Centenary Hospital, proved by dialogue how "Fair Fighting" was a desirable necessity for a successful marriage. It was pointed out that "wood robin" fights just ventilate pent up anger. It is better that problems be viewed as they arise and that people learn to be in control of their anger even though that is far more difficult than controlling emotion. Real listening as opposed to planning what to say as the other partner is talking, allows the talker to have his anger recognized and can be dealt with logically. In such a discussion, there is opportunity to feed back information. Neither partner will win or lose, otherwise a poorer relationship will develop. Collusion world only condone neurotic behavior.

The over-all conclusion the social workers made was "that aggression can indeed hold us together if used in a constructive manner."

The second guest speaker for the morning session was Dr. J. O. Laughton, General Surgeon, Scarborough Centenary Hospital and his topic was "Thoratic Surgery." This specialty is relatively young and was begun after the turn of the century. The early operations for removal of a lung done by Dr. William McKeon of Glasgow and Dr. Lyeret Graham of the U.S.A., were unsuccessful due to the inability to keep the pressure by the chest wall under control. The lung had to be inflated while surgery is in progress.

Tremendous strides have been made in the fight against tuberculosis and along with surgery the use of antibiotics such as streptomycin have been made invaluable. Dr. Laughton demonstrated various procedures relative to his specialty with the aid of slides. By graph he showed the statistical rise of cancer of the lung from 1930-1960, especially in the male smoker and more especially the cigarette smoker. He suggested that sputum tests and bronchoscopy should be carried out. One particular set of slides proved how dangerous exposure to asbestos can be. Slides were shown of a man, having inhaled molten aluminum and a cast of it being removed from the bronchus.

Dr. P. Bierre, obstetrician and gynecologist from St. Michaels Hospital, was the next speaker and his topic was "Ultra Sound Scanning", a procedure which has been used in Australia, Germany, Scotland, the U.S.A. and Australia. It is a procedure not propagated through air but through a fluid medium. A good explanation of the theory of ultra sound scanning was provided by comparison to the use of the sonar beam to detect submarines during World War II. Slides presented made the procedure more easily understood especially the one showing a fetus in the uterus and how multiple or abnormal pregnancies can be detected within the eight week gestation. There are many uses for scanning — eye scanning for the opthamologist, head scanning for the neuro surgeon, orthopedic surgeon for bone lesions. Scanning could be harmful if used in excess but often not as harmful as X-rays.

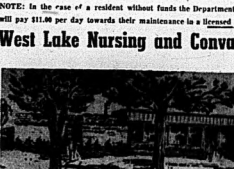
A coffee break was enjoyed, provided by Scarborough General Hospital.

Dr. Barbara McLaren, Department of Hygiene, University of Toronto, spoke on her favorite subject "Obesity in Women". Research volunteers began their laborious task in 1965 to try and overcome this problem. There is now a waiting list of over 1,000 willing to undergo the research project. The death rate due to obesity has decreased 24 per cent since 1960. Diabetes and gall bladder disease are more prevalent amongst the obese.

It was pointed out that 70 per cent of the population is overweight. Obesity can often be traced to childhood eating habits and the possibility of diabetes in later life is increased if a baby has a birth weight of nine pounds. The myth of every overweight person having a psychological problem was found to be untrue. Five foods were listed in order of importance — milk, protein, fruits, vegetables and bread. Dr. McLaren covered facts on taste buds, aminoacidin and centre length of fat cells. She concluded that "Change our eating habits and we would live to develop a new pattern of life".

The next speaker was Dr. W. W. H. Rudd, surgeon, Central Hospital, and he covered a most interesting topic, that of "Haemorrhoidectomy performed in the Office". A reasonably simple procedure with the correct instruments and latex materials, along with specific training in the procedure techniques.

Dr. Rudd showed slides of other aspects of his specialty, namely, removal of peanal warts, virus induced warts, fissures, etc. Dr. Rudd enthusiastically demonstrated by slides the use of a new piece of equipment, the "Fibro - opticoolonoscope", a very flexible instrument controlled from its handle which is able to be inserted the entire length of the colon. A December issue of the Medical Journal in an article will be published on this dramatic advance in an aid to colon surgery.



Lunch was served compliments of the Scarborough radiologists — needless to say it consisted of far more than 3,000 calories and many resolutions of "diet tomorrow" were made.

A panel discussion followed lunch and had as moderator, Mrs. T. Chant, the panel members Dr. R. A. Laforest, chief of pediatrics, Scarborough General Hospital: Dr. R. N. Hodd, obstetrician and gynecologist, Scarborough General Hospital; and Dr. Linda Rapson, general practitioner, Toronto East General. Many questions were given to the panel and answered in a capable and often amusing manner.

The meeting adjourned at 3.45 p.m. with a reminder to attend the 9th annual clinic day in 1972.

NOTE: In the case of a resident without funds the Department of Social & Family Services will pay $11.00 per day towards their maintenance in a licensed Nursing Home.

Ann Landers

Woman Is Sick of Husband and His Relatives

Dear Ann Landers: "Dynamite Lil" sounds as if she has met my husband. I would welcome a visit from her. I would be happy to tell her what to expect from this "cultured, exciting man." I wish someone had told me.

He does not eat with his family because I have refused to bring meals on a tray in front of the TV, to his bed, or to the garage if he happens to be working on the car.

I may be a born hag but I'm not a slob. Although I haven't bought a stitch of clothes in six years I sew well and I always look presentable. He's right, however, when he says I have turned my back on his family. I should have done so earlier—before his brother borrowed my car and smashed it up, before his sister "borrowed" our home to give a party. Our silverware was stolen, the rugs were ruined and cigarettes were burned on our grand piano.)

So, Lil, please keep trying to pin him down. I'd gladly give him a divorce so he could marry you. Call it even. And I'm sick of the bum.—Also Sick

Dear Also: If Lil calls, let me know. After all, remember I brought you together.

Dear Ann Landers: Customs DO change, and I hope you will print this letter and help change an age-old custom—arranging wedding gifts personally to the church or to the reception.

This is what usually happens: The well-meaning guest must hand the wedding gift to a relative because the bride is busy in the receiving line. After the reception or dinner the bride and groom leave for the honeymoon and the gift is placed in the custody of the bride's mother. (There was no time to open it.) The bride's mother must then take the gift home and give it to the couple when they return. When the bride and groom come back from the honeymoon there are a hundred things to do. The bride's mother has to bring the gifts from her place to the bride's.

So please, Ann, tell your readers to send gifts to the bride before the wedding. It's much easier.—Sacramento Reader

Dear Sac: Your letter makes a lot of sense. I hope it makes a dent.

Dear Ann Landers: Since bicycling has become so popular I thought I should write a letter and tell you a couple of things the average cyclist does not know—and it could kill him.

This may sound ridiculously elementary, but it's shocking how many cyclists don't realize they should ride WITH the traffic, and not against it in the opposite direction. The motorist who sees an object coming toward him will automatically swerve and he might hit an oncoming car.

Another problem is the driver who honks his horn at a cyclist who is ahead of him. It can be frightening. It can also cause the cyclist to turn around to see who or what is behind him and he might hit a patch of sand, or a hole.

If I prevented just one accident by writing this letter, it was worth the time and effort. Thank you.—Connecticut Wheels

Dear Wheels: Thanks for taking the time. It WAS worth it.

Successful Living

Hid Her True Feelings

By DORIS CLARK

Two women in their 50s have been living together. Because Joan seemed constantly annoyed at Dorothy, and kept telling her what to do, Dorothy decided she wasn't wanted any longer and cleverly made plans to move into a seniors' apartment by herself.

She was successful in her application for the apartment but when she broke the news to Joan, all hell broke loose. Joan was at first angry, then broken hearted. It came out that she was completely devoted to Dorothy, loved her company, was lonesome when she was not around. And she begged Dorothy to reconsider.

Dorothy softened and stayed. She felt considerably better about her relationship once she knew she was loved and needed.

Why don't we say the nice things we are thinking about the people we live with?

Dear Doris: How have others dealt with and conquered the dreadful empty and lost feeling widowhood brings?

I am 52 and have been a widow for three years. I am so lonely I feel life is not worth living. Please do not misunderstand me when I say that normally I am very young at heart. I love to dance, travel and generally enjoy life, so I could not find solace in church groups or social clubs, because of my nature being as it is, and I do not think I am the "butterfly" type.

I hold quite a responsible job; after that I have nothing. Maybe others could tell me how to get through and adjust. — Bear With Me

Dear Bear: If you don't like groups, try making one good friend, preferably another woman whose need is like yours. Do something for her, like preparing a tasty meal, and discover your interests in common. Herein lies sanity and a bright future — finding a person or persons who need what you have to give, and giving it.

Of course, you are going to have to go where people are in order to meet and cultivate a pal. Can you suggest a better location than clubs or church groups? Volunteer work maybe? Or ... ?

Getting started takes fortitude and self-forgetfulness. Any widows like to help, with their suggestions?

Dear Doris: Very belatedly I write to express the appreciation of Al-Anon members for your mention of Al-Anon as a source of comfort and understanding to "In Rebellion".

Our only wish is to let people know we are here when they need help. — Lorraine

Dear Lorraine: You are welcome. Your work and that of the other A.A. organizations in Canada give moral courage and precious added insight to victims of alcoholism power to you!

GOLDEN TREASURE

'Nature's first green is gold. Her hardest hue to hold." — Frrost.

Today let fantasy hold sway! For from our window, a tree of gold leaves stands alone midst a host of bare-branched trees. Soon, it too, shall stand bare, for "nothing gold can stay," says the poet Robert Frost, where nature's concerned.

As Autumn's last month, thus inheriting her gold, note how November squanders gold on sunrises, on sunsets, on even entire days. On poplar trees that turn into stately golden pillars. On a row of splendid Aspen trees, transformed into a shimmering screen of golden coins. Or perhaps the golden strings of an Autumn harp.

The willow trees gracefully nod their golden plumes of leaves, while gold flower rosettes cluster underfoot.

Machine cob-shelled corn glitters; a steam of golden pebbles pouring into trucks for the elevator or mill.

Gold sifts through his fingers, spilling onto the sedges and grasses of low lying land and fields, as gold dust.

November does all in his power to present a setting for Autumn, poet of the seasons. Then suddenly, he changes it as if to portray the transience of beautiful things, "nothing gold can stay". It is spent. It fades. It disappears.

But — is it lost?

"Not at all." says Fantasy "just transferred," suggesting November magically supplies each street light and window pane's golden glow from his hidden gold, as a nightly gift to the year. He summons the wind and dark clouds to convey the rest of the gold to a secret vault, where Winter's icy hand secures the lock. Autumn alone has the key — which she uses in due time.

November's gold is hidden but never lost.

Then, the thought persists: Does the substance of gold disappear, as does its color or hue? If hidden, is it ever found — or is it permanently lost?

The question is posed, while travelling vicariously in a cherished armchair (as evenings lengthen with November's glowing gift), we read in Robin Bryans' Madeira:

Pearl of the Atlantic (published by Robert Hale, Ltd., London, which is in the Corby Library) that Captain Kidd's golden treasure supposedly, lies out on the Salvagens Islands, "those small uninhabited islands, home of goats and wild flowers," that help make up the Madeiran archipelago. Looted from churches of Peru some two million pounds of gold were buried here, in true pirate style, when his ship was wrecked.

"None is immune to tales of buried treasure," says Mr. Bryans, for when the last surviving eyewitness number told his story to a British sailor, the news only spread and reached the Admiralty's and Government's ear. An attempt to find the gold was made in 1830 — to no avail, though the tradition was passed throughout the entire century.

Thus to this day lies golden millions of treasure, somewhere midst the floral wealth of the islands, not merely hidden — but definitely, so far, lost.

ST. MICHAEL'S CWL

The regular monthly meeting of St. Michael's CWL was held on November 8 in the parish rectory meeting room.

Mrs. Joseph Farrell presided over the meeting and heard reports from the various convenors.

Mrs. Leonard Farrell as welfare convenor gave a detailed account of the work she accomplished during the past month.

A letter was read from the Mental Health and it was decided that a donation of $15 would be given to the organization this year.

Five of the members attended a regional meeting in Marmora on November 7. Each council was asked to send a resolution to the Diocesan Council by February.

In December there will be a Christmas party in place of the monthly meeting. The members will exchange gifts.

When the business part of the meeting was over, Mrs. E. B. Lally introduced the guest speaker of the evening Mr. Don Templeman. His topic was "Women and the Law" which was most interesting and enlightening. After his talk Mr. Templeman answered several questions posed by the members. Mrs. J. Sheridan thanked the speaker. Refreshments were then served.

SENIOR CITIZEN'S CLUB

Mrs. Mathew Adams, president, conducted the first meeting of the month of the Belleville Senior Citizen's Club with a good number in attendance. At the beginning of the meeting was Mrs. Lulu Johns.

Following opening procedures new members were welcomed and a report on sick members remembered by the club was given by Mrs. Adams.

A short business meeting was conducted.

Mrs. Bedell took charge for the entertainment which consisted of a number of choruses sung by the choir, which had sung at the Cobourg picnic. Readings were given by Mrs. Lulu Longhurst and Mrs. Hattie Travies. Pictures of the various trips taken by the club during the summer were shown by Lee Ketcheson.

Bingo was enjoyed by all and the draw was won by Jean Hagerman.

Lunch was served by members of the executive assisted

A Hit in Any Language

Comedian Danny Kaye, a master of pantomime, woos his youthful admirers as he adjusts a pointed cap presented to him upon his arrival at airport in the Finnish capital Friday. Danny has been on a global tour as a voluntary "ambassador" of UNICEF (United Nations Children's Fund).

Mon Oncle Antoine Premiere Reviews Attract Multitudes

TORONTO (CP) — It started off as just another routine show night at the small Cinecity theatre Friday.

Only about half the theatre's 320 seats were filled for the 6 o'clock show, which was in fact the world premiere presentation of the made-in-Quebec film, Mon Oncle Antoine, multi-winner in this year's Canadian Film Awards.

But by the start of the second of the opening night hoopla that crowd exceeding the theatre's capacity was lined up outside.

It was a fitting tribute to a beautifully simple, truly Canadian film that wasn't given any of the opening-night hoopla but garnished the world premiere the same night of the pseudo-Canadian film Face-Off, just a few blocks away.

But if Mon Oncle Antoine, a production of the French-Canadian division of the National Film Board of Canada, didn't have the promotional send-off, it did get a pre-showing raves from all Toronto newspaper critics Friday.

Clyde Gilmour of The Star called it "the best Canadian feature-length movie ever made" and "one of the finest released anywhere in the world in 1971."

Martin Knelman of The Globe and Mail also saluted it as "the best Canadian movie ever made" and "one that's truly worth celebrating."

George Anthony, critic for the daily tabloid, The Sun, said one scene alone in the film "is worth the price of admission all by itself."

He was referring to a scene in which the bliss of an asbestos mine rides through the town dependent on the mine for its livelihood, tossing cheap Christmas stockings into sidewalk slush for his employees' children.

The movie, although shelved from public presentation for eight months after its completion, is no newcomer to critical success.

A panel of international judges at last month's Canadian Film Awards gave it eight awards: Best feature film; best director (Claude Jutra); best actor (Jean Ducegge in the title role); best supporting actress, (Olivette Thibault) ;best screenplay (Clement" Perron, who drew on his own experiences as a boy in rural Quebec of the 1940s); best original music score (Jean Cousineau); best cinematography and best sound.

TV Actors Enjoy Features

NEW YORK (AP) — By April and the end of the current television season, the three major networks will have broadcast almost 80 new, made-for TV filmed features which run for 90 minutes or two hours.

When a regularly-employed TV series performer appears in one he is likely to be moonlighting for fun and acting extra.

It will be that kind of night for Canadian-born Lorne Greene tonight when he plays a bouncy, unhappy lettuce farmer trapped in a marriage with a dominating woman in an adaptation of a John Steinbeck story, The Harness, one of NBC's World Premiere features.

"I certainly enjoyed doing it and I am now the best tractor driver among the actors in Hollywood after shooting it in Salinas," Greene boasted with a grin.

Whatever his driving skills, it is a big switch in image for the actor who for 13 seasons has played that wise, gray rancher of the Old West, Ben Cartwright.

All through the Bonanza years, Greene has made sporadic efforts to avoid being typed—difficult if not impossible since he rides his quarter-horse on camera every Sunday night and extracurricular appearances are possible only infrequently.

Before made-for TV shows, Lorne annually hung up his backskins and buttoned on a tuxedo to become host for the finals of a beauty contest. He occasionally cut a record album—Western ballads mostly. His annual U.S. Thanksgiving Day stint as co-host for NBC's coverage of a department store parade in New York is just a promotional spin-off of his regular job.

"This will be my second TV movie," the millionaire actor said. "I really enjoy these extra things. I did a nightclub act in Vegas one year, too. I've never been unhappy with Bonanza, but I believe that a man must continually test himself and meet new challenges."

In New York during a trip around the Un... ging the TV feature, Greene said that when he left his native Ottawa in 1953, he planned to "act for 10 years and then become a producer." Almost 19 years later, his sights have changed.

"When Bonanza ends, I will go to a season of Shakespeare, maybe in Canada or maybe in Minneapolis," he said. "Then I would like to create a definitive motion picture. And then I'd like to do a Broadway musical."

Long-term Comedian's Marriage on the Rocks

INDIO, Calif. (AP)— Comedian Red Skelton has filed for divorce from the wife to whom he once said he had written a daily love letter for more than 20 years.

He didn't truthfully that everyone should do the same, even if it's no more than saying "I love you" to someone," the twice-married Skelton once told an interviewer. "How does the other person know what keeps that love alive?

"That way there can be no unhappiness and divorce court. I had a divorce, and I didn't like it."

In addition to love letters, Skelton and his wife said they gave each other valentines on each of the first 14 days of February and Christmas gifts on each of the first 25 days of December.

Skelton filed Thursday in Superior Court a petition for dissolution of his 26-year marriage to the former Georgia Maureen Davis.

The petition says Skelton, 58, and his wife separated Aug. 4. Under California law she has 30 days in which to contest the divorce. Neither was immediately available for comment.

The Skeltons had a son, Richard, who died at 9 in 1958 of leukemia. A daughter, Valentina, made Red a grandfather by giving birth to a daughter in August, 1970. Valentina, now 24, is the wife of Carlos Alonso, 31, a television studio employee.

LONDON (Reuter) — Brigitte Bardot is to renew her movie partnership with the director who made her famous, her first husband Roger Vadim, newspaper reports say.

The London Evening Standard says Vadim is to cast her as a female Don Juan in a movie to be made in London early next year.

"For a film by Bardot and me there will be no problem finding the money," The Standard quotes Vadim as saying in an interview.

Vadim, who launched Miss Bardot's career in the 1950s with And God Created Woman, said they had remained good friends despite their divorce.

Loyalist Students Do Their "Thing"

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

"Crushed" does not completely describe the emotions of one Loyalist co-ed student interviewed yesterday, following their first practice game of "Monster Ball".

"There I was running along with the rest of the gang when you know, playing along, minding my own business so to speak . . . when the thing turned on me."

The "thing" he referred to was a six foot tall, helium-filled ball, able to leap tall players in a single bound. A special rubber bladder covered in canvas, provides a tough competitor for 4-man players.

Rescued by teammates, the player incoherently recalled the six foot thing suddenly rolling down on his "unsuspecting body".

Led from the field, he was murmuring something about seeing his dentist for a nose job, or other such commercials.

Even the referee — Mike Dollack — got while the getting was good. He wasn't sticking around for a similar fate and took to his heels rather than be bowled over.

Inherited, for a $25 fee and $200 deposit, from Humber Community College, the giant ball is expected to form the basis for a popular college sport in Ontario. If good for nothing else, it will afford players a chance to blow off steam and chase their favorite spectators.

This latter part of the sport, all listed in the hand-book, generally follows a carefully manoeuvred chase down the sidelines. The ball is then rolled into quickly moving fans. As the ball hit the crowd, the last sight visible to onlookers was David Blakely, complete in full . . length Raccoon fur coat, arms and legs flying in all directions as he was bowled over.

No true score was kept, with survival outweighing success as the main objective. Players will have a chance to compete on a more serious vein tonight as the college hosts their first home match. One of the officials, Charlie Bevson, who [illegible] the game hoisting the heavy ball for the "next . . .

tercolligiate games are next on the list.

By that time, the college hope to have purchased their own monster ball. In all, close to a hundred college students gathered on the Loyalist athletic field for the special en masse mash. Team numbers were no object . . . anybody could play in.

According to most players, the winners were those who could actually walk off the field. There were more than a few barked elbows and knees in the bunch.

Beating A Hasty

Loyalist College "Monster Ball" referee Mike Dollack beats a hasty retreat in the wake of a six foot, canvas covered, helium-filled ball on the college playing field yesterday. More than one player and an unsuspecting spectator or two fell in the path of the barrelling sphere. Was Mike wearing his helmet for show. "You gotta be kidding," was his cheerful reply.

Lancers Ice Victory

KINGSTON (Special) — Two can do the job better than one, even when it comes to hockey.

If that theory doesn't necessarily apply, you'd never be able to prove it by Ron Cassidy and Bryan Helmer. The twosome combined to turn aside 38 shots as they split the netminding duties for Loyalist College as the Lancers opened their Ontario College Athletic Association hockey schedule by dumping St. Lawrence College of Kingston 4-3.

The Belleville school took a 4-1 lead early in the third period and then withheld a late St. Lawrence surge for the win.

Denny Tonkins, Ross Howe Blakely and Reed Mallory counted the Loyalist goals, while Dave Reily had two for St. Lawrence.

The basketball Lancers found the going a lot tougher as they dropped a 141-40 decision to the big Blue. Eight St. Lawrence players hit double figures in the rout, paced by Mike Dowling's 21 points.

Galt forward Peter Darcey bangs the puck past Steve Rexe to count one of the half-dozen tallies managed by his team in a 6-3 OHA Senior A win over the Belleville Quintes last night. A third period sag proved costly to the Quintes as the Hornets rapped in three goals in the final period to perpetuate a four-game Belleville losing streak.

Fairways Look For Goods

The Belleville Fairways will be hoping to deliver the goods in more ways than one this Sunday.

In addition to a victory over the Gananoque G-Men, the local Junior B's are hoping to collect an impressive display of canned goods as part of the United Community affairs Christmas program.

Manager Jim Matthews has agreed to grant free admission to every child bringing a tin of foodstuffs to the Sunday night encounter, to be turned over to the Salvation Army for distribution among needy families.

What coach Moe Hunter would like to see delivered is a victory by his team over Gananoque. The Fairways turned in a strong showing last week against Oshawa but were still handed their fifth defeat in seven Eastern Ontario Junior B encounters this season.

A win over the fledgling G-Men, who are as yet winless this season, could help get the Fairways back on track. Game time is slated for 7.30 p.m.

Keech Counts Goal for Braves

Ottawa Rangers' moved into first place Friday night in the Central Junior Hockey League with a 6-3 win over Kingsville Braves as Smiths Falls Bears and Pembroke Lumber Kings battled to a 4-4 tie.

Bill Fox led Ottawa scorers with three goals while John Harper and Brian Fagan scored each. Steve Keech and Joe Mulcahy scored for Brockville on their home ice.

In Smiths Falls, Pembroke's Gale Linton scored with only three seconds remaining in regular play to send the game into overtime. Both teams scored once in the 10-minute overtime period.

Jack Jones scored three goals for Pembroke while Linton potted two and Terry Woermke picked up three.

Steve Hull and Don Robertson each scored once for Smiths Falls. Other Smiths Falls scorers were Larry McIntosh and Shawn Howard.

Finished Galt Scoring Attack Writes 6-3 Finish For Quintes

Finish spelled the end for the Belleville Quintes last night as they dropped a 6-3 OHA Senior A decision to the Galt Hornets.

Despite the fact that the Quintes were able to hold a two-shot territorial edge over the Hornets in the first two periods, the defending Allen Cup Champions' ability to finish off plays allowed them to carry a 3-2 lead into the final frame.

From that point, it was a case of the proverbial "big finish" as the Hornets slammed 19 shots at Steve Rexe, while Belleville was only able to manage eight shots on goal for the final 20 minutes.

Loose defensive play by the locals proved fatal against the sharpshooting Hornets. The bulk of the winners' six goal effort came when they were allowed to break in unmolested on Rexe, who faced a total of 39 shots throughout the contest. Sonny Pennington, with whom the Belleville goalie has been waging a battle for top average this season, faced 30 drives in the Galt net.

The Hornets took advantage of their scoring opportunities to emerge with a 2-0 lead at the end of the first period. Their second marker, by Ron Smith proved to be the prettiest scoring play of the night

Being in the wrong place at the right time helped Al Ferguson get the home team back into contention in the middle frame. The Belleville right winger picked up a loose puck on his opposite wing and walked in to beat Pennington with a high shot for the power play tally.

No Skating for Six Weeks

Boston Bruins defenceman Don Awrey of Kitchener, Ontario, will have plenty of time to read as he rests in Massachusetts General Hospital after repairs to a spiral fracture of his right ankle Monday. Awrey suffered the injury in the Bruins-Montreal Canadiens game in Boston Sunday. He will wear a cast for six weeks and will be sidelined for eight weeks. (AP Wirephoto).

'Purple People Eaters' Face Tough Packer Running Tandem

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Minnesota's defence, which has carried the Vikings to the top of the National Football Conference's Central Division despite a lethargic offence, will be tested against the running tandem of Donny Anderson and John Brockington of Green Bay Packers Sunday.

The Vikings, 6-2, are host to the Packers, 3-4-1, in a battle of Central Division teams in the National Football League.

The Vikings hit a cold spell last week against San Francisco 49ers and mustered only three field goals in losing 13-9.

Green Bay, bolstered by the running of Anderson and Brockington, upset Chicago Bears 17-14.

In other NFL contests Sunday, Pittsburgh Steelers will be at Miami Dolphins, Cleveland Browns at Kansas City Chiefs, Los Angeles Rams at Detroit Lions, Washington Redskins at Chicago Bears, New Orleans Saints at San Francisco, New York Giants at Atlanta Falcons, Baltimore Colts at New York Jets, Houston Oilers at Oklahoma Raiders, Buffalo Bills at New England Patriots, Cincinnti Bengals at Denver Broncos and Philadelphia Eagles at Dallas Cowboys. San Diego Chargers are host to St. Louis Cardinals Monday night.

The Vikings are 12 in total offence in the 13-team NFC, 11th in passing and 10th in rushing. However, Minnesota ranks second in defence behind Washington.

The Packers may be without injured defensive tackles Bob Brown and Mike McCoy.

In the NFC West Division, leading San Franc sco, 6-2, will battle New Orleans, 2-4-2, led by quarterback Archie Manning.

Signal-caller Mike Phips will pilot Cleveland, 4-4i against Kansas City, 5-2-1.

Quarterback Terry Bradshaw will call the signals for Pittsburgh, 4-4, against Miami, which will be missing injured running back Jim Kiick.

Los Angeles, 4-3, and tied with Atlanta for second behind San Francisco in the NFC West, is host to Detroit, 2-7-1.

New York Jets will have defenders Gerry Philbin, Al Atkinson and Earle Thomas back from the injured list against Baltimore, 6-2.

New York Giants, 3-3, probably will start without running backs Ron Johnson and Tucker Frederickson when they clash with Atlanta and quarterback Dick Shiner. Shiner probably will start against his old teammates although Bob Berry appears ready for action after three weeks on the sidelines with a pulled hamstring muscle.

Stargell Under Knife

VANCOUVER (CP) — Medical Investment Corp. (Medicor), majority shareholder of Vancouver Canucks, owners of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, dropped its request Friday for a receiver to be appointed in a dispute with four minority shareholders.

Medicor had launched legal action against Cyrus Dale Maclean, Coleman E. Ball, Frank McMahon and G. Maxwell Bell, alleging the four had failed to deliver shares in capital stock of the Canucks.

In Supreme Court Friday, Medicor withdrew its motion for a receiver against Mr. Hall and Mr. Maclean and dismissed its motion against Mr. Bell and Mr. McMahon by consent.

FUKUOKA, Japan, (AP) — Baltimore Orioles and a Japanese all-star team battled to a 9-9 tie today in a game called after 10 innings.

The Orioles and the Japanese team, made up of players from Tokyo Yomiuri Giants and Nishitetsu Lions, blasted three home runs each.

It was the fourth tie game the Orioles have played with Japanese opponents on their 18 game post-season tour of Japan. The Orioles have 10 victories against one defeat.

Pet Dobson started for the Orioles and was relieved by Tom Dukes in the fifth. Manager Earl Weaver also used Eddie Watt and Dick Hall.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Willie Stargell, slugging Pittsburgh Pirate left fielder, underwent surgery on his left knee Friday and the team surgeon said he couldn't believe the condition of Stargell's knee.

"The cartilage was not only torn but mangled," said Dr. Albert Ferguson, who performed the operation.

"I'm surprised he was as successful last season as he was. His knee should be much tougher next year."

Gene Alley, Pittsburgh shortstop, underwent a similar operation Monday. He was to leave hospital today.

Phoenix Wins NBA Decisions Over Celtics

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Phoenix Suns won the decision and the game too.

With commissioner Walter Kennedy and the NBA board of directors in attendance, the Suns whipped Boston Celtics 128-119 in their National Basketball Association game Friday night at Phoenix.

The fun began after the Suns had opened a 19-point lead. Tom Heinsohn, Boston coach, was ejected after a second technical foul was called on him.

Red Auerbach, general manager of the Celtics, got into the act when he was warned by the referee to "keep his comments to himself."

Don Chaney of the Celtics and Dick van Arsdale of the Suns came to blows, but were not ejected. Jo Jo White of Boston and John Wetzel of the Suns engaged in another scrap. Both were banished.

The Suns were led by Connie Hawkins and Clem Haskins. Hawkins got 33 points, Haskins 31.

Milwaukee Bucks beat Houston Rockets 111-102, Philadelphia 76ers overcame Detroit Pistons 115-101, Atlanta Hawks shaded Golden State Warriors 106-104, Los Angeles Lakers took Seattle Supersonics 115-107 and Cleveland Cavaliers edged Portland Bucks 105-104 in the other NBA games Friday.

In the American Basketball Association, Virginia downed New Yornia Nets 127-125 in overtime and Memphis defeated Dallas 107-103.

Kareem Jabbar led the champion Bucks to their sixth in a row and a 13-1 season record with 31 points, including a three-point play that put Milwaukee ahead for good at 79-78.

Jon McGlocklin helped with 19 points in the last quarter, including seven within 90 seconds.

Stu Lantz, with 26 points, paced the Rockets who took an early 10-point lead.

Playoff Series With Canadiens Pointed Minnesota Towards Top

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Minnesota North Stars' rise is prominence in the National Hockey League's West Division is no sudden turn of events for the 1967 expansion club.

Most observers saw the change coming in last year's Stanley Cup semi-final when the Minnesotans took Montreal Canadiens to an exciting six games. It was the first time one of the expansion teams had defeated an established team in post-season play.

General manager Wren Blair of Montreal Canadiens and coach Jack Gordon have the Stars in contention for division honors with Chicago Black Hawks, using a mixture of youth and experience.

The Stars could move in to a first-place tie with the Hawks tonight when they are at home to Montreal. The Canadiens also aspire to first place, in the East, and are just two points behind New York Rangers.

Ironically, it was Minnesota's playoff loss to Montreal last spring that set the hockey experts to thinking that Blair and Gordon were assembling a contender.

They haven't disappointed and hold a healthy six-point edge on third-place Pittsburgh Penguins who entertain the Los Angeles Kings in another game tonight.

The rest of the schedule has Vancouver Canucks at Toronto Maple Leafs, Buffalo Sabres in New York, Detroit Red Wings at Philadelphia Flyers and St. Louis Blues entertaining California Golden Seals.

In action Sunday, Montreal moves into Buffalo, Toronto is at Philadelphia, Vancouver continues its eastern swing in New York, Los Angeles visits Boston Bruins and Chicago entertains California.

LORNE WORSLEY

The newcomers have jelled under Gordon's prodding, and the surprising North Stars have been getting some added incentive from their goaltending tandem of Lorne (Gump) Worsley and Cesare Maniago.

Worsley has yet to lose this year and has a skimpy 1.00 goals-against average and the Minnesota goalies enjoy the best defensive record in the league.

Murray Oliver, washed up in Detroit, Boston and Toronto, is off to one of hisfastest starts, a bonus in that the slim Hamilton veteran has been better known for his checking ability.

Presdice, a 21-goal scorer with the Penguins a year ago, is providing Minnesota with the scoring they were looking for and has justried their gamble in acquiring the 30-year-old veteran.

Jack's Snacks Keep Player In Groove

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Gary Player's sub-par war with Jack Nicklaus in the $110,000 World Cup golf tournament may be settled by who makes the last visit to Barbara Nicklaus's refrigerator.

"Gary felt terrible Thursday night," said Nicklaus, "so he could barely choke down four bowls of fried chicken, a big salad and two pieces of cheesecake."

South Africa's golfing idol is Nicklaus's house guest for the tournament. Nicklaus and the PGA National Club and Barbara's grovery bill has skyrocketed.

Whatever Barbara is feeding them, it's working.

Player blazed to a five-under-par 67 Friday, seizing the World Cup individual lead and putting South Africa into a three-shot edge over the United States.

The Player-Harold Henning duo had a 278 total to 281 for Nicklaus and Lee Trevino. Player, who had an opening 69, has a 136 total. Nicklaus's rounds of 68-69 left him one stroke behind his guest.

Canada's entry of Wilf Limeburk and Moe Norman remained in contention with a 290 total after 36 holes. Winnipeg's Homenuik scored a 74 Friday for 146 while Norman, of Gilford, Ont., had a two-under 70 and 144.

Henning had a pair of 71s on the 7,086-yard course and Trevino rounded back from an opening day 73 for a 69 Friday.

While South Africa had a three-stroke lead on the U.S., it was another five shots back to England and New Zealand at 296. Romania, fast becoming a sentimental favorite, stood at 372. 95 shots off the pace with two rounds remaining.

Ti-Cats Could Continue With Latest Wrinkle

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats have a new wrinkle in their offence at Ottawa Rough Riders a week ago, and coach Al Dorow may come back with it against Toronto inthe Eastern Football Conference final starting here Sunday.

Speedster Dave Buchanan, a converted running back, has been from the flanker position in place of injured Lewis Porter and scored two touchdowns in Hamilton's 23-4 win over Ottawa.

With fullback Dick Wesolowski performing effectively in Buchanan's spot, Dorow may continue to go with the same offence against the Argonauts when the two-game, total-point EFC series opens at Ivor Wynne Stadium.

Game time is 2 p.m. EST and it will be carried nationally on CBC-TV with local blackouts in the Toronto-Hamilton area.

Dorow said Friday he won't name his designated import until game time, but indications are the extra import, who can be dressed but not play unless a another import leaves the game, will be Porter or lineman Bob Hudgens.

One weakness the Argos might exploit, especially with Joey Theismann's sprained ankle, will be the area in Hamilton's defensive secondary covered by Dave Fleming.

Fleming's forte is offence, where he led the Ticats in 1970. But when Paul McKay injured his ankle in the same workout that Porter was injured, Fleming was thrown into the breach and performed at a quietly effective level.

However, Argos have a more efficient attack than did the Riders and Toronto coach Leo Cahill can be expected to have Theismann exploit Fleming's inexperience.

The Argos, meanwhile, took an opportunity Friday to work in new footing on the artificial turf.

Toronto failed to win either of its games on mud and this season, despite running away from the rest of the eastern opposition in the final standings, and Cahill thought a change of shoes might be the answer.

After the workout, held in secret with security men prowling the outer perimeter of the field to keep any sleuthing Ticat fan away, Cahill endorsed the new boots.

"It was a good workout. . . We've made changes. The footwear is better than anything we used there before."

Sunday's game will mark the return of Toronto flanker Mike Eben whose knee injury, this year at least, was in some doubt a month ago.

The former University of Toronto ace suffered a bruised lung and other injuries in Argo's 32-5 win over Montreal Alouettes, the game in which Toronto clinched first place, their first title in 11 years.

Western Faces Unbeaten Huskies

HALIFAX (CP) — Saint Mary's Huskies put their undefeated record on the line when they meet University of Western Ontario Mustangs in the Atlantic Bowl today, with the winner advancing to next week's Canadian intercollegiate football final.

The Huskies, who were undefeated in six Bluenose Conference games while rolling up 246 points, will be playing on their home field against the Mustangs, who were 5-3 in the Ontario University Athletic Association.

A "brace" to a few inches of snow was predicted for today.

The winner goes to Toronto next Saturday to play the winner of Sunday's contest between Montreal Universities Gaiters and University of Alberta Golden Bears.

Western scored 169 regular-season points while allowing 80. Coach Al Ulmer's Huskies limited opponents to 87 points.

"We play a more wide open game," Ulmer maintained. "We feel that we can score on any team in the country."

Jolin Mellors, former football coach at Western and now athletic director, thinks the Mustangs are a "rough, hard-hitting club that always comes up with its best effort when it counts."

Coach Frank Cosentino's Mustangs rely on backs Bruce Macnaughton, Ken Kerr, Fred Quigley and Bud Wilson for the main offensive attack. Against University of Ottawa Gee Gees last week, Western rolled up 252 yards on the ground and only nine yards passing.

Flanker Terry Harvey was the leading receiver in the OUAA's Ontario Division, pulling down 28 passes, including five for touchdowns, Joe Fabiani calls signals for the Ontario squad at quarterback.

Quarterback Bill Robinson leads the hometown Huskies. He connected on 60 of 114 pass attempts including 19 touchdowns, a league record.

Split-end Ken Clark is his favorite receiver. Clark, who won the conference scoring championship with 70 points, caught 11 touchdown passes. Flanker Conrad Kozak is another key target for quarterback Robinson.

The rushing attack is powered by fullback Stan Daley with ample help from Ralph Pochynsky and Angelo Santucci.

Saint Mary's officials said 5,000 tickets had been sold by Friday for the game, which has been plagued by poor weather and small crowds in recent years. Last year's game lost $4,700 and unless the financial picture improves this year, it could be the last Atlantic Bowl.

Bear Backs Best

EDMONTON (CP) — University of Alberta football coaches say their team can beat Bishop's University Gaiters with a strong offence in the Western College Bowl Sunday.

And the Golden Bears, Western college champions, have quarterbacks Joe Petrone and Don Tallas and slotback Mel Smith are key men on the club.

Head coach Jim Donley's staff say the Gaiters would have finished the season with a 6-2 won-lost record, play in a tougher conference than the Gaiters who finished 6-0 in the Quebec Universities Athletic Association.

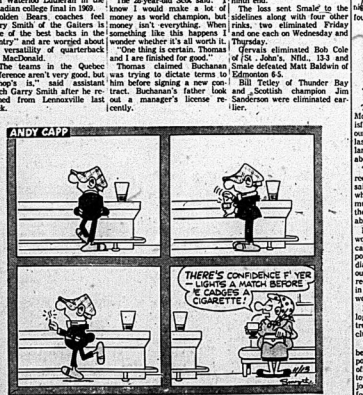
Gaiters "have a good offence and what may be a weak defence", said Donley. "But if their offence keeps the ball their defence doesn't have to be that good."

The defence will have to come up with a top-notch performance to stop the powerful Golden Bears' attack.

"I'd like to think our backs are the best in Canada," said Donley. "Our depth should give us some advantage."

SET RECORD

Petrone, who tried out with Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League as a place kicker and also was drafted by Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian league, was the Western college scoring title with a record 69 points. He kicked 11 field goals, 23 converts and seven singles and scored a touchdown.



Tallas, a better passer than Petrone but not as good a runner, also tried out with Edmonton. Eskimo coaches rate him as a superior athlete.

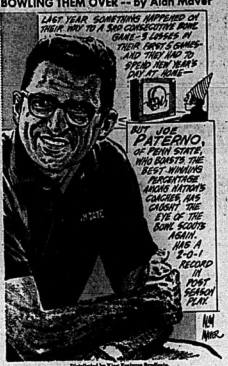
Smith was voted most valuable player in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association this year. He ranked third in the scoring race with 36 points on six touchdowns. The last pre-season cut by the Eskimos, he can catch the ball and runs with the power of a fullback.

Two startinh acks John Skinner and Bob McGregor played with Waterloo Lutheran in the Canadian college final in 1969.

Golden Bears coaches feel Larry Smith of the Gaiters is "one of the best backs in the country" and are worried about the versatility of quarterback Bill MacDonald.

"The teams in the Quebec conference aren't very good, but Bishop's is," said assistant coach Garry Smith after he returned from Lennoxville last week.

Buchanan May Quit



LONDON (AP) — Ken Buchanan, recognized by the World Boxing Association as world lightweight champion, said today he may quit the ring because of a quarrel with his manager Eddie Thomas.

The 26-year-old Scot said: "I know I would make a lot of money as world champion, but money isn't everything. When something like this happens I wonder whether it's all worth it.

"One thing is certain, Thomas and I are finished for good."

Thomas claimed Buchanan was trying to dictate terms to him before signing a new contract. Buchanan's father took out a manager's license recently.

BOWLING THEM OVER -- by Alan Mayer

Canadian Riders Third at Royal

TORONTO (CP) — The United States equestrian team emerged from the first day of jumping at the Royal Winter Fair with a slim lead on the strength of Carole Hofmann's win in the Hofmann's International Stakes Friday night.

Miss Hofmann, riding Salem, and Frank Chapot emerged from a jumpoff with the only two flawless rides with the 26-year-old Miss Hofmann claiming first with a time of 33.2 seconds, 1.2 seconds faster than Chapot on Good Twist.

Barbara Simpson of Calgary gave Canada a third-place finish aboard Magnor. Her time of 32.8 was the fastest of the jumpoff, but too sharp a turn at the second jump on the shortened course caused Magnor to topple the top bar for a costly four faults.

The U.S. riders held a slim 36.25 lead after the first day's jumping, but Canadian Moffat Dunlap of Newmarket, Ont., was the individual leader, 13-12 over Chapot, after winning the International Welcome Stakes in the afternoon aboard Grand Nouvel and capturing the fourth-place ribbon with Inspid.

Only half the 12 riders in the evening show qualified for the jumpoff. In addition to the three Americans, Neal Shapiro of the U.S., Torchy Millar of Montreal and Andres Baxter of Argentina survived the first jumps.

"It's going to be a tough fight," said Miss Hofmann of North Branch, N.J. "The Canadians are always a very strong team and the Argentinians get cranked up into a much better team than was in New York."

Each of the three countries competing in the three-day jumping show at the Royal was in the ribbon standings Friday night with Shapiro finishing fourth on Nivarna. Millar fifth and Baxter, riding Palbuco, sixth.

Jim Day of Hornby, Ont., rode Sundancer to a seventh-place tie with Joe Pargis of the U.S., on San Lucas, Dunlap on Intrepid, and Jorge Llambi of Argentina on Maxim.

Argentines Argentino Molineuvo and Sarlos Marcelli completed the list of 12 riders.

Canada held a commanding 12-point lead after the Welcome Stakes with Dunlap and Chapot finishing 1-2 in the warm-up event. Millar rode Happy Fellow to third with Day's Sundancer in fifth.

Fink Rink Flying

WINNIPEG (CP) — Danny Fink's Winnipeg rink clinched a berth in the finals of the Canada 1971-72 championship curling series Friday night defeating Bob Pickering of Milestone, Sask., 6-3 for the third win without a loss.

The loss for the Pickering foursome ,its first after five victories, means the rink will have to play a showdown match with Ilec Gervais of St. Albert, Alta., today to decide an opponent for Fink in the final later in the day.

The Gervais rink stayed alive in the eight-rink double-knockout competition do.wning Kevin Smale's Prince George, B.C., rink 9-4.

Fink, a former schoolboy champion who took over Don Duiguid's 1971 world championship rink, broke a 2-2 tie with Pickering, scoring two on the seventh and two more on the ninth end.

The loss sent Smale to the sidelines along with four other rinks, two eliminated Friday and one each on Wednesday and Thursday.

Gervais eliminated Bob Cole of St . John's, Nfld., 13-3 and Smale defeated Matt Baldwin of Edmonton 6-5.

Bill Tetley of Thunder Bay and Scottish champion Jim Sanderson were eliminated earlier.

Happy Landing

TORONTO (CP) — John McArthur of Toronto is not satisfied with the 42-pound, six-ounce muskellunge he landed last weekend off Thompson Island, north of Honey Harbor, about 90 miles north of here.

"I'll nail down the world record before they bury me," said the 30-year-old McArthur who already has a 44½-pound muskie to his credit, caught in the same area of Georgian Bay about five years ago.

He's got a long way to go. The world record for a muskie caught by rod and reel is 69 pounds, 15 ounces and the Canadian record is 51 pounds, nine ounces. The largest ever, ever recorded, commercially netted in Michigan 54 years ago, weighed 110 pounds.

McArthur estimated he has logged 100 hours for each of his trophy catches, which also include a 25-pounder.

Until frozen up, McArthur will be out in Georgian Bay, 25-pound monofilament streamings off his Penn star-drag reel and towing a 13-inch Creek Chub jointed pikie minnow, searching for the record-breaker.

Western CFL Opponents Look In Playoff Mirror

CALGARY (CP) — Playing Saskatchewan Roughriders is a lot like playing yourself, says quarterback Jerry Keeling of Calgary Stampeders.

"They run the same offence as we do. We have the same numbering system and the same audible system."

But the veteran Keeling expects the similarities to present no difficulties when the teams meet at Calgary's McMahon Stadium this afternoon in the first of the best-of-three Western Football Conference final.

Although the Roughriders will understand the calls made at the Calgary line, Keeling says he'll throw an the occasional false audible.

"That way the Saskatchewan defence "can't afford to cheat; they never know for sure."

The Stampeders use only five to 10 audibles in a game and changing the system is not worth the trouble.

"Sometimes you foul up your own players rather than the other team."

Some of these calls would come with a Roughrider blitz imminent although Saskatchewan does not blitz often and when it does, it disguises the move well.

"If you don't see it coming, you're in trouble. "If you see it coming, you can catch them in man-to-man where you can hit them long."

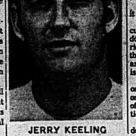
In passing, league statistics show Saskatchewan has given up more yards than any other team.

But this is misleading, says Keeling.

Most of those yards are between the 25-yard lines and once a team gets close to the Roughrider goal the ground is a lot tougher to cover.

Keeling, who spent eight years as defensive halfback and backup quarterback before taking over the first-string job in 1969, also has a healthy respect for the Saskatchewan defensive line and middle linebacker Wally Gabler.

"You don't run too much up the middle."



The Saskatchewan line also gives a good pass rush but Calgary quarterback coverholds down out well, although both make the odd mistake.

"If we were all perfect, it wouldn't be very interesting."

The players might even be excused if they show a little boredom in taking on the Roughriders. This is the fifth year they've met in the WFC final and Keeling says the opposition is beginning to look familiar.

Each year there has been only minor personal changes on both teams and the patterns of play have only minor variations.

And looking at the films "you don't pick up much any more."

Niagara Falls Fly to Second

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wayne Chrysler came through in the pinch for Niagara Falls Flyers Friday night, scoring his second goal of the final period and 24 seconds left to give the Flyers a 4-4 tie with Kitchener Rangers in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The deadlock lifted the Flyers into second place in the league with 21 points, five behind idle Oshawa Generals. It also raised Kitchener to a third-place 20-point tie with Peterborough Petes, who were idle.

In other games, Toronto Marlboros scored seven goals in the first period and went on to defeat last-place Montreal Junior Canadiens 11-6 and London Knights slammed in four second-period goals to beat St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-1.

Other Flyers goals at Niagara Falls were scored by Don Lever, his 20th, and Morris Titanic. Kitchener marksmen were Bill Barber, Gerry Byers, Chuck Blair and Al Blanchard. Three sensational saves in the final minute of play by Kitchener goalie Glen Sogoski saved the tie for the Rangers.

Marlboros scored six sixth-place Marlboros at Toronto with three goals. Two apiece were scored by George Ferguson, John Harris and Fred Prosser. Single goals were by Dave Gardner and Bill Harris.

Scott MacPhail counted two for Montreal with single goals coming from Dave Nowlan, Fireman Royer, Andrew Kane and Jean Thiewait.

Two of the goals at London are scored with the Hawks two men short. Reg Thomas, Dennis McCord, Paul Nicholson and Dave Schinkel counted for the Knights. Mike Bloom got the St. Catharines goal on a second-period power play. The win was London's fourth successive at home while St. Catharines posited their sixth consecutive defeat.

The Volkswagen Squareback, fully packed, holds nearly twice as much as the average sedan.

But even when it's empty, there's still something in it for you.

Fully unpacked, the Volkswagen Squareback holds an impressive amount of standard features.

The seats are buckets.

The front brakes are disc.

The suspension is 4-wheel independent torsion bar.

The floor is carpeted.

The carburetor is missing. (This is no oversight. In place of the carburetor is a computer that measures the precise flow of gasoline to the engine.)

The radiator's gone, too. (In its place is nothing. The engine is air-cooled.)

And, as a bonus, the VW Squareback Sedan sticks steadfastly to VW economics.

Gasoline is used sparingly. Oil is used frugally. Tires go on tirelessly.

All of the added features don't add a single thing to the already low price of the car. (Which happens to be a whole lot less than the average sedan.)

So although it may be loaded, that doesn't mean that to afford one, you have to be.

The Volkswagen Squareback Sedan.

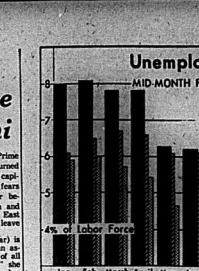
Gandhi Is Home In Delhi

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi returned from a tour of six Western capitals today expressing fears about the danger of war between India and Pakistan and declaring anew that the East Pakistani refugees must leave India.



"It (the possibility of war) is exercising my mind, I can assure you, and the minds of all the people when I met," she told a news conference on her arrival from Bonn, the last stop of a three-week trip that also took her to Washington, London, Paris, Vienna and Brussels.

"On the whole" she was satisfied with her talks with Western leaders, she said. "All had assured her they would try to bring about a political settlement between the military government of Pakistan President Yahya Khan and the East Pakistani political leaders who have declared independence for the Bangla Desh independence movement.

"I think everybody will try their best," she said. "How effective they will be, one does not say."

But she firmly ruled out any compromise that would involve India's keeping some or all of the 10 million Bengali refugees whom her government says have fled into India from the country in the last seven months.

"We will not accept them (the refugees), and there is no reason why any country should accept them. The large number of foreign nationals who have been driven out of their country," Mr. Gandhi said.

Unemployment Rises

Unemployment rose by an estimated 13,000 to 467,000 in October, 5.1 per cent of the 8,698,000 labor force— despite an unusual October surge of new jobs. The number of workers with jobs rose to 8.25 million from 8.19 million in September, showing a gain of 63,000. Usually, jobs diminish in October as winter approaches. (CP Photo)

Five Thick Books Tell Of Boom in Education

TORONTO (CP) — "Bigness has disadvantages everywhere," said W. Gerald Fleming as he looked across the desk at the five thick volumes of his history of Ontario's post-war education boom.

He didn't expect too many people are going to read these volumes right through. His last task big a job."

The volumes, released today with a press run of 2,000, are the first of eight he was commissioned to do in 1968 by Premier William Davis, then education minister.

The rest, with the eighth volume primarily a summary of the others, have been written won't be released by University of Toronto Press until spring.

The 1.75 million words took 22 months to write. The work was a project of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education where Dr. Fleming teaches. The 47-year-old Quebec native has been teaching since age 17.

In the introductory volume, Dr. Fleming traces the controversy over amalgamation in 1969 of 1,946 local school boards into 236 county-sized units, concluding with the statement that Mr. Davis suffered a "reduction in his enormous prestige." Yet history would give him "high marks" for taking the criticism in his stride.

He agrees that the government, which will subsidize any losses from the publication, received favorable treatment in the history.

His remark in the interview about bigness was a reference to the reorganization of school boards, which he says was inevitable and desirable.

But, he said he would have something like that despite the fact there was a danger of local bureaucracy, little provinces full of arbitrary departments of education. Bigness has disadvantages everywhere."

The work lauds the Hall-Dennis report, which urged a non-structured, freer school system to develop thinkers rather than learners.

Dr. Fleming said his final volume will develop his own theory that the education process should involve not only the schools, but every government agency, institution and industry.

"It's not a utopian idea in the sense that I think we should suddenly abolish the present schools for the sake of some other education influences.

"I can see it might be the direction of evolution, that is we could gradually disperse many of the functions of the school as the rest of society was organized to take up the slack. We can't turn mobs of kids loose all over the streets. They'd rip the cities apart."

Dr. Fleming's history also noted a tendency toward a mounting criticism of the system, which he warns could lead to destruction of academic freedom if taken too far.

The volumes also note a backlash developing in the minds of the public about high education costs, and a proliferation of highly-paid administrative personnel.

Instead of reducing education budgets, educationists should "go and sell their contribution more thoroughly to the public, and show how important it is."

Dr. Fleming, a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., has joined the University of Toronto faculty in 1954. From 1960 to 1966, he was assistant research director with the education department and has frequently criticized the internal structure of OISE, although he was involved in establishing it.

He admits his work will not have a wide readership, but he hopes libraries will stock more than one set to enable the public to have access to them.

Movie Face-Off Gets Its Premier

TORONTO (CP) — There was more hockey action on the wide screen at the Carlton theatre here Friday night than there was next door in Maple Leaf Gardens.

And when you consider that Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Montreal Junior Canadiens 11-6, that's a lot of hockey action indeed.

The occasion was the premier of Face-Off, a modern adaptation of the Romeo and Juliet theme with the rapiers replaced by hockey sticks and the plight of wolfbane or whatever replaced by a cube of acid.

The movie features two newcomers—Trudy Young and Art Hindle—as star-crossed lovers and stars every team in the National Hockey League. But the guy who walked away with the show was Ted Cassidy, a recently retired centre for the Leafs, George Armstrong.

The story revolves around a young, acid-dropping girl rock star and a rookie defenceman who has dedicated his life to hockey. The end may have been a bit too pat—the dies in a car crash and he goes back to The Game.

There were one or two points a little hard to take—would you believe the Leafs with a four game winning streak?

And the rule of the nasty reporter was written with a bit of a heavy hand. At one point, he lays the blame for a Leafs losing streak on the star-crossed lovers.

Not only would a smart lawyer—with which hockey abounds these days—have made much of that, but apparently the club let the incident pass quietly.

What makes it surprising is that co-author Scott Young, a former sports writer now a columnist on the Globe and Mail, once was known as a no-nonsense box and forced to ply his trade as a goon in the blues for a far less heinous transgression.

There's enough plot and conflict to keep the story line going, but it's the hockey action —along with the quiet, humor of Armstrong—which gets on the audience.

Outside, it was like a press agent's dream of a Hollywood opening—there was even one actress who literally broke off a little autograph seekers.

Inside, with the Leafs and the principal actors fidgeting nervously, the audience cheered the heroes (Eric Ellis, Paul Henderson, Armstrong—especially Armstrong—even the trainers and the referees) and booed the villains (Bobby Orr, Bobby Hull, Derek Sanderson), etc.

The hockey action was among the best footage seen in any Canadian movie and the photography generally was excellent.

Six Killed When Car Jumps Curb

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Six persons were killed and nine injured Friday byan automobile that jumped a curb and plowed into a crowded sidewalk in the heart of Youngstown's business district.

"People went down just like flies," said Earl Williamson, who stood by helplessly as the car mowed down its victims.

"They didn't even have a chance to scream."

Police said they were holding the driver, Jerry Lee Anderson, 30, for questioning.

Teachers Confer At Trenton HS

TRENTON (Staff) — Geography teachers in the region converged on Trenton High School this morning for a full day of lectures, study sessions and panel discussions.

Principal theme of the day's activities is international land use in the province.

The work session comes at a time when authorities are preparing to take action on the Lower Trent Conservation Report and a further recreation use study is being prepared on the Bay of Quinte district.

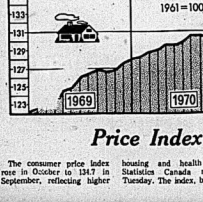
Garbage Accord Near in Trenton



TRENTON (Staff) — After lengthy discussions this week between Trenton Sanitation and town council, it appears Trenton is coming to terms with its garbage collectors.

According to Councillor Cec Parker, both sides are coming to understand each other's positions in the collection controversy and there is now considerable common ground.

Sanitation foreman has asked council to give it two weeks in which to bring the new collection service up to a standard acceptable to the community and the citizens at large.

The company has acknowledged shortcomings in its operations mentioned in talks here and has requested the opportunity to rectify the situation.

If the two - week trial period goes well, it is expected council will give final approval to a five - year sanitation service contract with the firm.

Price Index Rises

The consumer price index rose in October to 134.7 in September, reflecting higher housing and health costs, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday. The index, based on 1951 prices equalling 100, was 130.3 in October, 1970. (CP Newsmap)

Poverty Lines

The income guarantee levels as indicated in this chart are the recommended income levels for families defined as living on incomes at or below the poverty lines as proposed by the special Senate committee on poverty in Canada which released its report Wednesday. For example, a family of three, earning no more than $4,250, receive a guaranteed income of $3,000 a year, or roughly 70 percent of the poverty line as proposed by the committee. The figures are based on 1969 requirements. (CP Photo)

Unemployment in Canada Normal and Will Remain So - - Trudeau

QUEBEC (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says unemployment in Canada is normal and will remain so "because citizens are free not to work where the state sends them."

Mr. Trudeau was speaking to Donald Doyle, Ottawa correspondent of the Quebec City daily LeSoleil, in an interview made published in today's issue of the newspaper.

The prime minister said that all Canadian unemployed could find themselves a short-term job if they were willing to do work which did not answer precisely to their hopes.

"There are lots of jobs in Canada which are not filled," Prime Minister Trudeau said. "Great mining centres like Sudbury, Ont., or Thompson, Man., had an urgent need for workers.

"In a society which has evolved as much as ours has people can give themselves the luxury of not accepting simply any job.

"It isn't like the 1930s when there were no jobs, when people kicked their heels and lined up for anything.

"Today, if they want to do anything, there are plenty of jobs."

Why are there so many unemployed and so many jobs which are not filled?

Because, said Mr. Trudeau, on the one hand people live in a free society and thus nobody can force them to do anything, and on the other hand because various programs of social assistance are there to help them in case of need.

Mr. Trudeau indicated that a minimum of 50,000 jobs would be created by local initiatives through the federal winter works assistance program announced last month by Finance Minister Edgar Benson.

He also said that aside from the $30 million granted for local initiatives there was another $30 million for public works, $150 million in loans to provinces and municipalities, and another $50 million in grants to the municipalities themselves.

"All that will make a lot of work." Mr. Trudeau said, adding that a considerable amount of money was also granted for home construction.

Aside from the unemployment problem, the prime minister also discussed poverty, Canadian-American relations and the conference of provincial premiers which opens Monday in Ottawa.

As far as the recent protectionist measures adopted by the United States are concerned, Mr. Trudeau said Canadians should admit they also hit many other countries and should "not contemplate our own navel."

"We Canadians have said nothing, recognizing that the American economy is going through a difficult period. Those who criticize unemployment in Canada should properly see the difficulties the Americans face.

He said that concrete results may be expected from next week's federal-provincial conference of premiers in Ottawa.

"I believe that we are going to work in a much more concrete way to see how our programs, of which a great many are common, will unless they have the full co-operation of provinces and municipalities, will be received and how the provinces are going to follow up by spending the money we are making available to Canadians."

Mr. Trudeau said that he considered the rôle on the constitution closed for the moment, at least until the Quebec government can find some way of reopening it.

Bleeding Needs Investigation

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you give me an indication of the meaning of a few red blood cells in the urine? This has happened a third time. The first two times I was given tests and told that everything was okay, but I am curious to know what might have been wrong with me, or may have now—D.T.

Bleeding from any source deserves investigation. In the urinary tract there are many possibilities, and finding the blood does not in itself indicate the cause.

Among the possibilities are kidney stones; ulceration anywhere along the tract; a cancer—a fairly common condition in women. This is an excess fold of membrane at the outlet of the urethra.

You don't say what tests you had, but one important one is an intravenous pyelogram, meaning that a dye is used to make the kidneys visible by xrays. Another is a cystoscopic examination, allowing a direct inspection of the inside of the bladder. It also permits taking separate urine samples from each kidney, helping to localize the troubles.

Any serious source of bleeding usually is not intermittent, and blood cells can be found continuously. With limited bleeding, even a few blood cells can be detected by microscopic examination. Gross bleeding may appear as visibly red blood in the urine, or may give the urine a pink tinge.

With more information about your tests and their results, and information about other symptoms that may be present, I might be able to say more.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son, who will soon be 7, was born with one toenail missing. There is a sort of an indentation at the point the nail should grow from. He was three weeks premature.

Is there anything we can do to have the toenail grow? Our doctor says we should not do anything, and just feel fortunate that this is his only deformity. What do you suggest?—Mrs. M.D.

My only suggestion is to do exactly what your doctor said. I don't think there's anything to do about the missing toenail.

It is a congenital defect in the formation of the ectoderm, or outer tissues of the body. And you should feel fortunate: In severe cases this can affect all the nails, sweat glands, hair and tooth formation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been troubled with tendonitis in the extensor tendon location two years ago. I also have been playing golf about three times a week. I have sought medical help but to no satisfaction. What is your thinking?—Mrs. J.B.

If I knew more about the circumstances, maybe I could give you a better answer. I have to guess where the tendonitis is. Shoulder? If so, swinging golf clubs can aggravate the condition.

Rest usually is required for tendonitis, followed later by a gradual resumption of exercise. Salicylates (aspirin or its derivatives) and hot wet compresses are part of the treatment. Possibly injection of hydrocortisone, which may have to be repeated.

Maybe you expect too much from treatment and underestimate the necessity for rest for a time. Golf three times a week isn't exactly "resting" a shoulder with painful tendons.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: In what type of diabetes is Pork Usulin NPH insulin used? I have diabetes but do not use pork; a friend does.—M.D.

The insulin usually used is a mixture derived from beef and pork sources. Even an individual has a sensitivity to one of these sources, insulin from just the other can be obtained.

	♣Q 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2♦	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2♥	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3♦	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4♥	Pass	5 ♦	Pass

Bridge is a game of probabilities. You make a certain bid because you think it will probably turn out better than any other bid; you make a certain play because you think it will probably turn out better than any other play. If your judgment in gauging probabilities is good, you will do well, for you cannot have a better ally than the law of probabilities.

Assume you're in six spades and West leads a club. Of course West may have the king, in which case it would be all right to finesse, but your judgment should tell you that it is better not to finesse. At best you have a 50 per cent chance to win the finesse, while if you go up with the ace you have a far better chance of escaping a club loser by playing three rounds of diamonds, planning to discard a club on the third diamond. The probability of finding the suit divided 4-3 is 62 per cent.

But when you take the ace of clubs and lead the ♦K-Q of diamonds, East ruffs and you are forced to overruff. You enter dummy with a heart and play a fourth diamond, hoping that East will either be out of trumps or be compelled to ruff with the ace. Unfortunately, East will low again and once more you overruff.

Now, to show your versatility, you switch to a different method of attack. You lead the ♠K-Q-J of hearts, hoping to find that suit divided 4-4, in which case you can salvage the club loser by discarding three clubs from dummy.

It turns out that the hearts are divided 5-2, but nevertheless your stepping gave you on top because East can do no better than ruff the fourth heart with the ace of trumps—and by this time your club loser has flown the coop.

What the Stars Say

Saturday, November 14th

Aries (March 21-April 19). The first time around with a partnership proposal may have been a disaster, but now you've got a whole new set of facts. This combination is sure to win, so start talking.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). An investment opportunity that flicked last week may have been a blessing in disguise, saving extra cash to sink into a foolproof scheme now to turn a quick profit.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Tenacious Geminis who have refused to take no for an answer can find that partners have miraculously changed their minds. You have 100-per cent co-operation.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Persistent attention to a physical ailment can suddenly work an overnight cure, but keep up treatments a little longer to ensure a permanent recovery.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Loved ones, youngsters have finally made a transformation from your biggest headache to your greatest joy. Leo parents start to relax.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). A disappointing family alliance can reach a happy and satisfactory conclusion now. Just when you've all but given up hope, everything changes for the better.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). There's every reason to believe that better times are just around the corner; Don't write off losses as final or discount the chance that people will have a change of heart.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). It's pure luck, not good judgment, that's responsible for today's gain in the money department. You couldn't repeat this success if you tried for a million years.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Folks who thought you'd finally met your Waterloo are in for a whopping surprise. You're Fortune's favorite again, so launch a new offensive.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The thing that's making you so happy today is not what's happening, but rather what failed to happen. Everything went just you, though, have no idea what's making you smile.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Those who have remained faithful to friends through recent hard times can find their loyalty rewarded a thousandfold. Allies down on their luck will be openly.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). After today, there's no doubt that you've got a firm grip on prestige. Career and business interests succeed beyond your wildest dreams.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY—Today's Scorpio has the Midas touch for the next 11 months. Except for next April when Uncle Sam takes a juicy cut of your cash, money comes in faster than you can count it.

Sunday, November 15th.

Aries (March 21-April 19). Folks who enlist your aid today are really giving false signals. Underneath that co-operative facade lies a very stubborn streak that will resist any out-side influence.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Work with a surprisingly easy today. Some of the dead wood around the office comes to life and begins to earn his or her keep at last. This means a helping hand for you.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Youngsters are in an excitable, erratic mood most of the day, keeping Twin parents at their wits' end. Even children Geminis are affected, possibly by young neighborhood pranksters.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Unexpected visitors can turn up this evening, making you wish you'd done some housekeeping over the weekend. Don't get caught—clean up!

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Better pay attention to everything you hear this afternoon. Partners you think you can read like a book can toss you a few verbal curves. Their reactions are most unexpected.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Before you offer to help a friend straighten out his tangled finances, put in a few hours getting your own accounts in order. Don't let helpfulness harm your own interests.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). Be hesitant about letting someone else take the lead in an office situation today. Projects assigned can become increasingly intriguing, making you wish you'd volunteered to run the show.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). Seemingly unimportant secrets that are placed in your keeping can put you on the spot before the day is over. You may have to lie about what you know when questioned later.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Some cats have a bit of disagreement brewing in your social set now, with friendly triangles dividing to compete for your attention. You should feel flattered.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Bosses who have been heretofore happy to leave you to your own devices and check just the final results can be peering over your shoulder now, watching every move.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Whether planning a trip or vacation, or even already on the road, it looks like your itinerary may be revised. Weather changes may be the reason.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Don't count on last-minute help unless you've got such a promise down in writing beforehand. Purchases should be made only if the product is guaranteed.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY—First six months can be a game of wits with partners who say one thing, then do another. After May, Independence is strong, provided you've saved to pay your own way.

Chinese at UN Breathe Spirit of Coexistence

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The People's Republic of China has come here breathing the spirit of coexistence and indicating that it cannot be expected to be heard from on every issue that is before the General Assembly at this session.

The indications were given Thursday and Friday by Chou Kuan-hua, deputy foreign minister and head of the Peking Chinese delegation that arrived in New York this week to take the UN seat the Nationalist Chinese at Taiwan had held.

Chiao twice in two days evoked the spirit of peaceful coexistence by harking back to a conference of 26 mostly non-aligned nations in Bandung, Indonesia in April, 1955.

On arrival at Kennedy International Airport in New York Thursday, he said: "The Chinese government has consistently stood for the establishment of normal relations on the basis of the five principles of peaceful coexistence (of the Bandung conference) and has all along supported the oppressed peoples and nations in their just struggles to win freedom and liberation and to oppose foreign interference and become masters of their own destiny."

The Bandung conference was mentioned again Friday by Michael Pearson, Canadian ambassador to Canada who is the Chinese new permanent representative here, when Foreign Minister Adam Malik of Indonesia, president of the General Assembly.

Some observers noted that Malik was present at the Bandung conference and thus it would be natural for China to mention it.

The five principles are:

1. Respect for one another's sovereignty and internal integrity.

2. Abstention from aggression and threats against each other.

3. Recognition of equality of races.

4. Abstention from interference in the internal affairs of one another.

5. Recognition of equality of all nations.

These principles were proposed by the late Prime Minister Nehru of India and agreed to by China. Chinese Premier Chou En-lai called for their adoption by the Bandung conference and added a couple of points of his own:

1. Respect for the rights of people to choose their own political and economic systems.

2. Abstention from doing damage to each other by activities such as asking for trade advantages.

One Western observer, asked what he thought of China's utterances so far, said: "It means that they have not come here to fight."

UN officials said Chiao told Malik that China will try to participate in the work of the non-General Assembly committees that are dealing with everything from disarmament to the organization's finances. But he said that the Chinese are not yet familiar with all the situations in the UN and perhaps would not initially participate in the activities "as was expected of them."

Limit to Rising Health Costs Sought by Federal Government

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government hopes that next week's federal-provincial conference will lead to a limit on rapidly expanding health insurance costs.

For months, federal officials have been touring the provincial capitals seeking agreement on new formula for financing medical care and hospital insurance programs from 1972 until 1977.

A measure of their success also will be evident during the heads-of-government conference starting Monday. All sessions are closed.

On the surface, the only point of unanimous agreement so far is that a new formula or changes to the present one are needed.

The provinces and the federal government also want the result to be flexible enough that the provinces can select the priorities for use of the federal contributions.

The federal payments amount to about $1.3 billion this year.

These represent roughly half the per capita costs of the medical care and hospital insurance programs of each province.

They have been rising at a rate of about 13.3 per cent a year—15 per cent for hospital and 10 for medical care.

Health Minister John Munro is proposing that the rise be limited to 7½ per cent, the equivalent of the growth rate of the economy since 1955.

Furthermore, 1976-71 costs of the two programs would be used as the base year upon which the rise would be calculated. They totalled about $1.45 billion, according to preliminary estimates.

Costs by provinces for hospital and medical care insurance respectively in 1970-71 were:

Newfoundland $46 million and $12.2 million; Prince Edward Island $4.8 million and $808,000; Nova Scotia $97.5 million and $17.8 million; New Brunswick $78 million and $14.5 million; Quebec $518.7 million and $58.1 million; Ontario $368.7 million and $174.5 million; Manitoba $46.9 million and $23.2 million; Saskatchewan $43.9 million and $22.3 million; Alberta $81.2 million and $38 million; British Columbia $95.5 million and $53.5 million.

Applying the new rate-of-increase limit on these would represent a substantial loss, at least in 1972-73, so the formula has provoked concern, however. No province would get less in that fiscal year than it would have under the present formula.

After that, the fixed rate of 7.5 per cent, rather than 13.3 per cent, would become effective until 1976-77.

Several provinces have objected that the new rate represents too great losses.

The federal authorities have countered with a special $200 million, Medicaid-like capital and operating costs of provincial projects that ultimately could include hospital or medical care costs.

Examples of such projects are home care and chronic care programs, which could be extended to the hospital, rest, and community health centres and immunization programs, which would affect both hospital and medical costs.

Some provinces would prefer to extend the current cost-sharing formula to cover nursing homes.

Ontario has already served notice of that. It regards federal refusal to do this as impeding efforts to achieve greater efficiencies and avoiding unnecessary and costly administration.

Saskatchewan has raised objections to tying federal payments to changes in the gross national product. It also wants the present formula continued.

Manitoba raised similar objections and accused Ottawa of negating efforts to direct the flow of federal money into projects which the province considers to have the best chance of successfully reducing health care costs.

Ottawa Has to Play Role Of Reluctant Santa Claus

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government may be feeling like a reluctant Santa Claus as a result of collective agreements this fall with 68,000 white-collar employees who now stand to receive back pay totalling as much as $35 million.

The figure is only a rough estimate but it is based on the terms of five agreements signed or negotiated since Sept. 15 by the federal treasury board and the Public Service Alliance of Canada representing the workers.

The agreements cover three-year periods effective retroactively to the fall of 1970.

Payment of retroactive increases must be made no more than 30 days after a contract is signed.

The government obviously expected to be hit with a healthy bill for back pay.

Indications are, however, that it had hoped the item would make a much smaller dent than it will in the $70-million contingency fund contained in the current budget to cover all negotiated wage and salary increases.

For the union, the breakthrough was an arbitration award to 35,000 clerical and regulatory workers which was handed down in mid-September by a tribunal headed by Mr. Justice Andre Montpetit of Montreal.

The tribunal ordered salary increases of eight per cent retroactive to Oct. 1, 1970, for the lowest-paid workers in the category. The same employees were to receive increases of 6% per cent this year and five per cent in 1972.

Compounded, the increases will total 20.8 per cent over the three-year period and raise the minimum starting salary to $4,028 a year from $3,335.

Other workers in the same bargaining group received increases of between 6% and seven per cent in the first year of the contract, six per cent in the second year and five per cent in the third—a three-year boost of close to 18 per cent.

Spokesmen for the Public Service Alliance are hard-pressed to estimate the impact of the arbitration award.

"There's no question it was the dynamite under the log-jam that built up over the past year," one official said in an interview Friday.

"Once the treasury board saw that the arbitrators were going to give awards of that size it became very reasonable."

The treasury board has made only muted public comments about the arbitration award and subsequent bargaining. Its spokesmen don't fail to remind anyone who is listening, however, that the money for the settlements is coming from the taxpayers.

Strike End Condition For Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has made clear that postal carriers in southern Ontario must return to work before it will consider if compromise in a dispute over a clause in the union's contract.

"We don't feel the present environment is appropriate to productive discussion," a spokesman for the treasury board said Friday.

He added that walkouts during the day by more than 400 letter carriers in six Ontario centres including Hamilton are illegal.

Union leaders have asked the men to return to work. Following an afternoon meeting with treasury board officials, union vice-president James Mayer flew toHamilton to meet with the strikers.

Talks between the union and the treasury board, which acts as employer of all federal public servants, were expected to resume today.

Meanwhile, the treasury board isreparing to appeal the decision of an adjudicator in a grievance proceeding against the post office by three Toronto letter carriers.

The adjudicator, H. W. Arthurs, agreed that the post office was contravening a clause in its contract with the union by hiring casual workers to fill in for union members off the job because of illness or other reasons.

The ruling stated that union members should be entitled to overtime work on the unmanned mail walks.

The union has since demanded that the post office implement the ruling immediately.

The government appeal against the ruling will be submitted early next week to the independent public service staff relations board.

Meanwhile, Jargues, the post office does not have to implement the ruling except as it affects the three men who initiated the grievance.

Red Lake Motorists Defy Ban on Studs

RED LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Police have laid charges against eight motorists of violating a provincial ban on studded tires.

But a group called the Citizens' Committee for Studded Tires has pledged to continue defiance of the safety regulations.

The charges, laid Thursday in this remote northwestern Ontario town, provide for fines ranging from $20 to $100 on conviction.

Dr. Michael Gloster, a spokesman for the group favoring studded tires, said residents are prepared to go to jail over them.

Dr. Gloster has presented provincial police in Red Lake, a town of about 2,500 persons located 180 miles northwest of Thunder Bay, with a list of motorists using studded tires.

"We've got the list but we've not quite sure what to do with it," said a police spokesman. "I believe we are going to send it to our headquarters in Toronto and await orders."

Dr. Gloster said the law on studded tires was made "to protect southern Ontario roads where damage from the studs has been done."

"But when you live up here, you're dealing with entirely different conditions.

"Our main street has been torn up for the past three years. Each year the department of highways has promised to pave the street but it's still not. Our studs hurt pavement that isn't there!"

The citizen's committee appealed to Transport Minister John Macdonald last week for regional relaxation of the ban, but was rejected.

Santa Claus Pays Visit to Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Santa Claus and a mile of his friends paraded through here today.

There was Barney the bassett hound, Crusty the crab, Mother Goose, Dino the Brontosaurus, the Old Woman in the Shoe, the Three Little Pigs, Cinderella and Simple Simon, to name a few.

They were all part of the annual Santa Claus parade, and this year parade officials predicted it would be the best ever, mainly because the weatherman forecast 45-degree temperatures.

James Carmichael, parade supervisor for the sponsoring T. Eaton Co. Ltd., said the forecast was more than pleasing.

"Three years in a row it rained when it has rained and snowed but this year it looks good," he said. "It's important because I said that we'll have eight inches of snow."

The parade started at 8:30 a.m. and was to be telecast nationally by CBC starting at 9:15 a.m. EST and by CTV at 9:30.

The Eaton parade is a crowd pleaser of 10 have been working all year to get the 35 major floats, bands and other components of the parade which stretched more than one-mile long and took 40 minutes to pass a given point. There are 1,000 student marchers and 14 bands.

The theme this year was animals and the many floats had moving parts.

Burgess Says Doyle Made Offer

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Tom Burgess, leader of the New Labrador Party, said Friday he had received "some extremely generous offers" to give his support to the Liberal party of Newfoundland.

The Liberals, who won only 20 of the 42 seats at stake in a provincial general election last month, courted Mr. Burgess for support that might permit them to continue as the government party in the legislature.

The Progressive Conservatives won 22 seats and Mr. Burgess, holding the only NLP seat, controls the balance of power in the house. Earlier this week, he and Joseph Smallwood announced he would support the PCs.

Mr. Burgess told a news conference here Friday he had received offers from Premier Joseph Smallwood and John Doyle, a business promoter who had had long ties with the Liberal government.

Mr. Smallwood had offered him the resources ministry and Mr. Doyle had made various offers that would have made "James Bond look like a boy scout," Mr. Burgess said, but he turned them down.

The Conservatives, he said, had offered him nothing but a pledge to take "a whole new look" at Labrador affairs.

Textile Inflammability Standards Set

OTTAWA (CP) — There's still no substitute for parental supervision when it comes to protecting children from flame burns. But the federal consumer affairs department is trying to make that job a little easier.

It has just issued regulations setting minimum standards for the flammability of textile products, including more stringent ones for material in children's nightwear.

An informant said that while it is difficult to get "hard figures" on burn injuries, a study published last spring said about 180,000 Canadians burn themselves every year. Of these, 600 die.

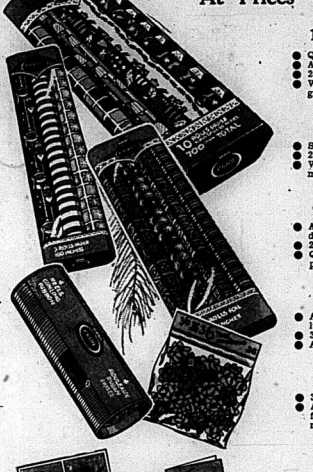
About 30-40 per cent of these burns are actually from flame as opposed to other causes, he said.

The study, by Dr. John Birch, a staff surgeon at the Sick Children's, Hospital in Toronto, had shown that about 21 per cent of children's nightwear burns caught with flame burns. Out of 100 cases, 90 per cent had been burns caused when clothing ignited.

Under its new regulations, the consumer affairs department now requires all textile products for consumer use to meet a minimum requirement of a 3.5-second burn time according to a standard test.

This meant, in effect, that textiles considered dangerously flammable because they burn almost explosively are being excluded from the market.

Products with a raised fibre, such as flannelette, must have a burn time of not less than four seconds because they are more exposed to air and thus burn faster.



Material for children's nightwear must have a minimum burn time of seven seconds, the same requirement as for bedding.

The new burning standard for children's nightwear does not mean a child will be protected from flame no matter what he does, an informant said. It meant rather that a parent might have time to quench the fire before it's consequences were severe.

With the dangerously flammable fabrics now banned from sale, however, there was no time to snuff out flames.

Davis Wants Goals For Economy Listed

Main Positions Already Known

OTTAWA (CP) — The scenario could almost be written in advance for the three-day federal-provincial premiers' conference on taxation and economic problems when Prime Minister Trudeau calls it to order today.

Despite a general agreement to keep mum in advance of the meeting, the positions of the premiers was well advertised. So were the responses of the federal government.

The premiers will ask for a stronger provincial voice in federal government decisions affecting them, and the federal government will remind them of how large a role they already play.

The Atlantic and Prairie premiers will complain that economic policies centred in Ottawa hurt them unduly. Ottawa's reply will be that Ottawa policies are especially geared to helping the less-wealthy provinces.

The provinces will demand more from the federal treasury to overcome unemployment this winter. Finance Minister E. J. Benson will reply that his $500-million program, announced Oct. 14, is just taking effect.

The provinces will also ask for postponement of Mr. Benson's tax law revision, which he hopes to put into effect Jan. 1. The federal reply will be that to postpone it would be to deprive thousands of taxpayers of significant tax reductions which in themselves could be a boost to economic expansion.

Premier William Davis of Ontario and Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec are the only premiers to release their province's briefs in advance of the meeting. Ontario called for a new federal-provincial joint economic committee of finance ministers to set national economic goals and co-ordinate government fiscal policies.

A federal government source said this will be considered under an agenda item likely to come up Wednesday, but noted that a federal-provincial finance ministers conferences now have been held about four times a year for 2½ years.

Quebec centred its brief on a call for more federal money under the tax equalization program and the federal response will be that this was all thrashed out two weeks ago at a federal-provincial meeting of finance ministers.

At that time, Mr. Benson announced an increase to 30.5 per cent from 30 per cent as the provincial share of federally-collected taxes.

"Miss Jones! Bring in my earplugs. I'm off to the Premiers conference."

Premiers Open Ottawa Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario came to today's federal-provincial conference on economic and fiscal relationships seeking answers to old questions.

The Ontario brief to the three-day meeting of premiers and Prime Minister Trudeau was short.

It simply asked what the federal government intends to do about 17 specific Ontario proposals made over the last three years.

The thrust of the brief, presented by Premier William Davis, is a demand for a federal-provincial economic committee to set national economic goals and co-ordinate fiscal policies.

"It concerns me a great deal that we have no intergovernmental body to review and determine, on a continuing basis, national economic goals of a strategic order," the brief says.

Premier Davis said Sunday in an interview that Ontario "is trying to put into focus as alternatives in question form those issues which are important to us."

He said "it is not a question of putting the federal government on the spot."

Mr. Davis said if the federal government answers any of Ontario's questions "it is still progress" even though the answers are not affirmative.

Ontario is not coming to the conference armed with alternatives "because any alternative is the preservation of the status quo."

Sunday night he met other premiers on Ontario's proposal for an economic committee but did not say who they were or what their reactions were.

Ontario wants the committee to consist of premiers or their finance ministers. Immediate policy concerns of the committee should be:

—The role of the provinces in promoting full-employment economic growth;

—Co-ordination of federal and provincial winter works programs;

—Establishment of permanent programs dealing with unemployment among young people.

Bell Phone Strike Is Likely

TORONTO (CP) — Bell Canada operators in several Ontario centres have voted overwhelmingly in support of a general strike that could disrupt telephone service throughout Ontario and Quebec, a spokesman for the 8,500-member Traffic Employees Association said Sunday.

Shirley Nicholson, secretary-treasurer of the association, said referendum taken Sunday among operators in Toronto, Sudbury, Sault Ste. Marie, Ottawa, Kingston, St. Catharines and Guelph indicate between 95 and 100 per cent approval of a general strike.

She said a deadline of midnight Wednesday night has been set for completion of the referendum in both provinces and the association would set a strike date later.

In Ottawa Sunday, another association spokesman said that if the majority of operators approve a strike "and we're sure they will, we plan to keep Mother Bell guessing as to a strike date."

A strike would involve switchboard operators, service analysts, information-office employees, long-distance operators and dining service operators.

Miss Nicholson said operators are seeking a wage increase of $30 a week over a two-year contract and will not accept a final Bell offer, reported to be a $15-a-week increase over two years.

In addition, she said, four non-monetary contract items still are in dispute.

Senators Uphold Surcharge

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. Senate has defeated by a vote of 36 to 29 an amendment to the tax bill that would have removed the 10-per-cent import surcharge on goods from Canada and Mexico.

The vote was the closest of 10 roll-call votes as the Senate worked in an unusual Saturday session on the massive tax legislation.

The proposal was put forth by Senator James Buckley, Conservative-Republican from New York. The Senate also turned back by a vote of 52 to 12 an attempt to nullify President Nixon's seven-per-cent investment tax credit.

As the proposal now stands, the investment tax credit, intended to produce more U.S. jobs and stimulate investment, would apply only to equipment and products manufactured in the U.S.—not those imported from abroad.

Postmen Threaten Rotating Strikes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A series of 24-hour rotating strikes by letter carriers protesting post office hiring practices threatened to become national in scope today as the dispute spread from southwestern Ontario into Metropolitan Toronto and the Maritimes.

A walkout this morning by letter carriers in Saint John, N.B., was the first indication that the dispute between the mailmen and the federal treasury board had national implications. Officials of the Letter Carriers Union said there could be walkouts in other provinces later in the day.

The union is protesting the practice by post office officials of hiring low-cost non-union workers to replace union letter carriers who are sick or on vacation.

The walkouts started last week in St. Catharines, Ont., and quickly spread throughout Ontario's Niagara Peninsula. Today, 325 of the 3,500 mailmen in the Toronto area joined in, along with 175 in Windsor and 140 at Hamilton.

Mailmen in the Ontario communities of Waterloo, Port Erie and Burlington, who were off the job Friday, reported for work today. The letter carriers remained off the job in St. Catharines, while union members in Grimsby and Niagara Falls voted during the weekend not to take part in the rotating strikes.

Union spokesman Bob McGarry said in Toronto there could be more walkouts across the country later today, or later in the week.

South Vietnam Plans Reforms

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu presented today a program of sweeping economic reforms for South Vietnam aimed at increasing investment, production and exports.

The program outlined to the National Assembly included provisions for devaluing the piastre and attracting foreign investment.

Informed sources reported that the piastre would be devalued to a rate of about 600 to the U.S. dollar, its present black market rate. The rate would then be allowed to float, and the government would review the currency market each week and set a new exchange rate when ever it felt this necessary.

Thieu said the country is living in "a state of dependence on foreign aid," and "there will be a day when it is going to be reduced and then terminated."

Tax Cut Contest Forecast

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of Toronto economist said today a contest between provinces to lower estate taxes is likely and "there is a strong case for a reaffirmation of the national interest in taxing wealth."

Prof. Richard M. Bird was speaking about the federal government's decision to eliminate its inheritance and gift taxes. Federal officials have offered to help any province wanting to implement such taxes.

Prof. Bird, in a paper prepared for the annual meeting of the Canadian Tax Foundation, said that "on moral, social and economic grounds, for the good of this country, estate taxes should be raised—not large estates, not reduced."

The members of the faculty of the university's institute for policy analysis was the first of about 60 tax specialists scheduled to speak at the three-day meeting.

This is fox-hunting time. For most Canadians fox-hunting is done with a hound and a shotgun — but some hunt the fox in the traditional style — "riding to hounds." Above, the master of the hunt is shown with hounds and horse. For story, see Page 2.

India Is Waiting for Action by World Leaders in Bengal

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said today India will wait to see what world leaders do to defuse the crisis in East Pakistan before her country takes any action.

At the same time, Defence Minister Jagjivan Ram told members of Parliament that Pakistan is preparing for an attack on India.

"I do not wish to exaggerate, but the situation on our borders is very serious indeed," he said.

The prime minister's statement came in a speech to the 460 members of her ruling Congress party just before the five-week winter session of Parliament convened.

She termed her three-week overseas trip, which concluded Saturday, "successful, because we had the opportunity to explain to world leaders our assessment of the situation in the Indian sub-continent and in Bangla Desh (East Pakistan)."

The prime minister previously has called on world leaders to bring about a political solution to the crisis within East Pakistan to permit the return of an estimated nine million Bengali refugees now in India.

She did not spell out how long India would wait for the world to act before India moved to resolve the situation.

Mrs. Gandhi said she told the heads of government, including U.S. President Richard Nixon, that "we have to look at the crisis (with Pakistan) from our point of view" but advised her party members that "we must not take a decision in haste and anger."

Later, in a statement to Parliament, the prime minister said:

"It is my earnest hope that joint or several efforts of the statesmen whom I met will make the military regime in Pakistan realize that no good can come of sabre-rattling or by forcing a military conflict on India."

In his speech, Ram said that Pakistani armored divisions have been put on a full alert. "The reports received by us indicate pre-operative strikes on our airfields as part of their plans," he said.

County Preparing Official Plan

Hastings county has joined the list of areas awaiting an official plan of its own.

It would cover all the county except Frankford, Stirling and the townships of Sidney and Thurlow, all of whom belong to the Quinte planning area.

The consulting firm of Totten, Sims, Hubicki is preparing the plan and its accompanying restricted area by-laws, designed to help guide development and produce the greatest benefit to the largest number of people as possible.

The consultants are now involved in gathering information and studying the county for a land use survey.

The long process of preparing the official plan for the county began in August with the land use survey. Following the detailed report on the county's physical features, industries, farms, roads, water sources and the rest, the official plan will be prepared to set out the desired policy for development.

The desires of the people living in the area will also be considered, and at a later stage they will be asked to become actively involved in planning.

A second document will accompany the official plan — a restricted area, or zoning bylaw.

One will be prepared for each municipality to implement the official plan. It will protect the present development and ensure that incompatible uses do not occur in close proximity to one another.

For example, with no restricted zoning by-law, a noisy industry such as a junk yard or gravel pit could be located next to a residential development. A zoning bylaw will not eliminate junk yards or gravel pits, but will ensure that they will be located in a suitable place and not become a detriment to the community.

A zoning bylaw is a form of protection for the homeowner against having a undesirable use made of property near his land, and it protects the gravel pit operator against complaints.

He Who Hesitates Is Taking a Big Chance

This paraphrase of the old adage is especially pertinent when it comes to good health. At the first signs of an illness or when symptoms are recurring in the time to check with your physician. If you wait, what might be a simple illness is cure, could develop into something serious.

The same premium applies when it comes to having a prescription filled. Don't hesitate to have the medicine he prescribes for an ailment used at once. That is when it can do the most good. Get out at once, bringing your prescription to the pharmacy of your choice.

Fox Hunt Without Fox Provides Ideal Outing

CHATTERTON — The first fox hunt in years — perhaps ever — in the Belleville area, romped across country here Saturday with only one thing missing — the fox.

Otherwise, all the authentic trappings of the hunt — from scarlet coats to English foxhounds — were present.

The hunt, staged by members of the Highlands of Hastings Pony Club, had more than a score of riders following the hounds along a 10-mile scenic path across the landscape near Highway 14, 10 miles northwest of Belleville.

The scent was a mixture of natural fox odor and fish oil, spread along the landscape before the hunt started from the property of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Kuglin.

Actually, it's the kind of hunt in this part of Canada that has displaced the more traditional type of sport that once saw riders hunt down a real-live fox, explained Henry VandenBosch, head of the club.

Foxes are particularly prone to rabies and their numbers have been depleted by the disease in recent years. (Possibly, there's also a thought that if a real-live trail were pursued it could come to a chaotic ending if the quarry turned out to be rabid.)

Thus, events like Saturday's hunt have become a "straight riding sport," says Mr. VandenBosch.

All of which works to the advantage of club members — young people up to 18 years who take in jumping and cross-country competition with similar clubs around the province.

Too, the absence of blood as a grand finale may have enhanced the event for some of its spectators, many of them youngsters. Hauled to top of a knoll by tractor and farm wagon they watched hunters and hounds cut a romantic dash across a late fall landscape of hills and thickets.

The club, which counts 33 members right now from around the Quinte district, got under way last year with a similar hunt at Carryine Place and plans are to make the simulated fox hunt an annual affair.

For such events, the necessary English foxhound mock is put to the club from the Kingston area Frontenac Hunt Club.

OBC Exercises Saturday

Students at private business colleges across the province will receive an educational shot in the arm as of Dec. 1, Mrs. O. A. Brown, principal of Ontario Business College, told graduates Saturday night.

Conflict between the private schools and the department of education, described by Mrs. Brown as a "pretty cold wind" will be alleviated when they come under the wing of John White, minister of the department of Universities and Colleges.

"We have been told private business colleges teach better" than the public schools, she said.

"Diplomas are well earned. No one gets a diploma from OBC unless they have earned it."

She welcomed graduate students to the annual ceremonies. Many of them had come from as far away as Bermuda to receive their diplomas.

In Canada's oldest private business college, between 19,000 and 20,000 students have studied such subjects as bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting and answering.

A total of 37 students were presented with graduation diplomas, with 85 others who received single course certificates.

Mrs. Brown referred to "severe examinations" required to receive these diplomas, which she said were "as good as three-year university or community college courses."

Lorne Shew felt, principal at Albert College, said relations between the colleges were "pleasant and relaxed." He went on to explain that several Albert College students are annually enrolled in OBC courses.

He said Albert College authorities found only a small number of students taking their business courses. Several years ago, they approached OBC to have their pupils enrol for their curriculum.

"We are very pleased to see certain educational facilities we couldn't provide, being provided by Ontario Business College."

Former student and teacher, Mrs. Edith Watson of Ottawa, encouraged the graduates to maintain their self-confidence because "people have training that is second to none.

"Go out with your training and use it," she said.

"This is an exciting world you are going out into. It's a strenuous world but it's an exciting, interesting life."

She also cautioned graduates, all of whom have attained business positions, not to "lose out at the chance to learn anything at all."

Guest speaker Jesse J. Mason, Picton department store merchant and former OBC graduate, told students and guests gathered at the Victoria Street college, "you have responsibility to the cumulative years of your lives."

He added there is no high ideals and achieve worthy goals.

"Remember to pause and take a good look at your selves. This personal assessment program will help you maintain your goals."

Mr. Mason said if every person could read his or her own obituary, as Alfred Nobel founder of the great Peace Prize awards, did years ago because of a journalistic error, self-evaluation could reveal possible faults which could be corrected.

He encouraged the students to become involved in today's society and not be afraid to speak out.

"What is worse? To sit idly by and do nothing or, under the guise of interest, break into shops." He illustrated this point because of his fear of young people's failure to look at situations responsibly.

"On the other hand, don't allow mountains of responsibility to overwhelm you. What the world needs today is better builders."

There is no room in the world today for phonies and hypocrites," he concluded.

Following graduation ceremonies, students and guests gathered for refreshments, prepared entirely by the students. As were the special ceremonies.

Came from Bermuda for Diploma

Dalton Carlington, of Bermuda, travelled all the way from his home to receive his training certificate at Ontario Business College graduation ceremonies Saturday night. Principal Mrs. O. A. Brown here presents the examination student with a white carnation. A total of 37 students received diplomas, together with 85 students who received individual course certificates.

(Mrs. Curtis was secretary for 1971.)

The incoming president who will take office as will the rest of the executive in January 1972, will at that time appoint his committees.

A bake sale and bazaar for the Club will be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church basement on Nov. 25.

A quilt pattern was presented by Mrs. Olive Wallace of Moira Street, Tweed, was accepted with thanks by the club and tickets on this will be sold at the bake sale and bazaar. The painting itself will appear in one of the store windows on Victoria St. this week. The lucky draw will be held near Christmas, the actual date has not as yet been set.

The next meeting of the Senior Citizens' Club 299, will be held Wednesday, Nov. 24 and the second meeting will be Dec. 8. The following regular meeting which usually is held the fourth Wednesday of each month, will not be held as it falls too near Christmas.

Yule Basket Donors Ready

Donors are already registering for Belleville's Christmas Sharing Program, administered at the United Community Services office on John St.

The recipient families are registering also, and making their pleasure known at the return of the Christmas baskets this year.

When the basket is delivered, said one, "the whole family gathers around and we really enjoy the surprise of seeing what's in it."

However, any family that does not want its basket delivered personally by the donor will have its identity protected. In these cases, said Mrs. Selma Bochnek, chairman of the Christmas Sharing committee, cash donations will be used to buy a basket and have them delivered by a volunteer delivery service.

Some families will receive cheques instead of baskets, and cash donations will still be welcomed by the committee to take care of cases such as these.

Six Teenagers Hurt in Crash

PICTON (Staff) — Six Prince Edward county teenagers riding in a convertible driven by Stephen Ryan, 18, of RR2, Picton, were taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital shortly after midnight Saturday when their car left the road, striking a tree on the Sophiasburg township road.

Treated for cuts and bruises and released from hospital were the driver, Stephen Ryan and passengers Paul Chourette, 17, Cherry Valley; Robert Mathews, 18, Picton, and Rosemary Vanzneer, 16, RR5, Picton.

Admitted to hospital were Peter McLellan, 17, RR5, Picton, and Richard Dance, 17, Milford. Both youths are reported in satisfactory condition. Damage to the convertible, totally demolished when it struck the tree, is estimated at $400.

Not Too Late To Save Bay Says Planner

TRENTON (Staff) — What is wrong with the Bay of Quinte?

According to Paul Wyatt, a planner with the Inland Waters Branch, Canada Department of Environment the bay is in trouble but it is not too late to do something about it. Mr. Wyatt is one of the men assigned to drafting a new recreational land use survey of the Bay of Quinte.

In an interview here Saturday during a Lake Ontario Geography Teachers Conference he outlined some of his personal observations on the state of the region's prime waterway.

The planner expressed concern that there is no extensive public recreation area on the Bay of Quinte between here and Kingston, although Prince Edward Conservation authorities are now paving the way for a park at Massassauga Point.

As a corollary to the lack of public access to the bay, he termed the strip residential development along the shores of the waterway one of the region's big problems and a factor in curbing public use of the waters.

Water quality, particularly in the upper reaches of the bay, is another area which causes considerable attention if the bay is to be developed for the recreational needs of future generations, he indicated. Shallow soil will pose another handicap to recreational development, Mr. Wyatt added.

The planner explained that despite the shortcomings of the region it is still in a state that can be dealt with with some ease. "Compared to Lake Simcoe there is far more opportunity to develop the Bay of Quinte for recreation," he stated.

Mr. Wyatt spoke favorably of the waterway as an area for sailing, praised the Lake Ontario beaches in the vicinity and the region's promontories and rocky shores.

A public hearing on recreational uses of the Bay of Quinte region will be held at Loyalist College Nov. 24. He urged teachers attending the weekend conference to persuade their students to participate in the dialogue.

Students often come up with good ideas, many times better than our own," he said.

The report to parallel one released this summer on the Trent - Severn - Rideau waterway should be completed by the fall of 1972, said Mr. Wyatt.

War on the 'Lemon' Product

Consumers Have A Friend in Ralph Nader

NEW YORK (CP) — Consumerism, that surging tide of citizen insistence that the things he buys be safe, efficient and full value for his hard-earned dollars, has produced significant changes in the North American market place.

All indications are that it will be a potent force for years to come.

No precise date can be assigned to the start of the current wave of consumerism.

Most people in their middle years can remember buying a "lemon"—a product so full of flaws that it was a constant drain on the patience and the pocketbook. The eventual solution was to junk the article or sell it to some other unsuspecting citizen. There was little concerted effort to ensure that the next purchase would not be just as bad.

But the complaints mounted —against products that did not live up to the advertising claims, against credit arrangements disastrous to the buyer, against goods insidious to use, against warranties that seemed to expire just before a product broke down.

Governments were largely unresponsive to demands for action. Industry lobbyists worked effectively to strip the teeth from proposed regulations or have them pigeon-holed. The regulatory agencies that existed were harassed by legal challenges.

Finally a catalyst appeared in the person of Ralph Nader, a dedicated young lawyer who made his name a household word with a book, Unsafe-at-Any Speed, published in 1967. His challenge to the automobile industry and his subsequent investigations of other fields, aided by devoted young people who flocked to his banner, gave heart to the couch-baptess consumer.

Governmental regulations covering commodities as varied as meat and poultry and radio-emitting machines blossomed. Consumer organizations mushroomed across North America. Regulatory organizations became more responsive to consumers when they spoke with a united voice.

Just now the Federal Trade Commission is holding hearings in Washington on advertising, particularly television promotion directed at children. Parents and consumer groups have told the FTC that stiffer criteria must be applied to ads directed at children because of their immaturity and naivete.

Some consumer activists demand that ads directed at adults also be more strictly policed: they say persuasive copy has become so clever that it makes children of them, too.

All this represents an effort toward tilting the balance in favor of the buyer in the merry-go-round of industry, but some branches of it appear to be striving manfully to meet the consumers' demands.

That is not to say there has been no backlash against consumerism. The business oriented Wall Street Journal in a recent editorial headed "Consumer Hysteria" complained that "businessmen can expect still more harassment than they already get" in the wake of Consumer Protection Agency legislation being considered in Congress.

Although consumerism and legally enforcemntalism have birthed a number of fads and obvious problems about which buyers have complained, there appears no immediate danger of the well running dry, so vast is the market place.

Recreational Plans

The possibility of a new hiking trail all the way from The Sandbanks to Algonquin Park, and redevelopment of Massassaga Point are interesting developments in the recreational sphere.

In addition to creating this new dimension in recreational facilities in this region the two projects would provide employment relating to their development and maintenance.

Restoration of the Massassaga Point area will evoke feelings of nostalgia in many, in that it was a popular recreation spot at the turn of the century. Then picknicking was popular and excursion steamers plied back and from Belleville.

Those responsible for these initiatives, including Canada Manpower in the case of the hiking trail and the Prince Edward Conservation Authority with regard to Massassaga, are to be congratulated.

One thing Ameliasburg township will have to consider in providing access to Massassaga Point is the greatly increased traffic that will inevitably result. As things stand, neither the Old Picton Road nor the Massassaga Road can be considered adequate to handle a sharp boost in vehicular traffic. Even now making a left turn onto the Old Picton Road at Rossmore is difficult enough given the tendency of following traffic on the main Picton route to tailgate coming off the Bay Bridge. It will be an even more potentially hazardous situation once the park is in operation. The authorities should be thinking about this along with plans for the park area itself.

Capital Gains

"It is coming, whether we like it or not." This is the introduction to a Toronto firm of tax specialists' advertisement about the government's Capital Gains Tax scheduled to come into force January 1.

To quote from the ad: "Valuation Day is coming. This is the day the federal government begins keeping tab on any additional money you may make apart from your regular income."

The tax, the ad continues, "is going to make us a nation of record keepers. You will have to keep a record of the items you buy which have resale potential."

And consider this: "Don't be fooled or misled by erroneous information such as: 'this capital gains business applies only to people with stocks and bonds or real estate to sell.' Not true.

What about your home? the ad continues. "Well in most cases it is going to be exempt from a Capital Gains Tax when and if you dispose of it, so we understand. But there are exceptions. The size of your land can make a difference. . ."

Thus we are all a little wiser on this new tax bite, thanks to an advertisement. Perhaps we should all start selling anything we want to make a penny or two on before the new year. After January 1st will be taxable.

Consumer Scene

So hydro rates will not rise in 1972. But then they rose not so long ago, so why should we have another round? Telephone rates, however, may go up, so we could get caught there. What about other major consumer areas? Some car dealers are selling 1972 models at 1971 prices; hence a bargain there. Food prices have moved away from the recent price war situation but nevertheless remain fairly constant. There may be a difference of a few pennies here and there, but by and large prices in this sphere seem to be holding the line.

The Humorous Side

If nothing else, British humor will triumph in Northern Ireland. Soldiers on riot duty have been known to set up screaming female demonstrators: ". . . see you at the disco to-night beautiful." And a story in recent days from the army's anti-bomb squad quarters in Belfast noted a crude pencil sketch of a nude entitled Miss IRA 1971. Meanwhile the IRA strikes another incongruous note by disowning the practice of tarring and feathering young women said to have been fraternizing with the army. Republican sympathizers, says the IRA, should distinguish between informers and true love matches. What next. . .!

Government Money for Computer Company

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau

TORONTO — A few days ago the government, somewhat secretively, loaned money to Consolidated Computer Company Ltd. of Toronto, a large organization (it employs 300 people) that is in financial trouble.

The amount of the loan and the conditions were not disclosed, and still are not available. And the government is not discussing the policy involved.

However, without any of those details you can mark the loan as very significant. Probably, in fact, it is a first step forward for the government in a new stage of financing private industry.

The significance of the loan is that it is to help out an existing company which is in financial trouble.

With one exception, so far as is known or can be found out, this is the first time that the government has gone to the aid of an industry that is in trouble.

Government financing of business has always been confined to development: for expansion of existing companies or establishment of new businesses in slow growth areas. "Development" has been the key.

The one exception, of course, was the publishing firm of McLeland and Stewart. Here the government did advance a million dollars in working capital.

The circumstances were exceptional, however, in that the advance was made on the recommendation of the Royal Commission on Book Publishing, and therefore was not binding on the government as future policy.

The Consolidated Computer loan, however, is part of the regular operations which means that it is a policy precedent. But the circumstances are as they appear to be, it is an important one.

It can signify that in future a manufacturer who is in financial trouble, perhaps because he is a good production man but a poor manager, can legitimately go to the government to ask for help and expect at least serious consideration for a loan.

To date he has not been able to do this. He could ask for help, and might get it. But the help would consist of management advice from expert consultants paid for by the government (through the department of trade and development), He couldn't get any money. The most he could expect was that after the consultants had straightened him out regular lending sources might consider him a worthwhile risk.

One obvious reason why the government has avoided lending in this area has been that it automatically creates a host of complex, new political problems.

Every hard-up manufacturer in the province would look to the government for assistance. And there is the problem of criteria. Who should qualify and who shouldn't, and why?

Inevitably a good many applicants would have to be turned down. And not only they, but also their employees, would be affected.

Yet this is a field where assistance is needed, and today the employment so important it is one which the government probably has to enter.

Lack of Quinte TV Outlet Here Discourages Local Entertainers As Well as Job Opportunities

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I am writing this letter on behalf of 220 professional musicians in the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward, all members of the Belleville Federation of Musicians, Local 357, to publicly register their extreme disappointment, dismay and frustration as a result of the recent ruling of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission reported in The Intelligencer, Monday, November 1, 1971.

The article dealt with the decision of the CRTC to deny Belleville a CTV license and, instead, awarded a satellite system to CHBT to relay programs from CTVs Ottawa station.

We do not take issue with CTV's programming status but with the loss of potential employment of local artists, not to mention the loss of employment for a staff to administer a Quinte studio. Let us reflect for a moment on these potentials: (a) land for a building; (b) loss of work to local contractors and suppliers, stenographers, announcers, technicians, insurance underwriters and the list is endless. The greatest loss in our minds, however is to local programming which may be produced shows employing local Quinte talent. We fully realize that a new company might lose money the first or second year of operation and possibly break even the third year but it would be feasible and realistic to consider hiring local musicians. At least there would have been some hope that an outlet would be provided for local talent. That hope no long er exists.

The article in The Intelligencer stated that "The Committee's decision to deny the two station applications was based on the belief that the Belleville area could not support an additional station with local studios." For a decision on such an important matter we prefer to take our own feelings known and not be dictated to by a governmental authority which says on one hand, "support Canadian talent," and on the other denies local citizens the right to access to that same talent. Would it not be more fair to find out through questionnaires if in fact local people would support a TV station here?

The phrase "an additional station with local studios" has us wondering if they are referring to CHEX Peterborough and CKWS, Kingston. If so, please show us where Quinte people are represented on either station's contest. We wonder if that CKWS registered a protest against a station in Belleville due to the fact that they would lose — we believe the figure was 38 per cent — advertising revenue. Would someone please show us where Kingston programming contains 38 per cent Quinte area content?

We feel that the cultural identity of our community is being taken away from us and once again another board has been added to the graveyard to the ship of Canadian obscurity.

DOUGLAS W. ASELSTINE,
President, Belleville Federation of Musicians

NZ Rose Friend Attracts Canadians

Zena Cherry in the Globe and Mail

"Would you like to hear about a friend in Hamilton in the World Rose Convention?" I was asked.

"Um-m-m, perhaps."

"Well, a large group of roselovers left Auckland by sea 34 days."

"In Hamilton!" I said.

"It's a beautiful city on the Waikato River and within a radius of 40 miles is the densest animal population to be found on the face of the earth. This includes 3 million sheep, 1.3 million dairy cattle, 1 million beef cattle, and they're fed all year round on out-of-doors pasture. With land so fertile and climate so favorable, roses grow to perfection."

Sheep country, outdoors all year and rose, I finally came to — Hamilton, New Zealand, I'm almost making a fool of myself in conversations about London in England or Ontario by assuming we're talking about the wrong one. Now, if I have to start wondering which Hamilton!

The convention opened yesterday. The program is packed with parties, lectures, garden visits, and the arranging contests. Entertaining for delegates is also the Governor-General, the Mayor of Hamilton and every second day there's a trip arranged to such sights as the Glow Worm Caves and the thermal wonders of Whakarewarewa.

At Te Aroha there'll be a display of rose-dressing by aeroplane, then an afternoon of racing at the Te Rapa race course. And I wish I'd asked someone to send me a post card because meeting the New Zealand post office is almost worth the price stamps—to be collectors' items for sure.

The group had three days in Fiji on the way over, and enroute home a week in Australia and a couple of days in Hawaii.

Governor-General's $49,000 and Pelletier's 'Gobbledegook'

By DAVE McINTOSH
OTTAWA (CP) — Whatever is causing inflation, the governor general's salary is playing no part in it.

Governor-General Roland Michener's annual salary is $49,000.

Governor-General Lord Lieutenant's salary in 1871 was $48,666.52, the equivalent then of $10,000.

Federal deputy ministers now make as much as $46,000 a year.

A publicity-seeking Montreal shopkeeper told reporters the prime minister's wife had spent "less than $1,000" in his store.

He was right. Mrs. Pierre Trudeau had spent $40.

Mrs. Trudeau still does not take the necessary security that follows her around.

During a recent evening at the National Arts Centre, the Trudeaus in mufti guarding Mrs. Trudeau somehow both got seats to her left. She made her exit to the right and they had to scramble all the way around the auditorium to catch up with her.

There is no word, official or otherwise, whether Mrs. Trudeau will have her baby, due in December, in a hospital at 24 Sussex Drive, the prime ministerial residence.

An aide to Mr. Trudeau said the public will find out when the time comes.

Negotiations are still in progress between Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and Claude Wagner, former Quebec Liberal cabinet minister, on whether the latter is willing to become the Conservative leader's Quebec lieutenant.

A decision is expected next week.

The Commons procedure committee is still divided on whether television broadcasting should be permitted in the Commons.

It is even finding it a little difficult to arrange closed meetings to discuss the issue. There now is considerable doubt that the committee will arrive at any decision this year.

Don Peacock, former managing editor of the Calgary Albertan just-appointed press secretary to the Canadian high commission in London, has completed his second book on Prime Minister Trudeau.

It is expected to be published next spring. Tentative title: "Pierre Trudeau: Conservative Revolution."

Mr. Peacock is a former aide to prime minister Lester Pearson. His first book on Mr. Trudeau was called Journey to Power.

Look for another big row in the Commons, too, before long over parliamentary rules.

More and more cabinet ministers are becoming frustrated by the length of time it takes to push complicated bills through the Commons.

Practically everybody says something should be done. But the opposition is extremely touchy about agreeing to limit time limits on debate. It fears it would be throttled when it got its hands on a major issue that might be used to bear down the government.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier is becoming pretty inscrutable. To wit:

I think that the matter of submitting various reports to parliamentary committees is one that we should consider carefully. Some of these reports are interesting considering by a committee; as for others, the committee itself decides that they are not worthy of any consideration.

A decision will have to be made in the light of the views of reasonable members in this respect.

Fire Under Investigation

Fire Sunday evening completely gutted the bar in the Belleville Armories Officers' Mess, to the tune of between $3,000 and $4,500. When investigators from the Belleville Fire Department and CFB Trenton re-opened the burned out bar, CFB Trenton Base Fire Chief Lt. William Roy Dawson was struck by a 40 pound iron weight, seen resting in the foreground as he attempted to raise bar doors for photographers.

Armories Fire Guts Officers' Bar

A smouldering fire caused between $3,000 and $4,500 damage to the Officer's Mess at the Belleville Armories Sunday night.

Although no city firemen were injured fighting the blaze,* CFB Trenton's Fire Chief Lt. William Roy Dawson, present for Monday morning investigations, was struck on the head by a falling 40-pound weight.

The weight apparently became loosened when officers raised the sliding bar doors for photographers.

Lt. Dawson, who fellow officers say was stunned into unconsciousness for a moment or two, has been transferred to the base hospital at CFB Trenton.

Here. Base deputy fire chief Warrant Officer Ronald Soulard and a base photographer record the scene.

Fire Chief Leo Culhane reported the haze alarm was sett in at 6.35 p.m. Sunday. When firemen arrived, they found doors closed in the officer's mess and trophy room.

Because of this, the chief said, damage was isolated in the bar.

Smouldering for several hours, the automatic alarm system was not activated until most of the bar room was completely gutted. Flames had licked into an adjoining card room, slightly damaging the ceiling.

Water pipe connections and a telephone were completely ru

Chief Culhane said if flames had managed to escape into the main room or across the ceiling, the armories might not have been saved.

ANAF Weekly News Notes

Despite the chilly and damp weather there was a very good turnout for the Remembrance Day ceremonies. Chairman Howard Kokesh of the Veterans of Belleville Council, was parade marshal and Cde. Sid Scott was color sergeant. Over 180 veterans formed the two leading platoons. It is sad to see that the WW I veterans' numbers on parade have dwindled so swiftly over the past few years but quite a few took advantage of the transportation provided and attended the actual Cenotaph ceremonies.

With the grand color party leading, the parade moved off to the swing of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit Pipe Band leading the veterans, armed forces personnel and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and the regiment's cadets. Next came the Quinte Sea Cadet Corps brass band, looking very snappy in their summer dress that made one shiver but youth will be served and they seemed to feel no ill effects from the weather. The cadets also supplied the guard of honor and the lads did an excellent job. The Air Cadets brought up the rear. These lads had done a great job on the poppy sales which, together with the sales of wreaths, was the best in some years. It was with feelings of relief that the parade headed back to the armories and the warmth and comfort of the messes and veterans clubs.

In the evening, just about the largest turnout ever attended the banquet with close to 400 veterans and guests sitting down to a sumptuous roast beef dinner. The Sea Cadet Band supplied all the music during the repast. Mr. Hugh Chadderton gave the toast to the veterans some peeks behind the scenes in the fight for better pensions and living conditions for veterans and their dependents. Pulling no punches, there just might have been a few red faces among some of the attentive listeners. He was heartily applauded for a very informative and interesting talk. Dominion president J. C. Lundberg, ANAF, introduced Mr. Chadderton and president J. Rashotte, Branch 99, RCL, thanked him for an inspiring speech. The evening ended with a dance in the Holland Room and a sing-song in the general lounge.

It was with deep regret that the president and members of the Unit learned of the passing of an old and well respected comrade, C. Marrell, and the unit's sincere sympathies are extended to his bereaved family.

On the sick list, at present, are the following comrades: A. Glew, 627; A. Tuck, 235; W. Sheppard, extended care, W. Dafoe, 701 and E. Brickhurst, 316, all in the Belleville General Hospital. Cde. R. Forhan has been transferred to a Toronto hospital. Resting at home are Cdes. R. Mills, K. Hollands, and H. Lathlum.

The president and members are pleased to congratulate that oldtimer, Cde. Sam Howe on his 95th birthday. Best wishes from all.

Leigh – Foley

At a double-ring ceremony in Eastminster United Church Carolyn Ann Foley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Foley of Belleville became the bride of Roy Franklin Leigh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Graydon Leigh of Campbellford. Rev. J. Leslie Dean officiated and wedding music was rendered by the bride's cousin, Victor L. Foley, at the organ.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a floor length white crystallette gown in the sheath lines with a high neckline accented with cut-out guipure lace as were the long lily-point sleeves. Appliques of matching lace were scattered throughout the skirt and a band of the same formed an inverted V. The chapel length train edged with guipure lace flowed from the shoulders. A Juliet cap in tiers of small daisies with seed pearl centres held in place a four-tier English veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of white and red roses and pink carnations with stephanotis and English ivy.

The maid of honor Miss Judy Barlow of Belleville wore a full length gown in pink cashmere crepe featuring a burgandy velvet bodice ruffled at the wrists and neckline, the empire waistline was accented with a pink satin sash. She carried a bouquet of pink roses with white and burgandy colored carnations.

The little flower girl was Meredith Foley, sister of the bride. She wore a pure white organza dress embossed with tiny pink rosebuds. The Victorian neckline, short full skirt and puffed sleeves were trimmed with lace. A soft pink sash accented the waistline. She carried a nosegay of pink carnations and white mums.

The best man was George Beatty of Lindsay and the usher was Bob Wager of Belleville. Peter Evenden of Toronto, uncle of the bride, was toastmaster.

Attending the wedding were the bride's grandmother Mrs. C. Stokes and the bridegroom's grandmother Mrs. E. Leigh.

A reception was held at the Officers' Mess Belleville Armory. Guests were greeted by the bride's mother who wore an ivory silk chiffon dress with long sheer sleeves gathered at the wrists. She carried a purse corsage of bridal pink roses and stephanotis. Assisting her was the bridegroom's mother in a dress and coat ensemble in off-white crimplene with a multi-colored silk scarf at the neckline and a corsage of red roses.

For the flight to California the bride chose an airforce-blue wool suit with a striped blazer jacket worn with a red turtle neck sweater and a corsage of white daisies.

Mr. and Mrs. Leigh will reside in Los Angeles, U.S.A.

Food for Thought on Walls of Common Room

By DORIS CLARK

"When through too man a little more love and goodness, a little more light and truth comes into the world, then that man's life has had meaning!" — Alfred Delp.

Such is the message contained in a colorful poster in the common room of the Maritime School of Social Work, Dalhousie University, Halifax. I visited Professor David Critchley there on my recent trip to the East Coast.

I had a few minutes to wait and my eyes wandered around the other walls of the room. I found another one:

"A person is constantly called upon to create his own future." — Georgy Baino

I remarked on these and other posters equally delightful, and Critchley explained that the old traditional paintings hadn't seemed to brighten up the room much.

He failed to mention what was paramount to me — that these and similar mottos would work their way into the consciousness of the students who were seeking meaning in life and who were indeed being called upon to create their futures.

But sage quotations like these carry an important message for all of us.

Dear Doris: I've been going out with this man for four years. My oldest daughter is graduating this fall and asked him to come with me to her graduation exercises. She spoke of ordering flowers, and a white carnation for him, and he said: "Don't put the buggy before the horse."

It's bad enough when he refuses to take me out uptown but when he thinks twice about going with me to my daughter's graduation it is just too much for me. I told him if that's how he feels about my daughter's graduation, then he could forget about me. Is it normal or natural for a man not to want to go to his girl friend's daughter's graduation exercises.

We are both separated from our spouses, he has two boys, I have four children. Would it be wrong if I asked my daughter's best friend's father to be my escort? He is a widower. Or should I take another lady for company or go by myself? — Be Frank

Dear Be Frank: Has it occurred to you that separation is not divorce, and that your B.F. may be self-conscious about your relationship? Graduation is a family affair and with a carnation in his buttonhole he doubtless feels he would be masquerading as your girl's father — or at least a favorite uncle.

If he seems to object to belonging to you, bridge with a draw a little. Get the widower to take you — and please omit the carnation!

Dear Doris: About the mother who has a son 15, who keeps closing the drapes and acting in a peculiar way; I, too, had a son that acted the same way at 15. Our family doctor said he ought to see a psychiatrist. My mother opposed it and we did not go to one.

A year later he became violent and had to be placed in a mental institution. Now he is 34, still mentally ill, and psychiatrists tell me if he had been taken a year earlier he would probably be cured today.

So tell "Problem" to take her son to a psychiatrist as soon as possible. It is too late for me, but it is not too late for her. — A Mother Who Knows

Dear Mother: I'll write to "Problem" at once with your story. Yours is the second letter bearing a warning based on personal experience. Symptoms of paranoid schizophrenia are not to be trifled with.

Doris cannot begin to answer all your questions in the column. To make sure of your reply, remember to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Letter from 'Musty Reader' Brings Host of Replies

Dear Readers: Recently I printed a letter signed Musty Reader. He complained that today's youth has been pampered, petted, plied with toys, hikes, transistors, cars, boutique fashions and spending money. He described today's teen-agers as overschooled and underworked —wallowing in sugar and spice and everything thrice. "When the fun of youth fades and the years pile up, when indulgent parents are gone, what resources will be theirs?" he asks. "What inner strength to draw on in time of crisis? What gifts to give the world? What legacy to leave to those unborn?" His final thrust: "Has any generation ever had so much, for so little, in a world lived in by so many?"

I invited responses to hoset provocative questions and they came by the thousands. Here's a sampling:

From Spokane: "'Musty' has been rubbing shoulders with the upper half of one-half per cent. Toys? Bikes? Transistors? Cars? Boutique fashions? My parents didn't have the money to buy me glasses last year. I am 15 and I've never had a pair of new shoes. Where did 'Musty' do his research? At the Scarsdale Country Club?

From Harvey, Ill.: "If the youth of today is spoiled rotten, I'd like to know who spoiled 'em. It's not their fault that their parents are pushovers."

Plainfield, N.J.: "What legacy of hope will the young generation leave the world? What did you leave, 'Musty'? Nuclear warfare and mercury poisoning. Ill, won't be hard to improve on your record."

From Waco, Texas: "So today's youth is overindulged, petted, is it? Try telling that to the boys who went to Vietnam —or better yet, tell it to a wife whose husband never made it back."

From Grosse Point, Mich.: "What happened to you people who grew up dirt-poor and clawed your way to the top? From where I sit I see golf, poker, boozing, wife-swapping, divorce, face-lifts, tranquillizers, a two-car garage and a station wagon in the driveway."

Abilene, Kansas: "I get furious when I hear teen-agers criticized because they are lazy. Do you know how many kids tried all summer to get a job— any kind of a job—and the answer was, 'Sorry, ——nothing.' I agree that idleness is bad for kids; but in most cases it's not their fault."

Minneapolis: "'Musty' didn't have the problems that 'better' communications have brought us—such as 'Is God dead?' 'Do Are drugs the answer?' And 'Is pre-marital sex right or wrong?' It's a different world today and a lot tougher to grow up straight and strong."

Boston: "If being "spoiled" means getting loaded down with things, things and more things instead of attention and love from our parents, so be it. Somehow I'd rather have had the attention and love."

From Richmond, Va.: "Underworked? This morning before I walked 2½ miles to school I slopped the hogs, gathered eggs, fed the chickens and milked two cows. I had to get up at 5 a.m. After school I'll be helping mom with the ironing and canning. I'm not complaining, just setting the record straight."

From Salt Lake City: "'Musty,' old dear, you don't know how lucky you were to have grown up in the good old days when all a kid had to worry about was money. We've got the bomb, pollution, race riots and drugs. Thanks for all the goodies. I hope there's a world left to hand down to our children."

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1♣	2♥	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3♥	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead — queen of spades.

This deal occurred in the match between Italy and North America in 1967.

At the first table, with Kaplan and Kay North-South for the American team, the bidding unexpectedly died at three hearts and Kay made the contract with two overtricks for a score of 200 points.

West led the queen of spades. Kay won in dummy and led a club, losing to East's singleton ace. East returned a heart to the ace and, when declarer played a low club from dummy, East elected to ruff, whereupon South discarded a diamond.

East returned a trump and Kay made all the rest by a squeeze when he ran all his trumps and eventually made life extremely uncomfortable for East.

The failure to arrive at game appeared to represent a substantial loss to the American team, but at the second table the American East-West pair (Roth and Root) saved the day when they collaborated beautifully to defeat four hearts.

Root led a low diamond and declarer (Garozzo) went up with the ace and returned a club. Roth took the ace and led the nine of hearts. Garozzo won with the queen and tried to cash the queen of clubs.

Roth ruffed with the ten, whereupon Garozzo overruffed, cashed the K-A of spades, and tried to ruff a spade. Rot Root ruffed with the jack, led a diamond, and Roth's trump return knocked Garozzo out of the box. He had to lose a spade trick and go down one.

So the Americans gained 250 points on the deal, but, actually, they were on the edge of a precipice at both tables.

Tomorrow: Card reading.

Kosygin's Assailant Heads Hungarian Body

TORONTO (CP) — Geza Matrai, 37, charged with assaulting Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin last month, was elected secretary-general of the Hungarian Freedom Fighters of Canada Saturday night.

Matrai, vice-president of the Social Credit Association of Ontario, has been remanded to Dec. 23 and is free on $1,000 bail.

He was charged Oct. 18 after Mr. Kosygin was attacked while walking on Parliament Hill with Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

Matrai, who came to Toronto two years ago from Edmonton, was president of the Hungarian Freedom Fighters Youth group in that city.

He emigrated to Canada from Hungary in 1956.

Stanfield Predicts Victory

HAMILTON (CP) — Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield predicted Sunday that his party will win the next federal election.

"I certainly think we can win it," he told about 40 party members. "We will have to show a lot of fight and spirit, but I think they (the Liberals) can be had."

He told members of the Hamilton West Progressive Conservative Association that he is encouraged by recent Conservative wins in provincial elections in Newfoundland, New Brunswick, Alberta and Ontario.

What the Stars Say

Tuesday, November 16

Aries (March 21-April 19). The ability to come to quick conclusions is a valuable asset when you have to plunge into an unknown area. Equally unprepared competitors who just rely on guessing can't match you.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). By providing a back-up system, whether it's a spare tire or a flashlight when the fuses blow, you can sidestep the irritating consequences of an unexpected breakdown today.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). It's your turn to say "I told you so" to a close ally who's been playing with fire. Chances are that mate will listen a whole lot closer in the future.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). Playing do-it-yourself doctor with homemade recipes to cure your ills stimulates a positive ailment to an acute stage. Seek professional advice.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). You may be wishing you'd kept one relationship on a platonic level before the week is out. Romantic entanglements, especially with co-workers, prove impossible to handle discreetly.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Fast-rising competitors you've viewed with an envious eye can be the ones who wish they were in your shoes today. Your career status is solid, theirs is slipping.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). It would be to your advantage to heed the warnings of experienced persons, even if their advice would temporarily call a halt to plans. Play it safe.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). You can be wishing you'd saved when expensive emergencies place you in a financial jam. It will be difficult to raise cash, procure loans.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Regardless of your position in business circles or private life, it would be unwise to rely on others to handle the details. You're being tricked.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Behind-the-scenes activity gets spotlight coverage now due to a careless lack of discretion. Outsiders would have to be blind or stupid not to see what's going on.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Applied teamwork may be keeping relationships with co-workers on a smooth keel, but you're sacrificing your own talents and abilities as a result. Try to stand out.

OLD BEFORE THEIR TIME

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The average 65-year-old is physically about 60 years old, Allan Scott, director of testing and research at the Fitness Institute in Toronto, told a local business association recently. He also said the average 35-year-old is physically middle-aged.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). A self-administered pep talk should become a daily habit from now on. Minor, temporary setbacks in career can eat away at your self-confidence. Keep plugging away.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY — There's a bottom to the pot of gold you receive shortly and unless some strict limits are imposed on spending, accounts will be empty when you really need the cash. Mid-April's the date.

Heartburn Has Several Causes

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My stomach burns most of the time and I have been x-rayed for ulcers and gall bladder, but the x-rays were normal.

My doctor said I might have an ulcer that doesn't show or that there was too much acid in my stomach. I am now on a bland diet. Is it possible to have an ulcer without its showing on x-ray?

The doctor said if I didn't hurt an ulcer, it would turn into one if I don't control the acid in my stomach. Is there any way to control it?—H.D.

Sounds like heartburn—which is a burning sensation in the area of the lower part of the breastbone. (Despite its name, it has nothing to do with the heart.)

Common causes of heartburn, which is a pretty common ailment, are excess acid in the stomach; regurgitation of stomach contents into the lower gullet (esophagus); the regurgitation of bile when the outlet of the stomach is incompetent; belching. Hiatal hernia also can cause heartburn, and a special technique is required to show that with x-ray, but I trust that was part of your examination.

Only a very small percentage of ulcers (2 per cent or less) are missed by x-ray, and anyway the gnawing pain of an ulcer is usually lower down than the site of heartburn misery.

However, excess acid or regurgitation of stomach contents carries the possibility of developing an ulcer, so you have more than one reason for wanting to get at the root of your trouble.

Since your trouble continues, you evidently have not got at the basic trouble. Therefore, further examination is in order.

Continue the bland diet, for that is one step in combating excess acid, but there are other ways. Possibly smaller, more frequent feedings (say milk between meals) may help.

Antacid medications taken an hour after meals can reduce acidity, but that doesn't get at the basic trouble.

If regurgitation is the real problem, remember that obesity plays a role; too much fat in the abdomen exerts pressure. Losing weight gives relief. Or, if you are an air-swallower and belch quite a lot, then make yourself eat more slowly. (And don't gulp when you drink.)

Hypoglycemia and some other conditions can contribute to heartburn, but first I'd take a thorough look at the suggestions I've already made.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been reading that the IUD (intra-uterine device) surpasses favorably with the birth control pill in effectiveness.

Let's get down to the nitty-gritty. Has there been a known case where a woman using an IUD has become pregnant? I am too old to take any chances at all.—Mrs. J. A.

It's true that the coil, or IUD, compares favorably with the pill—meaning that it is pretty reliable but not quite as. Yes, there have been pregnancies by women using an IUD.

Last figures I saw said that the pill, properly used and no forgetfulness, was virtually 100 per cent effective; the IUD something like 96 or 97 per cent.

Butkus Switches From Back Breaker to Game Breaker

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I never scored on a screwier play," Chicago's Dick Butkus says. It was his one play in a slightly screwy day that did all sorts of strange things to the National Football League standings.

The Bears' big linebacker found himself the offensive star of Sunday's 16-13 victory over Washington Redskins when he grabbed a deflected pass Bobby Douglass pass on a broken point-after-touchdown play.

Cyril Pinder had been up the middle for a 46-yard scoring run that knotted the game early in the fourth quarter. But the snap back to Douglass on the attempted conversion by Mac Percival squirted away and Douglass scooped it up on the run at Washington's 30-yard line.

"When I saw Douglass scrambling around I went down looking for a pass," said Butkus, eligible since he was a backfield blocker on the conversion play. His wild waving caught Douglass' eye, then Butkus caught the wobbling pass that won the game.

Pinder's run provided the game's only touchdown as the Bears and Redskins scored the rest of their points on an NFL record-tying eight field goals, three by Percival of 9, 15 and 42 yards and five by Washington's Curt Knight, from 30, 12, 37, 9 and 27 yards out.

The outcome kept the surprising Bears within a game of first-place Minnesota in the National Conference's Central Division and sliced the Skins' lead over Atlanta in the East to one-half game.

In Sunday's other action, New Orleans Saints upset San Francisco 49ers 26-20, Minnesota Vikings nosed out Green Bay Packers 3-0, Dallas Cowboys defeated Philadelphia Eagles 20-7, Miami Dolphins edged Pittsburgh Steelers 24-21, Baltimore Colts nipped New York Jets 14-13, Los Angeles Rams tripped Detroit Lions 21-13, New England Patriots outlasted Buffalo Bills 38-33, Oakland Raiders walloped Houston Oilers 41-21, Kansas City Chiefs tamed Cleveland Browns 13-7, New York Giants beat Atlanta Falcons 21-17 and Cincinnati Bengals whipped Denver Broncos 24-10.

In tonight's televised game, St. Louis Cardinals take on San Diego Chargers.

"This team is getting better as it goes along," New Orleans coach J. D. Roberts said after his quarterback, Ed Hargett, threw his third touchdown pass, a 15-yarder, to Virgil Robinson with 37 seconds remaining.

Hargett completed 13 of 21 passes without blowing an interception, finishing with 225 aerial yards against the usually-fierce San Francisco defense.

"This is the most frustrating game I've ever been involved with," coach Dan Devine said after the Vikings and the his Packers, winning on Fred Cox's 35-yard field goal with 4:58 to play.

Devine also did it for the Packers, who recovered three fumbles and intercepted two passes. Diane Thomas scored on runs of one and 13 yards for Dallas.

The Dolphins remained half a game ahead of Baltimore in the American Conference East as Bob Griese fired touchdown strikes of 12, 86 and 60 yards to Paul Warfield.

The Colts, getting a pair of third-quarter touchdowns on drives directed by Johnny Unitas, beat the Jets as Ted Hendricks blocked a conversion attempt by Bobby Howfield on New York's second touchdown.

The Rams moved within half a game of the 49ers in the NFC West as Roman Gabriel fired scoring passes of 14 and 23 yards to Lance Rentzel against the Lions.

Rookie quarterback Jim Plunkett threw four touchdowns passes for the Patriots as the winless Bills absorbed their ninth setback.

Oakland retained its half-game AFC West margin over Kansas City as Daryle Lamonica threw 63- and 36-yard touchdown passes to Drew Buie and Pete Banaszak plunged over twice from one yard out in the Raiders' rout of the Oilers.

Jan Stenerud's two field goals and Len Dawson's touchdown toss to Wendell Hayes provided the Chiefs with their margin of victory.

Fran Tarkenton, refusing to settle for a tie on an easy field goal, gambled on a fourth-down play in the closing seconds and pulled it off as he ran for the two-yard touchdown that gave the Giants the edge over the Falcons.

The Bengals broke a seven-game losing streak as Virgil Carter unleashed touchdown bombs of 72 yards to Bruce Coslet and 67 to Essex Johnson in breaking the Broncos.

Stamps Strike First

CALGARY (CP) — Interceptions played a major role this season for Calgary Stampeders.

It wasn't any different Saturday as they picked off four passes for a come-from-behind 20-21 win over Saskatchewan Roughriders in the opening game of the best-of-three Western Football Conference final.

The second game is scheduled for Regina Wednesday night with the third, if necessary, in Calgary Sunday afternoon.

End Jon Henderson, a late-season acquisition, said the big play was "my room-mate's interception."

"As soon as he intercepted that ball and ran it back I was sure we were going to win."

He was referring to Reggie Holmes who intercepted a pass thrown by Saskatchewan quarterback Ron Lancaster and ran it back for a 75-yard touchdown at 5:33 of the fourth quarter.

It inspired the Stampeders who trailed 21-10 after three quarters following two touchdowns by hard-running George Reed and another by halfback Bobby Thompson.

During regular-season play, the Stampeders intercepted 35 passes for 596 yards, best in the Canadian Football League this year and 28 yards short of the record set by Toronto Argonauts in 1954.

The Stampeders engineered the comeback through a shroud of fog which moved into McMahon Stadium early in the game.

The victory ended a late-season slump of only one win and a tie in Calgary's last seven league games, a slump which almost cost them first place. It also was the first time the Stampeders have defeated the Roughriders on home field, excluding an exhibition victory earlier this season, in seven games at McMahon—dating back to the 1969 playoffs.

Flanker Gerry Shaw, with his second touchdown of the game, got the winning points for Calgary when he took a 35-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Jerry Keeling with less than three minutes remaining.

Shaw scored only three touchdowns in 16 league games while catching 30 passes for 478 yards.

Larry Robinson, who intercepted a Lancaster pass late in the fourth quarter with Calgary leading 27-21, completed the scoring with three field goals and three converts.

His interception set up the final field goal from 39 yards out at 14:38 of the fourth quarter.

Jack Abendschan converted the three Saskatchewan touchdowns.

Rams Ram Burlington

HAMILTON (CP) — "The greatest team ever in junior football in Canada," was the way Gord Currie saw Regina Rams after they humiliated Burlington Braves for the second straight year, 42-13, to win the Canadian junior football title.

Currie was somewhat prejudiced in his assessment. He coaches the Rams. But few of the 2,000 at Ivor Wynne Stadium Saturday would dispute it.

The Reginans literally bulldozed the Burlington defences for 603 yards on the ground, led by Gord Glass's 182 yards. The Rams' marksmore was called on 28 times to carry the ball and was an easy choice as the game's most valuable player.

His running mates in the Regina backfield also produced more than 100 yards rushing. Kim Zoda, a speedster, went 109 yards off eight carries and John Broderick 102 in 15 tries.

It was the third time in as many meetings in the national finals the heavier Rams have beaten Burlington. The 1967 and 1970 games were played in Regina's Taylor Field.

But the difference between his 1970 club, that walloped the Braves 39-8, was the ability of this year's team to execute a more varied offence with better precision.

Flanker Steve Mazurak scored three Regina touchdowns and passed to Zoda for another. Glass and Broderick accounted for the other major scores.

Stoney Treleaven, who averaged 31.6 yards punting in his socks, donned his boots to kick two singles on missed field goals and converted four of the six touchdowns.

Ian Harrison converted Burlington's lone touchdown, by Bill Harrison, and kicked two field goals.

Win Opener 23-8

Argos Convert Ti-Cat Miscues

HAMILTON (CP) — Toronto Argonauts' ability to capitalize on Hamilton's defensive lapses and Tommy Joe Coffey's inability to toe the ball between the uprights sent the Tiger-Cats spinning to a 23-8 loss in the opening game of the Eastern Football Conference's two-game final Sunday.

The loss now carry a 15-point lead into the second game at Toronto's CNE Stadium next Saturday.

Argos victimized defensive half Al Brenner for a 32-yard scoring toss to Jim Henderson for one touchdown, then Joe Theismann's knack for getting the flow of play in one direction opened up a big hole for the quarterback to race 36 yards to set up another major score by Bill Symons.

And Coffey, whose uncanny ability to kick placements from anywhere inside the opposition's 40-yard line made him Hamilton's most feared offence, suddenly went flat in the second quarter and missed four field goal attempts in a row, the longest from Toronto's 47-yard line.

Three of his efforts, from 30, 15 and 20 yards out, were wide and accounted for singles.

Hamilton quarterback Wally Gabler kept the Argo defences honest with his variation of plays but was unable to move the team in for a major score despite getting Hamilton inside Toronto's 25-yard line four times in the second quarter.

"Hell, we should have had 28 points at least in the first half," an exhibitant coach Al Dorow said in a post-game interview. "We're lucky we're not further down the way the breaks went against us."

Dorow's frustrations were not directed entirely at his players. He had some unkindly remarks for the game officials who assessed Ticats 84 yards in penalties to Toronto's 65.

"I made a big mistake today in not going to talk to the officials like I did in Toronto," Dorov said.

Dorow didn't fault Coffey's kicking, explaining that the all-time Canadian Football League scoring leader has a bad knee.

"They have been taking 90 cc. of fluid out of his knee every week for the past month," said the Ticat coach.

Ivan MacMillan, Argo's 19-year-old placekicking specialist, added eight points, converting both touchdowns and kicking field goals of 29 and 41 yards. Bruno Andrzejczyk's punt single and a safety that opened up a 2-0 Toronto lead when Gabler was spilled in the Hamilton end by George Wells completed the Toronto scoring.

Coffey, whose 25-yard field goal put the Ticats on the scoreboard near the end of the first quarter after Toronto had taken a 12-0 lead, had six points, Paul McKay's two punt singles in the fourth quarter accounted for the other Hamilton scores.

Hamilton's defence, normally immune to mistakes and responsible for the Ticats making the playoffs, finally came up with a bad game.

Brenner committed a cardinal sin for defensive halfbacks by following the flow of play to one side of the field and leaving his coverage area open on Henderson's touchdown.

He still might have recovered to protect against Theismann's floating pass but tripped up on the artificial turf at Ivor Wynne Stadium.

In the third quarter, with the score 13-6, Hamilton's John Williams returned an interception of a Theismann pass 42 yards to the Argo 45, only to have the play nullified by a roughing call against team-mate Mike Blum at the line of scrimmage.

Toronto continued moving in for MacMillan's second field goal.

Four minutes later, with what should have been a third-and-nine situation for Argos at Hamilton's 20, Williams grabbed Symons's fan mask and the resulting penalty led to Symon's one-yard dive.

Toronto captain Mel Profit gave Theismann the game ball in the jubilant Argo dressing room.

But the rookie from Notre Dame realized he made several mistakes that might have been disastrous, which included throwing three interceptions other than the one Williams returned.

"The game ball belongs to the whole team," replied Theismann as he accepted the presentation.

"They all deserve as much credit for the win."

Toronto coach Leo Cahill agreed. His applause went to the Argo's defensive front four, especially Jim Corrigall and Jim Stillwagon who rolled away from their blocks and gave hot pursuit to either Gabler or the ball carrier.

Stillwagon and linebacker Gene Mack suffered injuries in the game but are expected to play next Saturday.

Stillwagon has been hampered by a recurring knee injury. He didn't aggravate it against the Ticats, but came up with another knee injury unrelated to the original one.

Hornets Still Buzzing In Win Over Quintes

GALT (Special) — The Belleville Quintes appear to have stirred a Hornet's nest with their 5-2 win over Galt three weeks ago.

Since then the defending Allan Cup champions have administered three consecutive losses to the Quintes, with the latest coming in the form of a 4-1 setback Saturday night.

Despite being outshot Belleville managed to emerge with a scoreless tie in the opening 20 minutes of Saturday's game as Steve Rexe turned aside 10 shots, while Galt's Sonny Pennington was tested only three times.

Galt quickly made amends in the second period, however with team captain Vance Millar clicking after 42 seconds of play. A pair of tallies by Bruce Reier upped the count to 3-0 after less than six minutes of play in that frame.

GREG MARCHEN

Belleville finally hit the scoreboard at 15.14 of the middle period when defenceman Greg Marchen tallied his team's only goal. Skeeter Teal counted the only goal of the third period for Galt.

The winners held a wide territorial edge pumping 38 shots at Rexe as compared to only 19 directed at the Galt eage. The Quintes drew seven of the game's 10 penalties including fighting majors to Doug Potts and Galt's Billi Hway.

The three losses to Galt, coupled with a pair of setbacks at the hands of Orillia have dropped the Quintes from first to sixth place in the OHA Senior A standings.

Belleville will attempt to snap their five game losing streak when they travel to Barrie this Friday. The teams return here Saturday night for an 8 p.m. game at the Memorial Arena.

Kings Routed 11-2

Is the Big Bruin Machine Finally Tuned Up?

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When either Bobby Orr or Phil Esposito is hot, Boston Bruins are a team to be reckoned with in the National Hockey League.

When both are on the firing line, as they were Sunday night, the Bruins give every impression they're ready to be the strike force that shattered most of the league's offensive marks last year.

Orr, Boston's 24-year-old defenceman, scored three goals in one game for the second time in his career and assisted on three others while Esposito, the record-setting shooter of a year ago, added two more in Bruins' 11-3 rout of Los Angeles Kings.

In other games Sunday, New York Rangers beat Vancouver Canucks 6-1, Chicago Black Hawks downed California Golden Seals 4-1, Montreal Canadiens were held to a 2-2 tie by Buffalo Sabres and Toronto Maple Leafs and Philadelphia Flyers skated to a 3-3 tie.

In play Saturday, Montreal beat Minnesota North Stars and Gump Worsley 5-1, Toronto and Vancouver played to a 3-2 stalemate, New York topped Buffalo 5-2 in an afternoon game, Detroit Red Wings downed Philadelphia 6-3, Pittsburgh Penguins defeated Los Angeles 6-4 and St. Louis Blues upset California 5-1.

Esposito riddled NHL goalies for 76 goals and 133 points last year as the Bruins scored 399 the opposition. Orr was runner-up with 37 goals and 139 points.

But the Bruin shooters, including wingers Ken Hodge and Ken Hodge who each collected more than 100 points in the 1971 season, have been conspicuously silent this year and the Bruins have been operating on a shoestring offence. New York's fast start.

However, they gave evidence Sunday night they've not lost the scoring touch as they blistered Kings' goalie Gary Edwards with 35 shots.

"The kid had some boomers coming at him," said Boston coach Tom Johnson. "We've been having trouble clicking and really were firing away at him."

Esposito, who also picked up three assists and was on for eight of the Boston goals, has more than Orr, found a change of linemates to his liking.

With left winger Wayne Cashman injured, Johnson sat Hodge on the bench and had Esposito centring veteran Ed Westfall and Mike Walton. Johnson also found the pairings to his advantage. He connected for his fourth and fifth of the game.

Esposito's production moved him back into the individual scoring lead with 30 points, including 13 goals, and a two-point edge on Ranger linemates Rod Gilbert and Vic Hadfield.

The Boston outburst was the most productive night of the season for any NHL team and kept the Bruins within striking distance of both New York and Montreal in the East Division.

New York has 26 points, Montreal 25 and Boston 21. Toronto is fourth another six points back.

The Rangers shelled Vancouver goalie George Gardner with 32 shots. Bobby Rousseau's two goals gave him eight for the year—he scored four for Minnesota all last season—and extended New York's unbeaten string to 14 games, matching the streak they put together two years ago.

The club record of 19 without a loss was set in the 1939-40 schedule which, coincidentally, was the last time Rangers won the Stanley Cup.

New York goalie Gilles Villemeure, who has allowed just 10 goals in 24 periods this year, is the NHL's only unbeaten goaltender following Worsley's loss in Minnesota Saturday night.

Villemure has won six and tied two of his eight starts.

Marc Tardif's 11th goal of the season, with about two minutes left in the game, was the equalizer for Montreal at Buffalo.

Canadiens' Frank Mahovlich, the league's leading goal scorer with 15, was ejected from the game and a messed up automatic $100 fine early in the third period for protesting a minor penalty to team-mate J. C. Tremblay.

Toronto Leafs' goals by Pit Martin, Stan Mikita, Cliff Koroll and Bobby Hull lifted Chicago past the Golden Seals after rookie goaltender Gilles Meloche had stymied the Black Hawks shooters in the early period.

Tony Esposito was back in the Chicago goal after a four-game absence, while recovering from an injured finger and said he was nervous in the first period when the Seals got their only goal, by Stan Gilbertson.

Norm Ullman's second goal of the game at 19 Philadelphia lifted Toronto into a tie.

The score effect what Flyer captain Ed Van Impe hoped would be an occasion for celebration. The Philadelphia ace scored a 50-foot blooper that went in off a Leaf defenceman's skate—his first goal in 177 league games—that sent the homebrew Flyers into a 3-2 second-period lead.

Van Impe last scored, he did it twice, against Boston on Feb. 8, 1969.

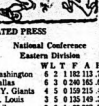
Bears and Mustangs In College Final

EDMONTON (CP) — Fumbles, interceptions and the power of the University of Alberta Golden Bears combined to defeat Bishop's College Gaiters 53-2 in the Western College Bowl Sunday.

The Bears now will meet University of Western Ontario Mustangs who defeated St. Mary's University Huskies 46-13 Saturday, in the Canadian intercollegiate football championship game at Toronto next Saturday.

Ranked No. 1 in Canadian college football, the Golden Gaiters, Lennoxville, Que., were never really in the game against their Edmonton-based opponents as the Bears almost scored at will. The Gaiters' deepest penetration into Edmonton territory was to the Bears' 39-yard line.

A bad snap that forced Edmonton punter Percy Kosak to concede a safety late in the second quarter gave the Gaiters their only points.



Alberta, which took the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship with a 6-3 record, scored six touchdowns, three field goals and a safety while Bishop's failed in every statistic.

Halfback Rick Skinner led the Bears' offence with 171 yards rushing, including an 8-yard touchdown early in the second quarter.

Alberta quarterback Don Tallas, alternating with Joe Petrone, added four field goals and one touchdown.

Petrone also kicked nine converts in four field goal attempts and didn't miss a convert.

Oaks Move Into 2nd Place

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oakville Oaks moved into second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A division Sunday with an 8-5 win over Kingston Aces on home ice. In other Sunday action, Woodstock Royals downed Orilla Terriers 6-5.

Kingston led by two goals after the first period but Oakville scored five times in the second.

Fraser Rice led the Oaks with three goals. Cal Russell, Frank Hincks, Jim O'Brien, Mike Corbett and Duncan Macdonald had one each. Charlie Condery got in three for the losers, Mike Flamingan and Al Duncan each added one.

Barrie Flyers, idle during the weekend, slipped from second to third spot in league standings.

Galt Hornets continued in first place with a 4-1 victory Saturday over fifth-place Belleville Quintes. Galt has two games in hand over all the other teams.

Bruce Reier paced the Hornets with two goals and Vance Miller and Skeeter Teal scored the others while Greg Marchen tallied for Belleville.

In Sunday's other game, at Woodstock, Gene McLaren scored a tie-breaker late in the third period, his second goal of the night. That left the teams locked in fourth position.

Mac Westgate also scored twice for Royals and Don Kuboka and Mark Martz once each.

Grant Moore put in two for Orillia and singles went to Al Osborne, Charlie Cipolla and Jon Weeks.

Last-place Owen Sound Crescents eked out a 5-4 win over Oakville Saturday night while playing coach Dave McComb scoring twice, Bob Dube, Yvan Fournier and Bob Tunstead added one apiece.

Ron Patterson stopped 40 shots, but Fraser Rice beat him twice and Cal Russell and Frank Hincks tallied the others.

All teams rest tonight and Woodstock takes on Galt at Galt Tuesday.

Nicklaus Wins Cup, Trevino Gets Service

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus hugged the solid silver international cup presented to the low scorer in the World Cup golf championships and said it he wished "it didn't exist."

Lee Trevino, one-time $30-a-week driving range attendant, was being served beer and having cigarettes lit by a billionaire.

The two United States' golfers finished ahead of teams from 45 other nations Sunday, shooting a 21-under-par total of 555 at PGA National Club.

Nicklaus finished with a personal 17-under-par 271.

"The individual award should be eliminated from the World Cup," said Nicklaus. "It's a team tournament and no one person should be allowed to steal the show."

South Africa was the runner-up, 12 shots behind the U.S.

New Zealand was two strokes farther back in third at 569.

Gary Player had led the South African challenge for two days with 69-67, but the Golden Bear's incredible 63 on Saturday made it a meaningless Sunday as the Americans coasted to victory.

Canada's entry of Moe Norman, Gilford, Ont., and Winnipeg's Wil Homenuik were well down in the individual standings.

Norman, at 291, was 20 strokes off the winning pace while Homenuik was another stroke back.

John D. MacArthur, tournament host and one of the world's 10 richest men, climbed to the podium and delivered Trevino's requested beer. Lee then had MacArthur light him a cigarette.

Alcindor the Same No Matter the Name

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Although the name has changed since last season, the leading scorer in the National Basketball Association is still the same.

Last season, he went under the name Lew Alcindor. This season, he is using his Islamic name, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

As Kareem or Jabbar, the 7-foot-2 Milwaukee centre is the most important figure in the league. He reinforced that Sunday night, scoring 41 points—the high in the league this season—in leading the rampaging Bucks to a 125-114 victory over Philadelphia 76ers.

In other games Sunday, Phoenix Suns trimmed Cleveland Cavaliers 119-105 and Los Angeles Lakers beat Boston Celtics 126-115.

In the NBA Saturday, New York Knicks trimmed Detroit Pistons 127-105, Milwaukee defeated Buffalo Braves 127-106, Chicago Bulls outlasted Houston Rockets 111-102, Baltimore Bullets edged Philadelphia 76ers 111-105, Seattle SuperSonics downed Boston 118-112 and Los Angeles rolled over Portland Trail Blazers 130-109.

Milwaukee's victory was its eighth in a row and raised the Bucks' record to 9-1.

Against Philadelphia, Jabbar scored 18 of his points in the last quarter to blunt the 76ers' comeback bid.

Los Angeles' Wilt Chamberlain, the greatest scorer in the league's history, collected only three points against Boston. But the Lakers' powerful 7-2 centre did just about everything else, hauling in 31 rebounds, banding off for 10 assists and blocking 13 shots as the Lakers posted their eighth consecutive victory and 13th in 16 games.

Fairways Win 7-6 Junior B Squeaker

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

"I just had a feeling about this game," related Bellevile Fairways coach Murray Hamlin after last night's encounter with the Gananoque G-Men. The feeling isn't exactly a new one. General Custer felt the same way about Indian summer and Napoleon probably had the same feeling, about visiting Moscow.

Hunter's charges emerged in much better shape than some other leaders who have sensed that something was not quite right about an upcoming campaign. The Fairways finally managed to stumble to a 7-6 win over the winless G-Men to keep them winless.

"I knew they'd be hungry for that first two points," explained the Belleville coach. "It's funny, we've played some good hockey games this season and lost, while the three games we've won have probably been our worst of the season."

Last night's contest certainly wasn't geared towards hockey purists, but if you liked scoring and sparring, there was plenty of both. The 13 goals, 11 minor penalties, eight majors, two misconducts and a pair of game misconducts bore testimony to that fact.

The home team received an indication of things to come at the mid-point of the opening period when Larry Wyborn's pass drive caromed off the end boards, hit Belleville goalie Bob Harrison and popped into the net, giving Gananoque a 1-0 lead.

The Belleville netminder had troubles of a different nature in the second period, reviving a game misconduct for his part in a second period brawl between John Mulvihill and Paul McLaughlin. Gananoque's Lew Jefferies was also handed during the same fracas.

The remaining 7:13 of the second period had to be played immediately prior to the final frame as the teams took an intermission to allow substitute goalie Bill Cormier time to don his equipment.

The Fairways appeared to be well in control of the game at the mid-point of the third period when Tim Yohn counted his second goal of the night to give his team a 6-4 lead.

Gananoque bounced back to narrow the gap to 6-5 on Bill Trusedall's second marker of the night and then pulled netminder Pete Rountree for an extra attacker in the final minute of play. The move back-fired however as Dave Smith counted the eventual winning goal into the empty net. Trusedall's third goal of the night with one second left to play accounted for the final 7-6 total.

Yohn, Smith and Jeff Howard each notched a pair of goals for the winners with the other going to defenceman Peter Ackerman, who performed well on the Belleville blue line. "I guess you'd have to say that as far as defensive play is concerned, he's been the best we've had this season," commented Hunter on the second-year rearguard.

Trusedall gave an outstanding performance for the losers with his three goal effort. Other Gananoque markers went to Wyborn, McLaughlin and Tom Mangan.

Goalie Pete Rountree also came up with a fine showing despite the loss. He faced a total of 45 shots compared to only 26 for the two Belleville netminders.

Garrett Shines Again

The St. Louis Blues have been playing up to their name this season with a dismal record of 4-10-1 leaving them only two points out of the basement in the NHL's western division.

However, the hockey blues certainly don't appear to be suffering John Garrett. Playing for Kansas City of the Central Hockey League, the Trenton native posted a 4-0 shutout over Oklahoma City Sunday.

The victory was the fourth in a row for Kansas City, while Garrett's effort was his second shutout in five nights for the third place Blues. Kansas City currently trails the second place Dallas Black Hawks by two points, while holding a three-point margin on Oklahoma City.

Loyalist Teams Continue Trends

Loyalist's varsity hockey team found things pretty hard to believe after their home opener Saturday while the basketball Lancers found their situation pretty hard to forget.

The Loyalist puckisters doubled their win output from last season by hanging an 8-3 loss on St. Lawrence at Kingston. It was the second victory in as many nights by the Lancers over St. Lawrence.

Reed Mallory and Ivan Stringer led the way for Loyalist with two goals each, while Gary Thompson, Mike and Bruce Desveaux connected for singles.

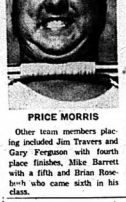
Netminder Bryan Helmer was another key to the win turning in a strong performance for Loyalist. The win marred by assessed nine of the game's 19 penalties.

In basketball action it was an entirely different story as St. Lawrence administered their second consecutive thrashing of the Lancers by a 146-36 count.

Once again, the talented Big Blue hoopsters placed eight men in the double scoring figures and appear to rank as one of the major powers in the Ontario College Athletic Association.

Henry Lukassen led the way for the winners with 21 points while Rick Webster counted 11 in a losing effort.

Morris Sets Senior Record In YMCA Weightlifting Meet



TORONTO (Special) — The Price was right for Belleville's Apollo Barbell Club at the Central YMCA open weightlifting championships this weekend.

Heavyweight Price Morris set a new Canadian senior mark with a 365 pound press en route to a 1099 winning total in the 242-pound weight class. The total by the veteran Belleville lifter was only 11 pounds short of the Canadian record held by Hamilton's Russ Prior.

While Morris was the only local athlete to emerge with a win against the 42 competitors from Ontario, Quebec and the United States who attended the meet, the Apollo's 11 man team managed to hold their own quite well.

Gary Walt placed second to his teammate in the 242-pound bracket with a lift of 930. Other second place finishes by club members went to Ron Hayes (123 lbs.) with a 523 total, Enos Evans (148 lbs.) with a 667 mark, Paul Barrett (165 lbs.) who hoisted 838 and Bob Walt (198 lbs.) with an 853 effort.

Art Walt managed a third place finish in the 181-pound group by totalling 837 for his three lifts.

PRICE MORRIS

Other team members placing included Jim Travers and Gary Ferguson with fourth place finishes, Mike Barrett with a fifth and Brian Rosebush who came sixth in his class.

Morris Sets Senior Record In YMCA Weightlifting Meet

TORONTO (Special) — The Price was right for Belleville's Apollo Barbell Club at the Central YMCA open weightlifting championships this weekend.

Heavyweight Price Morris set a new Canadian senior mark with a 365 pound press en route to a 1099 winning total in the 242-pound weight class. The total by the veteran Belleville lifter was only 11 pounds short of the Canadian record held by Hamilton's Russ Prior.

While Morris was the only local athlete to emerge with a win against the 42 competitors from Ontario, Quebec and the United States who attended the meet, the Apollo's 11 man team managed to hold their own quite well.

Gary Walt placed second to his teammate in the 242-pound bracket with a lift of 930. Other second place finishes by club members went to Ron Hayes (123 lbs.) with a 523 total, Enos Evans (148 lbs.) with a 667 mark, Paul Barrett (165 lbs.) who hoisted 838 and Bob Walt (198 lbs.) with an 853 effort.

Art Walt managed a third place finish in the 181-pound group by totalling 837 for his three lifts.

PRICE MORRIS

Other team members placing included Jim Travers and Gary Ferguson with fourth place finishes, Mike Barrett with a fifth and Brian Rosebush who came sixth in his class.

Calgary Man Faces Charge of Hijacking

CALGARY (CP) — A 27-year-old Calgary man, still in hospital with his head in bandages, has been charged with the hijacking Friday of an Air Canada jetliner.

The next move against Paul Joseph Cini, in police custody and under guard at the hospital, will depend on the courts and Attorney-General Merv Leitch, Cini, recovering satisfactorily" from concussion and a two-inch gash in his head—received at the hands of an axe-wielding member of the DC-8 crew—has been charged with "interfering with transportation facilities."

"That's all I can tell you," an RCMP officer said Sunday night, refusing even to tell reporters when the charge was laid. He would not speculate on when Cini might appear in court for arraignment.

Cini was removed from the aircraft early Saturday after it had spent 7½ hours on a zig-zag trip between Calgary and Great Falls, Mont., at the mercy of the hijacker.

The reign of terror ended just before midnight Friday night when veteran Captain Vernon Ehman of Montreal grabbed the hijacker by the throat after his attention had been diverted.

Captain Ehman told a Saturday morning news conference he shouted for help and chief purser John Arpin of Toronto jumped into the fight. But the hijacker "fought like a wild man."

Assistant purser Phillippe Bonny hit the man on the head with the flat side of a fire axe but the hijacker managed to get an arm free and reached for a pocket crying: "I'll blow you all up!"

Arpin grabbed the hijacker's hand as he tried to reach wires in the pocket, believed to be connected to the explosives; and the assistant purser hit him again, this time with the handle of the axe.

ON THE TRAIL OF LONG TOM — W. T. Cut
This is a fictional story, based on facts, of the Canadian Middle West in the early past and Chapters 1 and the other settlers. After 1867 Confederation brought changes, good and bad, against allowing married men to be ordained even in special circumstances. Another 97 recommended leaving the possibility open. They then decided to vote by secret ballot, divided views and left him to make a final decision.
It would be will not do to change the church's general law of celibacy. This, single men becoming priests, must pledge themselves to a life of celibacy as the price for receiving much challenged of late.
The overwhelming majority of bishops voted in favor of retaining the celibacy law in the Latin Rite part of the Catholic Church — by far the largest wing—while leaving a small section of the Eastern Catholic Church — the Eastern Rite to continue its historically traditional practice of permitting married clergy.
The only bishop to come out strongly in the debate in favor of optional celibacy was Bishop John Gran of Oslo, Norway.
Others open to the idea, but less radical, were the bishops from Canada and the Primate of Belgium. Leo Jozef Cardinal Suenens who has established a reputation for controversy in the church.
The question of celibacy and of a married clergy came during a two-week debate on one of the principal themes—The Crisis in the Priesthood—facing an ecumenical council of 2,000 members a year.
The other theme was Justice in the World, based on an enormous range of subjects, designed to give bishops an opportunity to suggest what their role in combatting injustice.
Discussion of both themes preceded the drafting of two final synod documents. Their texts were considered so unsatisfactory by many bishops and by Pope Paul himself that they were not officially published.
After being approved with a large number of papal and episcopal reservations, they were offered to the Pope as private documents for him to consult.

Pope Paul Facing Mountain of Advice

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — Pope Paul faces a mountain of conflicting advice on fundamental questions he now must sort out to decide the future course of the Roman Catholic Church.

For 38 days from Sept. 30 to Nov. 6, the world synod of Catholic bishops wrestled with the problems. Their discussions were sometimes confusing and their deliberations often reflected widely-varying opinions so much so that two final draft documents on the debate have not been made public officially.

The action Pope Paul eventually decides to take on the recommendations is crucial to the development of the church, covering such controversial questions as priestly celibacy, ordination of married men, the place of women in the church and society, social justice and political participation.

The synod of 210 participants from all over the world has delivered into the chief advisory body on the government of the Roman Catholic Church since Pope Paul revived it.

An early church institution, it lapsed after 1,000 years of functioning. Pope Paul called it into being again in 1967 to meet every two years and give him opinions on the most serious problems facing the church and its 600 million adherents.

The Pope, as head of the church, is not bound by the synod's deliberations but normally will try to translate their wishes into action.

This may not be so simple. The Pope must establish clearly, said a welter of differing views, just what the conclusions have been.

A large minority of synod members expressed reservations on most of the proposals discussed. All the documents and comments, as well as the proposals themselves, now are being studied by Vatican experts.

The Pope will have their analysis to help him decide how to act.

An illustration of his difficulties was highlighted by the discussion on whether married men should be ordained as priests where there was a grave shortage of clergy.

The bishops were so divided on the issue, which dominated much of the synod debate, that they could not present a simple opinion.

In their final vote, 107 came out against allowing married men to be ordained even in special circumstances. Another 97 recommended leaving the possibility open. They then decided to vote by secret ballot, divided views and left him to make a final decision.

It would be will not do to change the church's general law of celibacy. This, single men becoming priests, must pledge themselves to a life of celibacy as the price for receiving much challenged of late.

Aircraft Employees Will Vote

TORONTO (CP) — The 600-member office local of the United Auto Workers at Douglas Aircraft Co. of Canada Ltd. was to hold a ratification meeting this afternoon on a tentative settlement worked out Sunday.

But the 4,000-member production unit here was holding out for a better deal.

The company's offer was not made public.

But in Detroit, Leonard Woodcock, international UAW president, said the terms were within the framework of the 1970 automobile industry agreement which provided for improvements of about 30 per cent over three years.

That agreement was the goal of the union in negotiations with Douglas, a subsidiary of McDonnell Douglas in the United States. The Canadian settlement is expected to set a pattern for McDonnell Douglas contracts with 200,000 aerospace workers in the U.S.

Ken Bannon of Detroit, vice-president and director of the aerospace department of UAW, said Sunday eight negotiations between the company and production workers reached an impasse although the offer exceeded the 1970 auto workers agreement.

The production workers were apparently holding out for more money in the first year of the agreement, although they have been told no more money is available.

The company told bargainers Sunday it was prepared to make a modification in a non-monetary area if that would produce a settlement.

Miners Shun Pits

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — Thousands of miners refused to enter the pits today despite union and management agreement on a new three-year contract designed to end the longest U.S. coal strike since 1950.

Spot checks at major mines in West Virginia and the soft coal district of Western Pennsylvania showed no mines operating.

Miners who remained off the job said they would not resume work until the text and details of a new pact signed by negotiators for the United Mine Workers and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association in New York early Sunday. The industry says the pact will boost production cost $1.2 billion a year.

Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr., who helped negotiate the new contract, admitted its pay increase provisions were out of line with the federal pay board's guidelines of pay hikes of 5.5 per cent, but he said he was optimistic the miners will get what the contract calls for.

Joseph E. Moody, president of the industry association, said the pact would increase operators' labor costs by 20 per cent.

UMW President W. A. (Tony) Boyle pegged the increase at 36 per cent.

The pay provision, Moore said, calls for an increase of $18 a day, to $50, for mechanics, electricians and heavy equipment operators over the life of the contract. Other miners would go to $46 a day, a $9 daily increase.

Santa Visits Toronto

Led by his eight reindeer, Santa Claus makes an early stop in Toronto Saturday as he takes part in Toronto's annual Santa Claus parade. The parade, an annual event since 1905, featured 25 major floats, 14 military or high school bands and 1,000 marchers. (CP Photo)

Two Hong Kong Women to Be First Anglican Women Priests

LONDON (AP) — Two women — one Chinese, the other English — will become the first women priests in the Anglican Church, an official announcement said today.

They are Jane Hwang Hsien Yuen, 54, and Joyce Bennett, whose age was not disclosed. Both are to be ordained in Hong Kong, where they have long been active in Anglican Church affairs.

As the mother church of the world's 47 million Anglicans, the Church of England in London announced today's decision by the Hong Kong diocesan synod.

Ordination of women priests is certain to spark world-wide controversy among Anglicans.

A world Anglican conference last February voted by a narrow margin to approve the planned decision by the Hong Kong diocese. The Archbishop of Canterbury, spiritual head of the church, opposed the move, saying more time was needed to study it.

The bishop of Hong Kong, who will confirm the two women, told his synod that for centuries the Anglican clergy had been a club for men only and had lost something of its representative character.

"As we try to cope with the pastoral needs of a huge population — in which half of the industrial workers are women — I believe we are impelled by the Holy Spirit to make better provision for the needs of men and women alike in the ministry more fully representative of humanity as a whole," the bishop, the Rt. Rev. Gilbert Baker, said.

"My hope is that Hong Kong will present to the church some living experience of women in the priesthood."

Miss Hwang, born near Canton, is vicar of Holy Trinity Church in Hong Kong and principal of Yeuk Wing primary school.

A fighter for greater women's rights in the church, she said: "I firmly believe that men and women should have the chance of equality to serve God as well as the people."

She attended Union Theological College in Canton in 1933. When the college became a refugee camp during the Japanese occupation Miss Hwang helped with relief work.

She later completed theological studies in Hong Kong, and got a master's degree at Columbia University, New York.

Miss Bennett was born in London and studied history at London University. She was graduated in 1944, then attended an English missionary training school and was sent to Hong Kong in 1949.

Both women already have been ordained deaconesses. The Anglican Church has a small number of deaconesses, who perform some of the functions of priests, including baptisms, preaching and hearing confessions.

Since 1936, Miss Bennett has been principal of St. Catharine's girls school, Kwun Tong, in the Hong Kong diocese.

The World Council of Churches says 17 member churches permit women ministers. In Britain there are about 6,000 Congregationalist women ministers and three Presbyterian ones.

The Roman Catholic Church does not permit women priests.

Mechanical Heart Recipient Is Dead

DETROIT (AP) — Haskel Shanks, 63, the world's longest living recipient of a partial mechanical heart, has died of a kidney failure. Doctors said his artificial heart was functioning normally at his death.

The Warren, Mich., man lived with the mechanical device three months and three days.

Death came Sunday at Detroit's Sinai Hospital, where he was admitted Oct. 4 for a chest infection which doctors believed was brought on by his weak condition at the time of the heart operation Aug. 11.

While the chest infection was cured with antibiotics, doctors said his kidneys weakened.

"It must be emphasized that the demise of the patient does not appear to be related to the mechanical heart," a hospital spokesman said. "There was no evidence of rejection on the part of the body to the mechanical heart."

The device doctors implanted in Shanks' chest served as an auxiliary pumping chamber 80 per cent of the work of the heart's main pumping chamber.

Wilson to Pay Belfast Visit

BELFAST (Reuter) — British Opposition Leader Harold Wilson was due in Belfast today at the start of a five-day fact-finding tour of both Northern Ireland and the neighboring Irish republic.

Wilson will have talks with leaders of all sections of the strife-torn North. Then he will travel to Dublin for similar discussions aimed at finding a formula that could help restore peace in the North.

On the eve of Wilson's visit, Belfast had one of its quietest days in months. Only a few scattered incidents were reported in other cities in Northern Ireland.

The Opposition leader is seeking to gather as much first-hand information as possible before next week when he is expected to put before the British Parliament a new initiative aimed at ending the agony in Northern Ireland.

Security forces in Northern Ireland fear Wilson's visit may set off a new upsurge of violence in the province where the death toll in a 3-year orgy of terror stands at 158.

In Londonderry Sunday, a 20-year-old youth was shot in the lamp-post and tarred from head to waist for hosting a clothing party. Irish militants were reported to have done the tarring.

Also in Londonderry, a petrol-filled tear gas and rubber bullets to drive off hundreds of stone throwing rioters who protested the removal of barricades in the Catholic Creggan housing development.

British troops arrested a man suspected of a top gunman's fighter. British troops found him hiding under a bed. Eleven other persons were seized in the Belfast army raids.

Car Prices Are Raised By Ford

DETROIT (AP) — The Ford Motor Co. has raised the prices of its Pinto and Capri models, ending the era of the U.S. subcompact car with a price tag of less than $2,000.

Increases on the Pinto line average $84, while the German-built Capri will be up $119. The price boosts have government approval.

The new price tags put the basic Pinto at $2,023, compared with $2,099 for the Chevrolet Vega and $2,249 for American Motors' Gremlin, the other subcompact cars built by U.S. firms.

The suggested list price for Volkswagen's beetle-like, the Super Beetle, is $2,278.

A Ford spokesman said Saturday that other price increases for the rest of the Ford line are in the offing.

General Motors, Chrysler and American Motors are expected to follow suit.

A Ford of Canada spokesman said Sunday he knew of no increases in Canadian prices of its Pinto, which is assembled at St. Thomas, Ont., but he did not rule out the possibility of such an increase. The company raised the prices for its Capri and the English-built Cortina last Tuesday.

Ford announced a $150 increase on the two Pinto models last July just before the 1972 models were to make their debut, but that price was rolled back at the time of the government price freeze Aug. 15.

Ford went back to the Cost of Living Council and asked for permission to raise Pinto prices, contending that the firm had made substantial sales price to Aug. 15 as required under the Office of Emergency Preparedness guidelines. The council agreed and granted Ford price relief on the Pinto line.

The Capri, built by Ford of Germany, will now carry a list price of $2,720.

The Capri price is being increased to offset part of the effect of the change in value of the German mark, Ford said.

It was the second boost this month for Capri. The last price increase was $100 on Nov. 1.

Ford emphasized that it applied for and received government approval of the Pinto and Capri price changes before guidelines issued by the Cost of Living Council last week which limit auto makers' post-freeze price increases to 2.5 per cent or less.

ters 53-2 in Sunday's Western Bowl.

The heavier, better-balanced Mustangs had little trouble conquering the Atlantic Conference champion Huskies, whose only scoring came in the second quarter.

The bruising attack of Western backs Brown MacIver and Peter Quigley, the punt returns of defensive back Jim Budge and the kicking of Paul Knill provided the scoring weight for the winners.

MacIlse started the rampage with a five-yard plunge in the opening quarter and ended it with a one-yard dive in the final period.

Quigley went over from the one in the second quarter and skirted wide on a four-yard jaunt in the third quarter.

Budge went 54 yards in the second quarter for a touchdown after taking a kick by St. Mary's Ken Clarke.

Knill was good on three of four field-goal tries, clicking on 35-, 30- and 27-yard efforts. He was also good on all five Mustang converts.

St. Mary's halfback Angelo Santucci scored 109 yards for the game's most sensational touchdown after taking a punt on the St. Mary's one-yard line in the second quarter.

Conrad Kozak booted 32- and 33-yard field goals and the extra point after Santucci's touchdown.

Bramalea Beats Sudbury 28-13

SUDBURY (CP) — Bramalea Satellites defeated Sudbury Spartans 28-13 Sunday to capture the Ontario Senior Football championship title.

Bramalea, the Southern Ontario champions, came out of the first half with a 28-0 lead over Sudbury, the Northern Ontario champions.

Jim Brown scored two touchdowns for Satellites and Jim Warren and Bill Poutney added one touchdown apiece. Former Toronto Argonaut Tom Johanson converted three.

For Sudbury, Bob Gelinec scored one touchdown and Leo Laverne the other. Ray Owens kicked one convert.

Day Gives Canada Team Riding Title

TORONTO (CP) — Jim Day of Oakville, Ont. made two flawless rides Sunday at Royal Horse Show aboard the gelding Sun Dancer to give the Canadian equestrian team first place in the Prix des Nations in a jumping with the United States.

The win gave Canada 20 points and a 77-53 lead over the U.S. in team standing.

After the first round of competition Sunday, Canada, the U.S. and Argentina Sunday night, the two-regulation-round test tied with four team faults while Argentina was well back with 28 faults.

In the second round, Day was the last Canadian rider. He turned in a faultless performance to force a jumpoff with the U.S. team.

In the jumpoff, he needed a faultless jump in good time, since time was considered if jumping faults were even.

Day and Sun Dancer turned in a faultless performance in a time of 33.7 seconds, the fastest in the jumpoff.

The Canadian team finished its jumps 10.1 seconds ahead of the U.S.

Barbara Simpson had three faultless rides for Canada, including a time of 35.3 in the jumpoff.

To Call U.S. Surcharge Retaliatory Preposterous - - - Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Sunday that it is preposterous to claim that the special United States 10-per-cent surcharge on imports is a retaliatory measure against Canada.

Equally untrue was the suggestion by some Canadians that Canada's initiatives in foreign affairs are destroying the country's "special relationship" with the U.S.

Mr. Trudeau, speaking on the CBC program Nation's Business, said that the U.S. surcharge is part of "a complex set of measures taken by President Nixon to deal with certain problems in the U.S. economy."

The surcharge applies against all trading partners of the U.S., not just Canada, Mr. Trudeau said.

"To suggest this is an act of political retaliation against us is completely untrue."

Mr. Trudeau said the recent visits to Canada of Premier Kosygin and President Tito, as well as Canada's support of the entry of the Peoples' Republic of China into the United Nations, reflect development of "the best possible foreign policy for Canada."

Canada's Defence Trade Surplus Is One of John Connally's Targets

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun says John Connally, United States treasury secretary, intends to take steps to eliminate Canada's $500-million trade surplus under the Canada-U.S. agreement covering defence production.

In a dispatch from Washington, the newspaper says Mr. Connally will press for removal of Canadian tariffs on defence items made in the U.S.

It says the U.S. also seeks removal of the Canadian preference in the agreement, a provision that allows small Canadian firms with marginal profits to compete against U.S. companies for sales to Canadian forces.

The evidence, The Sun says, is in a treasury department letter sent to a New York congressman, Lester Wolff, who complained on behalf of a constituent that an Ottawa firm, Leigh Instrument Ltd., had an unfair advantage because of "Canadian government support" on a contract for 3,000 altimeters for the U.S. Navy.

"I agree there is a broader trade question involved here," the treasury department letter said, "specifically the manner in which the defence production-sharing arrangement with Canada has operated.

"We intend to pursue this question vigorously with Canadian officials with a view of achieving a balance in trade."

Rogers Is Optimistic

WASHINGTON (CP) — United States relations with Canada "are going through a rather difficult period," State Secretary William Rogers says, but he's optimistic about the future.

Rogers cited "concern" in Canada about President Nixon's economic policies as being at the heart of current difficulties in a copyrighted interview in U.S. News and World Report.

"The fact of the matter is: No two nations in the history of the world have ever had as much trade with each other as Canada and the United States . . ."

"Canada has greater per-capita investment in the United States than the United States does in Canada. People forget that."

Capital Gains Tax Will Receive Close Scrutiny from Opposition MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons today takes a close look at a government proposal to tax profits from property and stock market investment.

The capital gains proposals in new tax legislation are expected to get grudging opposition approval because it has been watered down from the version first announced two years ago.

But even grudging approval might be welcome, by government leaders, who have seen their proposed tax-law changes fall behind a Jan. 1 time-table.

The study of the 28 clauses of the legislation dealing with capital gains were supposed to have been completed by the Commons last week.

But the House, meeting in committee-of-the-whole, bogged down in discussion of items dealing with taxation of livestock farmers.

Further discussion of that issue was postponed when the Commons moved to discussion of subclauses that would primarily reinstate features of current law in the new legislation.

On Wednesday, before MPs took Remembrance Day—Thursday—and Friday off, the House approved 39 largely-routine subclauses in the bill, raising to 71 out of 333 the number of sections approved after two months discussion.

Bourassa Wants New Federal Equalization Payments Formula

OTTAWA (CP) — Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa called today for a new formula for equalization payments to provinces to meet the increase in expenditures by provincial governments.

He...ding a delegation which includes three cabinet ministers, he spoke at the opening of a federal-provincial conference on the economy which continues until Wednesday.

He said the basis for equalization payments which redistribute wealth among the rich and poor provinces should be extended to include such elements as provincial recourse to loans and the amount of revenue available to municipalities and school boards within each province.

This would help "take into account all the provinces' resources," he said.

He also proposed "modifying the very mechanics of the equalization formula" by "reclassifying revenue, redefining certain bases, a different schedule of payments."

He did not elaborate on these proposals in his 30-page address.

Text of Mr. Bourassa's address was released in advance to the press.

Mr. Bourassa also said Quebec wants a definitive program for withdrawal from joint hospital and health insurance programs.

...A formula for withdrawal would have to include unconditional payments freed from administrative control and assurance that federal compensation to provinces which withdrew would keep pace with costs.

The premier found a federal proposal to base payments on the real 1970-71 costs, with increases based on the average rise in gross national product per capita over five years, an acceptable proposal in giving unconditional payments.

But to ensure federal payments keep pace with costs, he suggested the base year be changed to 1972-73 and that a minimum rate of increase be introduced.

He renewed Quebec's request, stated earlier by Finance Minister Raymond Garneau at a meeting of finance ministers here Oct. 31-Nov. 1, that tax-reform legislation now before Parliament come into effect in 1973 instead of next year.

E. J. Benson, federal finance minister, plans to make the legislation effective next Jan. 1.

U.S. Living Cost Council May Stop Car Price Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the second phase of President Nixon's anti-inflation program barely under way, the Cost of Living Council called a session today to decide whether to rescind an exemption allowing car prices to go up without advance notice.

The council said Friday that companies required under Phase Two regulations to clear price increases in advance with the government could boost prices without notice to cover the cost of wage increases due their workers between now and the first of the year.

But the chairman of the price commission, C. Jackson Grayson, urged the council Saturday to reconsider.

Ford Motor Co. boosted prices on two sub-compact models nearly five per cent during the weekend and said price increases on other models were in the offing.

George H. Boldt, chairman of the pay board, appearing Sunday with Grayson on the CBS interview program Face the Nation, said the board will meet Tuesday to decide whether teachers and other groups may collect retroactively pay raises frozen during the wage-price freeze period that expired Saturday night.

The board already has ruled against allowing general retroactive pay raises, but has agreed to consider individual cases on their merits.

Grayson promised Saturday that, if the Cost of Living Council approves his request to rescind its earlier ruling, the price commission would change its regulations to "assure that these requested price increases are reviewed within 72 hours."

Provincial Premiers At Odds on Economy

Rich vs. Poor Debate Looms

OTTAWA (CP) — In a province-by-province look at the way Canada's economy is being handled, the 10 provincial premiers disagreed Monday on most major issues — except that they would like a greater say in future decisions.

As usual, the rough battle lines seemed to be drawn between the have and have-not provinces.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who invited the premiers here to look at unemployment and other economic conditions, heard differing views on foreign investment, equalization payments, tax reform and job-creating programs.

"There didn't appear to be a consensus," he told reporters after the first day of the closed-door, three-day conference.

They were to continue the talks today and Wednesday.

The strongest encouraging note after Monday's meeting came from Ontario Premier William Davis, who said he was happy with the support other premiers gave his suggestion for a federal-provincial committee on economic goals.

But Monday's meeting indicated such a committee could have its hands full reaching national recommendations.

For instance, Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia again advocated a Canada-U.S. common market, while premiers Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan and Ed Schreyer of Manitoba said the economic ties now binding the two countries should be cut.

And Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta opposed larger tariffs or money from richer to poorer provinces under the present equalization formula, while Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia argued that more of this money was needed in such areas as the Maritimes.

Some regional questions were to get a more thorough going-over today during further discussion of equalization payments.

Normally, the voice of Newfoundland Premier J. R. Smallwood would be the loudest in this subject, but he was defeated—pending recounts—in last month's provincial election, and it wasn't known whether he would play a major role in the discussions today.

He was late arriving Monday because of poor flying weather.

Sources said there also was sharp disagreement between the richer and poorer provinces on reported recommendation by Revenue Minister Herb Gray that a body be established to screen foreign investment.

Excerpts supposedly from the Gray report were leaked to a newspaper and published last week. The cabinet still is studying Mr. Gray's recommendations.

The subject-matter of the report was not scheduled for discussion, but Premier Regan said there was significant support expressed for the screening proposal by several provinces.

However, he said there was no such support from provinces which, like Nova Scotia, need foreign investment far more than, say, Ontario.

The premiers kept their opening statements short, concentrating more on a round-table discussion.

Mr. Trudeau and Finance Minister E. J. Benson told the provinces do most of the talking during the first day, although

Pakistan Problem Soon Solved--Gandhi

NEW DELHI (CP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi told leaders of her ruling Congress party today that the East Pakistan problem will be solved in a month or two or even sooner," a party spokesman reported.

The spokesman, who gave reporters an official briefing on remarks made by Mrs. Gandhi to the 40-member executive committee of parliamentarians belonging to her party, said the prime minister was emphatic that the problem would be settled within a two-month time frame — although she did not spell out how.

"World opinion is in our favor now," the prime minister also was quoted as saying.

The prime minister's comments were an extension of a statement she made Monday to a meeting of Congress party parliamentarians at which she said India would wait to see what the Western leaders with whom she had conferred abroad would do to help solve the crisis before taking any independent action.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A moist stagnant airmass covers all of Ontario east and north of a line running from central Lake Ontario through Georgian Bay and then westward from Minaesota. Scota and west of this line or weather front skies are partly cloudy and daytime temperatures can be expected to climb into the 35 to 60 range, well above mid-November normals. The weather front is not expected to move much during the next day or two. However a series of weak disturbances will ripple along it from time to time, giving bursts of more continuous precipitation to Northern and central Ontario.

'Great Hurricane' Brewing in Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — Ports of western Cuba were evacuated as Tropical Storm Laura pushed northwardgaday toward the Gulf of Mexico and the southern tip of Florida.

"We're due for a great hurricane," said Dr. Robert Simpson, director of the National Hurricane Centre at the University of Miami.

By a great hurricane, he explained, he means one with sustained winds of 125 miles an hour or more. He said the last time one of that strength hit Miami was in 1926.

China Pledges to Assist Little Lands Against Big

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The People's Republic of China became part of the United Nations Monday with a speech full of revolutionary fervor, criticism of the United States and pledges to oppose the superpowers when their interests conflict with those of small countries.

"We are opposed to the power politics and hegemony of big nations bullying small ones or strong nations bullying weak ones," said Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua, in the first China speech in the General Assembly.

He told that the affairs of a given country must be handled by its own people, that the affairs of the world must be handled by the countries of the world, and that the affairs of the UN must be handled jointly by all its member states, and the superpowers should not be allowed to manipulate and monopolize them.

Then he said that at no time will China regard herself as a superpower.

China pledged Chinese support for the Palestine Arab guerrillas in the Middle East and the revolutionaries of southern Africa.

He called the United States an "aggressor" and said its troops must get out of Indochina, Taiwan and Korea. He said Taiwan is an integral part of China and the Chinese people will ever seek to regain it

And he said China never will take part in superpower-run disarmament talks, saying that this is a subject for all the countries of the world.

"The floor recognizes the Chinese delegation!"

Enforced Standing Held Not Brutal

LONDON (CP) — A government-appointed commission said today some suspected Irish terrorists, caught in the internment sweep in Northern Ireland last August, had their heads hooded and were forced to stand with their feet spread and arms raised against a wall for periods totalling up to 43 hours, with breaks every four to six hours.

But the three-man commission, headed by Home Secretary Reginald Maudling, also said these and other hardships, substantiated among a small group of the large numbers arrested, constituted physical ill-treatment and not savage brutality as Internees alleged and as the commission judged brutality to mean.

The findings were published in a government white paper and presented to Parliament by Home Secretary Reginald Maudling.

The commission's report also said that the substantiated charges of physical ill-treatment, which applied to the cases of 11 men, also involved special uses of electronic noise and sleep deprivation, and suspects leave them with a sense of isolation. During the early days of questioning, they were denied sleep and fed only on bread and water.

It emphasized, however, that men forced against the wall did not receive the usual punishment beating that troops demand during arrests of terrorists' neighborhoods.

"This was not a stress position," it said. "The legs were not so wide apart, the arms so stretched up or the weight of the body not put forward to the same extent as in the search position."

Nevertheless at least 11 men spent long hours against the wall. The lowest time was nine hours; the highest 43.5 hours. All suspects were hooded each time when under direct questioning or in rooms by themselves. The electronic sound or "music" was loud enough to "mask extraneous sounds and prevent effective oral communication between detainees." The noise was neutral—no music or speech sounds were intruded.

In a prepared statement to accompany the report, Maudling insisted that highpressure interrogation was essential to fight terrorists.

"When combatting a terrorist campaign, time is of the essence," he told Parliament. "Information must be sought while it is still fresh so that it may be used as quickly as possible to effect the capture of persons, arms and explosives, and thereby save the lives of members of the security forces and of the civil population."

New Vote on Exemption For Canada Is Possible

WASHINGTON (CP) — An effort to put a roadblock in the path of the proposed 15-per-cent import surtax authority was in the works today as the Senate continued debate on tax legislation.

The manoeuvre took shape backstage Monday while the Senate concentrated on domestic clauses in the tax bill designed to bring about $19 billion tax relief for American citizens and corporations. Critics have argued the over-all tax cuts favor industry and big business rather than the public.

Earlier, the Senate, seeking to wind up action on the bill by Wednesday, defeated 36 to 29 an amendment to exempt Canada and Mexico from the "temporary" 10-per-cent surtax.

Because of the closeness of that vote—35 senators were not present or did not vote—backers say they might try again when more of the 100 - man senate are present. Any new attempt could ask for relief for Canada alone.

Critics charged Canada did not deserve such an exemption because, in the words of Senator Russell Long (Dem.-La.), "Canada has not fulfilled her part" under the 1965 Canada-United States auto pact.

The U.S. was attempting to negotiate changes in the pact and Senate approval of a surtax exemption from Canada would "weaken the hand" of American negotiators, he said.

One Senate source said he felt it was a "poorly thought-out amendment" and its passage would bring threatened retaliation from European trading partners.

Sharp Denies Seeking Deal with Resources

OTTAWA (CP) — The government denied Monday that it is using Canada's natural resources to negotiate a better break for Canada under United States trade restrictions.

Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons there is "nothing to that at all."

Canada wasn't prepared to bargain about the Aug. 15 U.S. surcharge on imports, which he called a "tax placed on our trade unilaterally without negotiation."

He was asked by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) whether Ottawa will outline to the provinces at the current meeting here what issues and

Government 'Restructuring' Is Planned

TORONTO (CP) — Deputy Labor Minister Thomas Eberlee has been appointed to supervise the restructuring of Ontario's government, Premier William Davis announced Monday.

Mr. Eberlee's job will be to carry out recommendations of the two-year-old committee on government productivity.

Some recommended changes dealing with the provincial cabinet and the role of the provincial auditor are already being made and the committee is to dissolve early next year.

Mr. Davis said Mr. Eberlee will continue to hold his post as deputy labor minister.

federal policies are under discussion with the U.S.

Mr. Sharp replied that the American position is still unclear. The government was trying to get clarification of the aims and objectives of the U.S.

Perry Ryan (PC—Toronto Spadina) asked about a possible Canada-U.S. trade bloc, a suggestion made at the conference by Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia.

Mr. Sharp said neither Canada nor the U.S. has raised this possibility in talks.

Rotating Strikes Continue

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Letter carriers in Ontario and Nova Scotia launched the second day of 24-hour rotating strikes against the post office to protest hiring practices with walkouts today in Halifax, Toronto and several other Ontario cities.

Members of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada shut down mail delivery from the main post office in Halifax and several substations. However, in Saint John N.B., hit Monday by a letter carriers' walkout, the men were back on the job today.

The letter carriers walked out of two post offices in Toronto's west end and shut down mail delivery in Weston, northwest of the city. Other walkout targets included Windsor, London, Amherstburg, Chatham, St. Catharines and Thorold in southern Ontario.

Canada Shows Surplus In Its Trade in Cars

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's foreign trade in autos and parts has run up a surplus of $58 million for the nine-month period ended Sept. 30 compared with a deficit of $19 million for the comparable 1970 period.

The U.S. is pressing Canada for changes in the Canada-U.S. auto production pact of 1965 which set up duty-free exchange of most vehicles and original parts for manufacturers.

Canada exports up to Sept. 30 to the U.S. are valued at $3.960 billion, compared with $2.547 billion a year earlier.

Imports from the U.S. are valued at $2.894 billion, compared with $2.495 billion.

Non-U.S. imports total $358 million against $259 million last year.

Construction Body President Says His Industry Throttled

The president of the Canadian Construction Association feels his industry is being throttled at the bargaining table by internal disorganization and strongly armed opposition.

Robert Stewart, a consulting engineer from Halifax, N.S., was in Belleville yesterday to meet members of the Quinte Construction Association and Mayor J. Russell Scott.

In an evening address to the QCA at the Quinte Hotel, he stressed the need for construction firms and associations to pull together so that labor would not continue to have the upper hand in contract negotiations. "The problem now," he said, "is that each trade wants more than what the other fellow just signed for. We have all heard of the term organized management!"

Trade unions, he said, are so well protected by legislation that they are able to "dictate the terms of collective agreements". The construction industry is particularly vulnerable to hasty negotiations because of its transient nature in which working conditions and terms of employment are constantly changing. A united construction industry, backed by government support, could put an end to disparate wage settlements and bring about efficient, stable conditions to all its members.

Mr. Stewart was also critical of the new Competition Act which the federal government has drafted to replace the Combines Act. "While the principles involved are sound," he said, "it has gone to extremes which will affect the competitive aspects of the industry." The proposed legislation is designed o prevent monopolies from taking over industries.

He noted that if the act is implemented, costs of materials to prospective buyers will be the same for everyone regardless of the quantity to be purchased. "This would restrict competitive practices where efficiency is recognized," he said.

At a morning press conference, Mr. Stewart attacked Ottawa for using the construction industry as a means of stimulating employment. With a work volume valued at $15.4 billion in 1971, the industry is the largest in Canada and is often turned on or off to control growth in specific areas of the country. "The government is reacting to immediate problems without looking at long term planning," according to Mr. Stewart. "The result is a scramble for employment and is reflected in poorer work, increased costs and difficulties in labor - management relations."

He mentioned that the CCA will recommend model legislation designed to protect its own interests to both the federal and provincial governments. Ontario currently has some measures in writing but there are deficiencies which could be improved upon, he said.

The visit by Mr. Stewart to Belleville precedes meetings with other local construction associations in Kingston, Peterborough and Orillia. He has spent much of this one year term of office crossing the country on behalf of the CCA to gather information from individual groups and pass along suggestions from the national office.

CCA Head Calls for Unity

Robert Stewart, left, president of the Canadian Construction Association, passes after an address at the Quinte Hotel last night. He told members of the Quinte Construction Association that closer affiliation is needed if the industry is to continue to thrive. With him is QCA president Weiger Dejong.

School Board Spending Escapes Restrictions

Hastings county appears to have been given a break from the spending guidelines set by the department of education for next year.

Local board officials are still studying the regulations and hope to determine soon the per-pupil expenditure allowed in this county. But at the moment it seems the increase will be about six per cent for elementary schools and three per cent for secondary schools.

"This is in line with our anticipated increases," said director of education Eric Runacres, today. "It looks as though the department bought our recommendations. I'm sure we can catch up at the rate we want to so we can come in line with other boards."

Rural boards of education have complained for some time that department of education spending restrictions penalize them and reward the more affluent metropolitan boards.

At the time individual boards were merged into the county system, rural boards were behind metro boards in terms of plant, equipment, supplies and services.

The recently announced spending guidelines, said Mr. Runacres, include a "local factor" designed to upgrade areas in need of it.

Another factor nagging school officials and teachers across the province is maintaining a high quality of teaching personnel and at the same time cutting back spending on education.

Teachers' salaries make up the largest percentage (about 70 per cent) of a board's expenses, and as teachers' qualifications and experience rise, so do their salaries.

Fears have been expressed that boards will little less qualified, less experienced teachers to staff their schools.

But Hastings county has gone on record as opposing this solution to the call for educational cutbacks.

Our top priority is the quality of people in the classroom, and we have said so publicly," said Mr. Runacres. "Apparently the government has accepted this idea, because it seems as though our permitted expenditures this year will cover salary increases for better qualified teachers."

Pane Removed, Cash Stolen

Last night, someone carefully removed putty surrounding a window at Campbell's Auto Shop at 327 Coleman Street.

The window was carefully removed. After gaining entry the thief or thieves searched all cupboards and drawers and attempted to rifle the soft drink machine.

Approximately $3 in cash was taken. So was the window pane.

Drums Stolen

Neither the thief nor the drums have been found.

Trenton Highrise To Be Reviewed

TRENTON (Staff) — Construction of a seven-storey highrise on the former Sen. W. A. Fraser property on Dundas St. West is still a possibility as the result of action taken by council last night.

Council reheated that the Ontario Municipal Board review its decision in turning down the town's application to have the land rezoned.

The approval of council follows the Trenton and suburban planning board's acceptance of the property for rezoning on more information made available by the town.

Daughter's Cry Fire Alarm

When Gary Locke of 118 Bridge Street West put his two young daughters, Wendy 4, and Karen 2, to bed, he lay down beside them while they went to sleep.

He dozed off for an unknown length of time and he was awakened by Karen, 2, who was crying.

The room had begun to fill with smoke.

"I ran to the head of the stairs and saw that it was bright downstairs. I knew there was a fire.

"I was going to smash the window and let the kids down, but instead I ran down the stairs."

Balling his way down the burning staircase, Mr. Locke was able to reach the front door of his two-storey brick home.

When the children were safely in the arms of friends Mr. and Mrs. Fred White, who live across the road, Mr. Locke returned to his home.

"I ran back over there. When I ran out, there were flames, but as I approached the house again, it was dark."

Just as Mr. Locke opened the door, the front window was blown out by an explosion of pressure.

Unhurt, he ran down the front steps. Mrs. Locke was then returning from her job at the Northern Electric plant, several blocks from her home.

"I went right to my kids," Sarah Locke told The Intelligencer this morning.

Inspector Reg Christopher of the Belleville Fire Department said sparks from a short-circuited table lamp caused the blaze, which insurance adjuster Grant Kerr estimates at between $12,000 and $15,000.

"There was so little of it untouched, I would estimate it (damage) in that area," said Mr. Kerr.

Although more extensive damage had been done in the living room, the entire downstairs portion of the house had been badly charred. Flames appeared not to have gone too far below the surface of the walls.

Several beams had been exposed, but most of the damage appeared to have been on a superb basis. Paint hung in tatters from the ceiling. Much of the furniture, although badly charred, was still intact.

Upstairs, similar scorching had taken place, but damage was less severe.

In the basement, only firemen's book tracks attested to the fact that a fire had taken place. The furnace had been turned back on, as had the electricity to the food freezer.

Mr. Locke and his wife had moved from their home in the country to the Bridge St. residence in July. They owned the home.

The family seems to have been star-crossed. Earlier in the summer, their garage burned down after a portable barbecue tipped over.

Short-circuit Caused $15,000 Blaze

Belleville Fire Department Inspector Reg Christopher, right, and insurance investigator Grant Kerr, left, inspect remains of 118 Bridge Street West, home of Gary and Sarah Locke and their two young daughters. Mr. Locke awoke shortly before 11.30 p.m. yesterday to find his living room in flames and the house filled with smoke. He managed to rescue both children and later met his wife, who was coming home from work. Inspector Christopher says the fire was caused by a short - circuit in a table lamp. Wires were fused together.

Hunters' Dogs Now at Pound

Every year hunters who take dogs into the woods to help them hunt deer end up looking for their lost hounds.

The number of dogs lost annually often passes the 100 mark and reports are constantly being received from people who have spotted uncontrolled dogs running deer.

To enable dogs and their owners to be reunited, the East Central Ontario Association of Sportsmen Clubs established several holding stations throughout the north country. At various farms or homes, any hunter or person can turn in a lost dog.

The dog is kept until department of lands and forests officers pick them up. They are then transfered to the Ontario Humane Society, Quinte Branch, in Belleville.

Yesterday a delivery day at the Avonlough Road animal shelter. A dozen dogs were delivered by lands and forests officer Kenneth Schonauer of Tweed.

Most of these dogs have long toenails and bedraggled feet. Only one seems to be a hunter, a good looking dog.

His feet are slightly cut and the nails are worn off." Belleville Rod and Gun Club vice-president Tom Bolin said this morning.

Both Mr. Helm and Ontario Humane Society Superintendent David Brown say many hunters purchase or rent kennels just before hunting season. When the dogs return, for no use, either by way of nonperformance or lack of hunting sense, they may be abandoned or turned in to the holding stations.

Mr. Helm, chairman of the ECOASC Holding Committee, says their organization is unique in Ontario.

New Mall 'Community Centre'

Like the Yorkdale shopping plaza in Toronto, Cambridge Leaseholds expects the Quinte Mall to become an attraction in itself, mall manager David Blandford told Belleville Rotarians yesterday.

Mr. Blandford said the company also sees the mall as a community centre for the presentation of functions such as art and hobby shows, fashion shows and educational exhibits, as well as for fund-raising projects.

The manager said the mall pays $230,000 in taxes annually to the community. It employs 200 persons full-time and 200 part-time and the annual payroll amounts to $2 million.

A summer survey indicated that 52 per cent of shoppers came from Belleville, the remainder from outside as far away as Windsor and Toronto. For the most part the mall serves shoppers east to Napanee, west to Colborne, north to Tweed and Madoc and all of Prince Edward County.

Mr. Blandford said his company was seeking opportunities for the establishment of similar regional shopping centres in smaller centres such as Belleville and Three Rivers, Quebec, where one opened recently. The Quinte mall, moreover, was built so it can be expanded if necessary.

Shrouding an internee's head in a black pillowcase protects him by hiding his identity, interrogators contended. Subjecting prisoners to constant screaming or hissing noises prevents them from listening to each other.

A bread-and-water diet imposes discipline, the commission was told.

The commission ruled that all these interrogation measures were ill-treatment.

None of the men who complained required any major medical treatment, the commission said.

But the commission recommended that medical administration measures should be improved in the internment operation.

Successful Deer Hunt Surprising to Officials

TWEED (Staff) — Inexplicably a big worry for big game conservationists in the Quinte district may not have materialized.

One of their biggest worries has been that a heavy snows of last winter — one of the harshest in memory- might have killed off much of the future local deer population by reducing the number of fawns produced.

Now, statistics on this year's deer hunting season — over last weekend — indicate a much more optimistic picture. In fact, more young deer than ever may have been born.

The indications come from the Department of Lands and Forests report whose Wardens checked 1,726 hunters during the season. The hunters had shot 447 deer for a success ratio of 12 per cent— compared to 15.7 per cent in 1970.

More significantly, however the deer shot included 142 fawns — or nearly 32 per cent of the total killed. That compares with 27 per cent last year.

So far, departmental experts have come up with no sure answers to the situation.

Last winter they feared many deer, including pregnant does, would starve to death in the deep snows, while others, denied sufficient nutrition would abort their young. Spring surveys revealed few dead carcasses in the Quinte bush.

Now it seems that even the tough winter may have produced more—not less—fawns.

"We're going to check them (statistics) out by township to see if there's anything in the (local) environment that may have contributed to a better fawning year," said wildlife management official Russ Whitfield.

In certain localities, for instance, hunkering operations may have held deer with browsing cut to accessible ground level — thus boosting food stocks, he said.

In recent years, forestry programs initiated from here have opened up feed areas in Quinte deer yards — areas where deer populations disgregate during winter.

This could have helped an awful lot, because we cut a lot of browse in front of the deer last year," said Mr. Whitfield.

However, he cautioned guardedly, the department couldn't take the credit yet until the full facts were ascertained by field experts.

Bleecker Widening Worry Is Said to Be Premature

While many are taking up arms to defend against widening Bleecker Avenue, the traffic and light committee is satisfied that their worries are premature.

Ald. Robin Jeffrey, concerned about the possible loss of the loss of trees on its curb areas," jumped to conclusions" while attempting to take up the banner to save Bleecker Avenue, said Ald. Arnold Orr.

The first proposal made by the consulting firm of Totten, Sims, and Hubicki was to show the traffic flow that would result from the developments made on the CNR Road.

"Plans 10 which describes the projected, or one project- ed layout of the area, will be followed by studies which will probably show an alternative to the Bleecker problem," said Ald. Orr.

The problem remains that a north - south arterial route must be found to accommodate the traffic coming over the causeway. There are only two streets in the area, that are available, that run from the north to the south," said city police chief Douglas Crosbie.

Members of the committee concurred that in all probability the next submission made by the consultants will include an alternate route that would include Herchimer Ave., to the north and south route.

"At the moment," said the police chief, "there is simply not the traffic to warrant making Herchimer a feeder route."

Other members of the group agreed, saying that traffic could better be divided between the two streets. These

Gas Theft Is Charged

Shortly after 2 a.m. this morning, a pedestrian noticed two youths in the process of siphoning gasoline from a parked car.

City police were alerted. Officers gave chase. The youths were interrupted before they could be arrested. Grand Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said economic union would inevitably lead to political union. Mr. Davis and Mr. Regan said the suggestion was unrealistic, and Mr. Schreyer said Canadians should "free ourselves as much as possible from the restrictive ties" with the U.S.

Of equalization payments—paid to the poorer provinces by the federal government—Mr. Davis said Ontario always would support the objective of reducing regional disparities, but pointed to a lack of results from the current system. And Mr. Lougheed said that "you cannot shake the great strong by making the strong weak."

Mr. Benson did assure the delegates Canada's economy was doing better than that of most countries.

But when it came to the question of how to keep the economy growing at a satisfactory rate, the premiers showed they agreed had widely differing recipes.

Mr. Bennett, in promoting his common market plan, said there would be no reason for Canada to lose its sovereignty.

Canada would gain a vast new market and industries that face the economic giant to our south, would recognize the advantages of having a large, friendly neighbor."

With 10 per-cent cuts in tariffs each year, a common market would exist in 10 years.

He found some support from Premier Alex Campbell of Prince Edward Island who said he liked the concept because it would give provincial governments more trade possibilities between the Maritime provinces and the greater New England area."

But after that it was all downhill for the proposal. Foreign Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said economic union would inevitably lead to political union. Mr. Davis and Mr. Regan said the suggestion was unrealistic, and Mr. Schreyer said Canadians should "free ourselves as much as possible from the restrictive ties" with the U.S.

Of equalization payments—paid to the poorer provinces by the federal government—Mr. Davis said Ontario always would support the objective of reducing regional disparities, but pointed to a lack of results from the current system. And Mr. Lougheed said that "you cannot shake the great strong by making the strong weak."

Premiers Disagree

Mr. Regan told reporters he was outrageous for Mr. Davis to suggest the system was not producing results-"I could show him how it has helped our education system"—and he said Mr. Lougheed was even less subtle in questioning the equalization system.

Later the Nova Scotia premier said he feared the present discussions amounted "to not talking as broad a view of Canadianism" as the previous government of John Roberts.

He predicted there would be more debate on the equalization issue before the conference ended, and he said the meeting would be produced more of a agreement than any he had attended.

But apparently there were no heated confrontations Monday.

"I don't want to take the excitement out of this," said Mr. Davis, "but there just weren't any."

Trenton Checking Day Care Centre

TRENTON (Staff) — Council, meeting informally last night, showed a great deal of interest in the province government's proposal for "building day care centres as winter works projects.

Under the plan set out by the social and welfare minister department, the government pays 100 per cent of the cost of nursery projects completed in the period between Nov. 1, this year and March 31, 1972.

For projects completed after the May 31 date, the government will assume 50 per cent of the expense.

Council asked clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry to pursue the government's offer immediately and report his progress to the committee of the whole meeting next Monday.

Mr. Larry informed council that he had already been advised Trenton's allotment from the $10 million being made available to municipalities was $25,000.

Council was reminded that Grace United Church had inquired earlier about the operation of a day care centre and may be a source for obtaining information along that line.

Mayor Duncan McDonald observed that it (a day care centre) "is something we can use in Trenton" and suggested that the first thing to do would be to get an idea of the need for one.

At the present time, the city of Belleville is the only municipality in the Quinte area with a day care centre in operation.

Mystery Report

Whatever the full significance of the Gray report in the eyes of the Government, its content as presented in an abridged version by The Canadian Forum contains some ideas of prime concern to the Canadian economy.

A statement from Mr. Trudeau's office would have us swallow a wordy explanation that this report (which advocates establishment of an agency to control foreign investment here) is "only one draft of a study prepared for official discussion at one stage in the preparation of documents to be submitted to the cabinet."

Be that as it may, an important segment of the report, as contained in the select monthly magazine, has been revealed. It centres around this "screening agency" which would "seek to secure the best possible deal from foreign investment and to block its entry where it is not beneficial."

The report warns of the growing power of multi-national enterprises, noting that the world's economy one day could be dominated by 300 or 400 of them, and goes on to suggest that Canada should develop such companies under its own auspices. But could we compete? After all, the report envisages that most of these 400 or so conglomerates would be American. Could we develop a few — and hold on to them?

Maybe there is some doubt on this score, for the report declares: "The guiding principle would be that Canada cannot do everything for itself, and must, therefore, specialize between industries. . ."

Well, yes indeed, we are dependent, are we not, on other countries for so many things, for U.S. or British-designed aircraft, automobiles and. . . well, the list is endless. Overseas knowhow too plays a large part in our economy. Look at the Japanese and their cars, not to mention cameras which sell so well here. We do not have a car or a camera, designed or manufactured here, to call our own, let alone export.

Whether we shall now get the full report or not remains to be seen. Now that the cat is out of the bag as it were, it might be politic to release the entire thing. Or does the cabinet not regard it as of sufficient importance? Hardly, since foreign control is very much to the fore on the national scene. Better probably that the whole thing be brought out into the open.

Home Products Elusive

Speaking of things Canadian, or lack of them, in the consumer sphere, we thought we had come upon an attractive article in a Toronto department store at the weekend.

Our find was a set of four coasters with scenes of 19th century Montreal on them. When we read the legend on the back, however, it was to find these were from original drawings by H. Bartlett (1809-1854), a widely-travelled Englishman who visited Canada on three occasions.

Moreover, they were made in England exclusively for the sole distributors in Canada, a firm with outlets in Toronto and Vancouver. The point is made also that if dropped the "very hard edge of Swedish board gives protection." Oh well, the color prints of Montreal are attractive and the whole package is surprisingly inexpensive.

Still, finding something distinctively Canadian is not easy. Canadian, that is, from start to finish.

Brazil Again!

According to a song of a while back, popularized as we recall by Carmen Miranda, there is "an awful lot of coffee in Brazil." It seems also that there are a lot of pretty girls in that country. Women's Lib protests notwithstanding, a 22-year-old Brazilian has just been crowned Miss World in London, and we seem to recall she is the second from her country to win either this title or Miss Universe in recent years.

From Afar

Whether they are ships that pass in the night or what, this seems like a strange time for visitors to Belleville from far off parts of the United States. Recently we have seen cars from Idaho, Utah and Arizona. What with the weather cooling off here, and the overall outdoor prospect a little desolate, we would not mind heading for Arizona ourselves.

Tax on U.S. Earnings Was Paid for Them

CBC Tax Delinquents Owe Ottawa $129,000

BY RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Remember, now going on two years ago, when a more than ordinarily indignant Auditor General, Maxwell Henderson, discovered that over a 20-month period the CBC had paid U.S. income tax for 20 of its employees in New York and Washington who had neglected to pay it themselves.

They did not pay it — nor, for some years their Canadian income tax either, it turned out — because the CBC had failed to abide by the law and collect the tax from their salaries as any other employer is legally compelled to do.

The Auditor General, who lives in a constant state of agitation over the offhand, careless and even, perish the thought, sometimes dishonest way federal money is handled, was more than usually upset.

And so he blew the whistle on the 20 tax-delinquents and the CBC to Parliament's Public Accounts Committee.

So what has happened since? Plenty.

For starters, some of the 20 still work with the CBC; others have departed, one via the Prime Minister's staff, and publicly have been informed by their President George Davidson that they are under "moral obligation" — the legal onus still is unclear — "to pay up like everyone else."

Only $129,000 was involved, but it was not finally the CBC's money — it was yours, Mr. Taxpayer, your tax dollars; and you paid it for the taxless 20.

But take heart. . .

You may still get it back.

At first things were a bit slow in moving.

The Public Accounts Committee did not get cracking on the case until last March.

Then Toronto lawyer Lowell G. Budd of Gordon, Kefetz, Baker and Goodman became more than routinely interested when, alerted by a friend in Blind River who had been following developments in The Sudbury Star he made ownership of a piece of it.

He wrote to almost everyone in authority concerned in the case, asking in effect, how come this murky business, when it was beyond legal question that "amounts paid to the U.S. Revenue Department (by the CBC for the 20) were taxable benefits enumerated in (the Canadian) Revenue Department to re-assess each of the 20 for taxation on the value of those benefits?"

He got answers.

From Public Accounts Committee Chairman Alf Hales that he was certain the 20 could be re-assessed and taxed.

From Revenue Minister Herb Gray that while the "department is looking into the case," security clearances in the Income Tax Act prohibited him from revealing what it might be finding.

From CBC President Davidson that the payment by the CBC had not been made "on behalf of the 20," and so they could not be re-assessed.

From MP Committee member Tom Lefebvre an opinion, judgement, and from Lloyd Crouse and Barry Mather not even that.

Since then the Public Accounts Committee has set up a special "Task Force CBC" to follow through, establish the precise position of the taxless 20 under international tax law, and if the taxes are owing, put parliamentary pressure on the Revenue Department to collect the full amount — with penalties and interest.

Chairman Lefebvre, MP Norman Cafik chairs the committee comprising another Liberal, two Conservatives, a New Democrat and a Social Credittiste.

They were given the authority with funds provided, to retain an authority on international tax law to sort out the legalities.

His report is due in two weeks.

Do the taxless 20 owe the money? Can the CBC paid for them to the U.S. Revenue Department?

And if not — if they were not liable for U.S. taxation — then should they have been liable assessed Canadian taxes?

For anybody earning taxable income, insists the Revenue Department, can be exempt.

And the taxless 20 were well into the taxable income brackets — they had to be when the tax bill the CBC paid for them was $129,000.

One way or another, swears Committee Chairman Alf Hales "they are going to have to pay up."

Pay back the $129,000 owing on their U.S. income tax or pay alternatively at Canadian rates, for nobody, but nobody can be above the law.

Try not paying your taxes."

Finance Minister Benson is on record as saying, "and we'll kill you."

But what if the committee's eminent international tax authority reports that by some strange twist of legal fate the taxless 20 are in the clear?

Then, I imagine, Chairman Alf Hales, "I will ask the Committee to prepare a report to Parliament, recommending a change in the tax laws, so the 20 will have to pay, no matter what."

Right now the House is working on tax reform, and will be until and perhaps after Christmas. What more opportune time for the Committee??

"Otis—they distinctly asked you not to adjust your set!"

Quebec Trade Union Confederation Wants Policy Of 'Ourselves Alone'

Quebec L'Action: Thanks to the good services of the Montreal weekly Quebec-Presse, it has become possible to obtain a complete version of the working document of the Confederation of National Trade Unions called Ne comptons que sur nos propres moyens' —Let's count only on our own means. . .

In brief, what the writers propose in the document is that Quebec workers resolutely involve themselves in a third path—that of an original socialism, with a specifically Quebec inspiration and remolded by the daily reality.

This theory of a third way is not new. Pope Paul VI made allusion to it in a letter addressed to Maurice Cardinal Roy on the 80th anniversary of the Revum Novarum.

This offers a choice to those who reject both capitalism and Marxist socialism of the Soviet type. It suggests a social project which could include the values of liberty and efficiency while putting an end to economic alienation and to the forfeiture of the government to economic powers. . . .

Various socialist experiments in the third world have followed more or less this third direction.

The CNTU document proposes in principle that workers should control the economy. . . .

The proposed nationalization concerns principally "all the dominant sectors of the economy." It should, it is emphasized, be progressive, taking account at the same time of the real capacity of workers' self-education and of the political situation at each moment in the construction of socialism.

It could happen that the combination of political circumstances would require a hasty rationalization of which the costs would have to be assumed. . .

CNTU supporters will have time in the coming months to analyse and criticize the document in which certain conclusions, at first glance, appear to raise serious reservations, at least in the eyes of those who think social reform should never pass the threshold of partial and limited transformations.

Notwithstanding the reservations one can formulate, there is no doubt in our opinion that it is a document of the greatest importance which should get the attention of all those interested in the development of Quebec.

More Arms for Police

By CY FOX

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The murderous developments in Northern Ireland, with the public humiliation of young women adding an extra touch of the grotesque to events there, have intensified anxiety about the Irish issue among British politicians and strengthened demands for a new approach to the chronic crisis.

Apparently embarrassed by the hair-raising and taring perpetrated on "soldier-loving" girls in embattled Londonderry, the clandestine Irish Republican Army stepped in to stop a recurrence of the incidents.

The IRA contended that the smearing was not officially sanctioned by itself but instead reflected a spontaneous anger among Bogsiders incensed at the idea of fraternization between Roman Catholic girls and "imperialist" British forces.

The British press has been making much of the cropping rituals, depicting them as a barbaric gesture of revenge against young lovers who defy an atmosphere charged with hatred.

Ulster Frenzy Continues Unabated

Yet one Communist commentator in London saw the barrage of press coverage as an attempt to divert attention "from those really responsible for the violence . . . in Northern Ireland."

But the continuation of murder in almost daily spasms demonstrates that, quite apart from the terrifying rituals in Bogside, Northern Ireland violence is mounting towards a new peak of horror.

For weeks, alarmed by the ferocious wave of killing and maiming, the politicians in London have been engaged privately in a hunt for fresh means of ending the crisis.

Ulster Prime Minister Brian Faulkner loudly denies that he would ever accept abolition of Northern Ireland's system of internal self-government as a step in this direction.

Many Ulster Protestants vow, in fact, that they would fight such a switch to direct rule from London.

The intensity of present Protestant feelings, worked up to fever pitch by the terrorist killings in Belfast in 1935-36, now may be having some effect at the highest level.

The mainstay, London has finally agreed that automatic weapons should be made available in certain circumstances for the protection of Northern Ireland policemen. There is to be stepped up army protection for police stations in the north.

However, signs are growing that many members of the Opposition Labor Party in London have lost faith in the idea that only political solutions alone can stem the tide of terrorist attacks.

Currently, front-bench Labor support for bipartisan solidarity with the government conservatives on matters like the continuation of the controversial internment policy in Northern Ireland is at most grudging.

Moreover, antagonism over Northern Ireland within the Labor party has brought to the surface disagreements in Conservative ranks too, as the necessity for checking the widening trend of events in Ulster becomes daily more desperate.

Today In History

Nov. 16, 1971 . . .

Louis Riel was hanged for high treason 86 years ago today — in 1885 — at police barracks in Regina. The Manitoba-born, half-breed attempted in 1870 to set up a Metis state during the legal hiatus between the Hudson's Bay Co. withdrawal from Manitoba and the Canadian Government's assumption of power. Defeated by an expeditionary force, he fled but was later elected a member of Parliament, only to be expelled from the Commons and declared an outlaw. His second rebellion, in 1885, was put down by an army force at the Battle of Batoche in Saskatchewan.

1935—Capt. Joseph Kitzinger of the United States Air Force made a record jump from a height of 25 miles high over New Mexico.

1958—The Soviet Union and India signed a five-year trade agreement.

1954—Budapest radio announced the wedding of Peter Field and his wife Herta, held since 1949 on spy charges.

1933—The United States recognized the Soviet Union as the government of Russia.

1918—Hungary was proclaimed a republic.

17th — The British captured Fort Washington on Manhattan Island.

No Bets on Legislation For Next Provincial Sitting

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau

TORONTO — The first session of the 29th Parliament will be with us shortly when the new House meets for its brief pre-Christmas sittings.

If premier Davis follows the pattern we can expect a few shocks, if not at these sittings, then at the full-scale winter session.

This pattern, and traditionally it has applied almost without exception, is that at its first session in government he gets risky and unpopular legislation out of the way. This gives time for wounds to heal before an election.

As one example, in 1968 following the '67 election John Robarts, among other things, announced at the county school boards system, introduced Sunday horse racing and raised taxes on gasoline, tobacco, and race-track bets and boosted licence fees across the board.

So logically we should expect some unpopular measures from the Davis government.

At this point, however, one can't foresee just what such unpopular measures might be. With taxes particularly, in view of his often repeated no-frills tax line policy and many references to no increase in taxes, there seems almost branch for the premier to introduce any tax measures.

Further, there is one reason for belief that he may not conform to the pattern in that in his election campaign he did not follow another, traditional practice.

This is the political technique of announcing during the election campaign that will be ready for your next one, and pay off in both.

Again going back to Robarts, in the 1963 election, he announced the intention to start the GO Transit, System (after John Wintermeyer had pressed him by announcing a plan for C.N.R. president Donald Gordon and getting his' agreement). Then in 1967 he formally opened the system.

In the '67 campaign he announced the intention to study the need for local air service, particularly in Northern Ontario. In this last campaign Davis opened the new northern air service (and it nearly didn't make it, at that).

There was little discernible in the Davis campaign along this promised line. The promise of a great tax in the Hamilton Civic Centre, which may be ripe for an opening in his next election. A major new park at Bronte, which also might pay-off twice.

But with one exception there was nothing major that comes to mind. The exception is dental care. Start, he said, with children, a program was announced prior to the campaign. And the premier could be considering a major move into dental care before he holds another vote.

So he may be breaking the pattern. But then again he did not.

We could know when the short session opens. And more likely it will be at the start of the winter session. Then there should be a new full statement of government plans.

Leslie Frost, incidentally, was a master of the announce and delay technique.

He got both elections out of one bridge near Pembroke — twice.

He announced it in 1951. Let the contract in 1955. And opened it in 1958.

If you're tired of paying too much for groceries

Don't Just Sit There DO SOMETHING!

THOUSANDS HAVE!

Switched to Dominion, that is! And they proved out our everyday deep discount prices for themselves. On their own terms...on the items they buy...on the days they prefer to shop.

So, if you still shop at some other store, maybe you should do some figuring as to why more Canadians shop Dominion than any other store. We figure it this way. Dominion shoppers get the 'total order' savings they want! The quality they want! The variety they want!

Why go on wondering? Make a decision this week! Start by turning the page and comparing items you actually bought elsewhere last week. You'll see! Like so many thousands already have... you'll turn in to your neighbourhood Dominion. And turn it into savings.

If you didn't shop Dominion last week you probably paid too much.

All were invited to come and bring friends to the turkey supper on December 8 at 8.30 p.m. Tickets cost $1.75 each and the catering will be done by the Victoria Willing Workers. Mrs. F. Bedell is to plan the program.

Mrs. O. White, corresponding secretary, read several cards of thanks from Mrs. T. Henderson, Mrs. F. Way, Miss J. Moon, Mrs. M. Jewell and Mrs. L. Sharpe. It was reported that Mrs. C. Cunningham is in hospital and had been remembered with a flower. Mrs. M. Dempsey who has been ill is at her grandaughter's in Ottawa.

The following officers were elected for 1972: president, Mrs. F. Henderson; 1st vice-president, Mrs. M. Davis; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. E. Latchford; secretary, Mrs. A. Mitchell; treasurer, Mrs. L. Fox; corresponding secretary, Mrs. O. White; pianists, Mrs. W. Weese and Mrs. A. Hardwick; social convener, Mrs. F. Bedell.

Conservation Affects Fur Industry

NEW YORK (CP) — The conservation drive to save wild animals threatened with extinction has affected the fur industry and many reputable furriers no longer use the spotted cats.

So many furs in the fall showings use ranch-bred mink and, for the cheaper coats, the plentiful muskrat, rabbit and squirrel.

Classics are the important fur styles. This is partly due to renewed interest in elegance and partly to the endangered species list. After all, it isn't practical to use good ranch mink pelts or expensive Russian sable for fun furs. Maximilian showed one midi-coat of 120 natural Russian sable skins priced at $40,000.

Of course, there are always exceptions. A few furriers, probably for publicity purposes, did show color-dyed mink, even a combination of red top and blue pants.

Said Maximilian:

"This season, fashion has been tamed and brought to heel. Now the refined woman of taste and individuality has a chance. The 1971 styles bear witness that elegance, when it's well done, is never confusing or boring."

His own Impact With Elegance collection bore this out.

Fur coats for 1971-72 include the popular wrap, as well as belted styles. The latter are mostly wide, suede or leather-belted. The fur greatcoat has more skirt width and broader shoulders, again in the new fall fashion concept.

Fur capes continue in popularity. There are a number of shoulder ones such as a matching cape on an Alaska seal coat or the two-fur looks of Russian sable shoulder cape over brown broadtail coat. Midi-length is popular for evening.

Long hairs are back in fashion. Mostly they are trims or are used for popular young "chubby" jackets. But Jean Paton of Paris created a coat of ankle-length fox skirt and cuffs with Alaska seal bodice. And at the showing by the Fur Information and Fashion Council, there was a floor-length blue fox cape.

Fur jackets have returned, too. The well-known furrier, Leo Ritter, says the fur jacket is one of the most important fashion stories. Fur jackets used to be an evening wardrobe mainstay. They aren't too practical in daytime for Canadian winters. One novel mink jacket had tie-dye suede inserts.

Even more fashionable are the layered furs, sleeveless vests or bill-board styles to wear over a dress or with casual skirt and body-knit top. Call or suede vests are extremely popular. Also shown were sleeveless fur boleros and sleeveless shells.

At the Christian Dior winter showing there were such combinations as a black beaver coat with white mink inserts and sleeves. Also an ivory broadtail with mink border and collar. Wives of the delegates to the first Canadian Conference of the International Iron and Steel Institute were shown a selection of Canadian furs including the beautiful Canadian Majestic minks.

Student Benefit Night

MADOC — Centre Hastings Secondary School held a benefit evening on Wednesday after school and later for a student who was recently injured during a sports activity at the school.

The student, Gary Forbes of Actinolite lost an eye while playing floor hockey during an activity period at the school.

Events of the evening got underway at 7 o'clock with a basketball game in which the Centre Hastings Senior Citizens (teachers) met C.J.B.Q. personnel, known as the C.J.B.Q. Ebbsfoolers in an exciting match. Immediately after the game the students enjoyed a dance in the gymnasium at which a CJBQ disc jockey was m.c. The door prizes, contests and general entertainment kept the attention of all those present. Late buses were provided to enable the students to attend this worthwhile evening.

Tickets for the evening's entertainment were sold at $1.00 each, and an accurate report of the amount raised was not available.

Policewoman's Job Worthwhile

WINNIPEG (CP) — Hatched in the corner of the cruiser car, a young officer waits for one of the police officers to speak. He knows glue sniffing is against the law and everyone else is doing it. Why should he be odd man out?

Some hours later, cuffed when the woman officer turns to him, places her hand gently on his sad face. "No need to tremble, we're here to help, no hurt you."

At juvenile division in the police station, the kid is asked some questions, his parents are notified He is hungry and is given a sandwich by the policewoman who has not left his side.

NO UNIFORM — Lucienne Gelinas(, a 12 year veteran of the Winnipeg police force, prefers to work without a police uniform. She says the eight women on the force don't want youngsters to think of them in terms of uniform, but rather as concerned people who are trying to help." (CP Photo)

Ann Landers

She talks, jokes and questions. But he knows she means business when she says certain things must change He is agreeable when told he will have to attend weekly guidance classes as a first offender

Not every juvenile is fortunate enough to come to terms with a drug habit in this manner, but there are enough to make a policewoman's job worthwhile

Since the First World War, Winnipeg police have employed women as constables in the morality and juvenile branches From 1941 to 1956, there was only one In 1956 the number increased to four and now it stands at eight

Qualifications for the job are not precise, says acting chief Jack Wesley.

"At one time a policewoman had to be at least 25 years old, then we lowered the age to 21 and now there is no age limitation"

The eight women, who range in age from 23 to 60, have undergone the same basic 14-week recruit training as the men. Within the year, they are eligible up for promotion When they reach the rank of first-constable, they are earning $10,000 a year, the same wage as the men

At any given time, a policewoman can be found on regular car patrol; conducting investigations in juvenile cases; working with the narcotics squad; trying to track down an illicit gambling operation

They wear no official police uniform, although the acting chief said he would like to see them wear one on a regular basis to "identify them to the public"

Lucienne Gelinas, a 12 year veteran of the force, explained why she preferred to be without the uniform.

"Most of the people I deal with know me without a uniform As far as juveniles go, it would act as a barrier We don't want them to think of us in terms of a uniform, but rather as concerned people who are trying to help"

However, "we are not social workers although we do some counselling Mace often than not we will refer them to the proper agency"

In the juvenile branch, the police officer's work generally takes the form of preventive programs or the investigation of offences

"We do the same work a detective would do. We try to establish the reasons why an offence occurred such as the background of the child, the environment in which he was living, and the circumstances surrounding the offence"

Even a seasoned police officer like Constable Gelinas can be horrified by some of the sights on her tour of duty She was recently involved in a case of a 13-year-old girl on amphetamines who was hitch-hiking across Canada.

"When I saw her she had needle marks covering both arms, behind her knees and on the soles of her feet Her veins were badly damp and noticeably inflamed

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Can the office 'cutup' be curbed?

IF IT IS NECESSARY, YES, the fellow or girl who keeps the rest of the office staff in stitches can be curbed or disciplined. Usually, though, any office or group of employees is lucky to have someone to provide a laugh and lift the spirits. Yet, when the office comic gets out of hand, the remedy is simple and relatively harmless. Sometime when the "cutup" is quiet for the day, let everyone else do some cutting up.

Is the spoiled child 'spoiled' for life?

IN ONE SENSE, YES. The spoiled child may grow up to realize that he cannot go on having everybody doing things for him, Yet, that he cannot go on having everybody doing things for him, yet, even if he were to mature mentally, such an individual may feel the effects of his being spoiled when he tries to set a goal for himself. Because his parents had spoiled him, he may never be afraid to strive too hard for any ambition lest he be too hurt if he were to fail.

Does a wife want to be understood?

ONLY up to a point. A wife wants her husband to know what she could have if she didn't marry him; she also wants him to understand that she loves him, and she wouldn't put up with him another minute if it wasn't for her love for him and his for her. Yet, she does not want to be an "open book" to any one—not even her husband; and she wants a part of herself to be a mystery even to herself.

Home and School Association News

BAYVIEW-

HARRY J. CLARKE

The Bayview — Harry J. Clarke home and school association held a well attended meeting on Tuesday, November 9. The meeting was opened by Mrs. A. Fort who stated that the skate sale and the UNICEF collections from both schools were very successful.

There was a short discussion period after which Mrs. G. Hasselfelt introduced the guest for the evening, Mr. Stirling, superintendent of the Moira Association of school groups. Mr. Stirling opened his presentation with a list of some of the active committees within the school board. These varied from beginners and health services to technical and hard of hearing services.

He then assembled everyone present into groups which included at least one teacher and executive member. They were to discuss problems that they, as parents were concerned with and to summarize with one problem of interest to all present. As the groups discussed their different topics, coffee and sandwiches were served.

Mr. Stirling then listed eight different topics of discussion and from these suggested that some of them could be chosen for possible future home and school meetings.

At the conclusion of this portion of the evening Dr. Dondale thanked Mr. Stirling for bringing to everyone's attention, many interesting points for future discussions.

Mrs. Hasselfelt and Mr. Muir both announced that parent interviews with the teacher would be the last week of November. Mrs. Fort adjourned the meeting.

Big Sister Takes Over for Christmas

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Although I am now 25 and carrying a responsible job, for the first time in my life I find myself in the position of having to "make Christmas" for my younger brothers and sisters, as well as some elder cousins who are always at loose ends.

My mother used to do all this, and in a way that made everybody feel relaxed and happy, and full of Christmas spirit. But Mother died in January and this time it is up to me.

How can I follow such a beloved hostess? Dad will help, of course. But, Doris, I need all the ideas I can get. — Sandie Ross

Dear Sandie: Brave soul! You'll make it. And the key is to share it — lock, stock and barrel. Every single one of those buddies and sisters and hangers-on should have a part in it, right from first planning stages on. Which means starting about now.

What you do first is call a conference — around your own dining room table, and with coffee and cookies all round. You discuss Christmas dinner menu, open house arrangements or pre-Christmas party; gifts for whom and how much; and charity effort — and I'd advise something the teens can get into — they would love it.

I have the following leaflets which can help: (1) Christmas Games, (2) Three Christmas Candles You Can Make, (3) Suggestions for Santa (a gift list for children nine years and up), (4) Banish Those Christmas Blues (about keeping the gift list within reason) and (5) On Knowing How to Give (suggesting how to handle community giving). Send 26 cents for each leaflet desired, and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope. • •

Dear Doris: Why is it that my two children and our in-laws have to suffer because my wife hates to "do find herself" — after 20 years of marriage?

All I did was love her, and I still do. But the trouble started because I was jealous. I would always ask her where she was, when she came home late. I know for sure she only lived for us and there was no other man.

What I am getting at is that she gave no thought to all the people she would hurt by walking out. My two girls have changed, and her mother and sister are worried sick. — My Selfish Love

Dear Selfish Love: To be everlastingly badgered by a marriage partner to whom, you have given the best you have, and taunted about a love affair you never dreamed of having — this is enough to drive any woman off her rocker. Are you sure she didn't think twice — nay, many times — before throwing up her hands?

Would you change if she were to return? Help your girls to harbor no feelings of rejection; and when your wife eventually gets in touch, try adding a loving trust to your regard for her.

Dear Doris: I have a lovely engagement ring-wedding band ensemble. I also have a wide band which matches that of my husband. However, the three rings cannot fit on one finger.

Is it ethical to wear my diamonds on the right hand and my band on the left hand? — A Newlywed

Dear Newlywed: You plighted your troth by "the giving and receiving of a ring", and you did your husband. Either of your rings is a symbol of love and either may be worn — on third finger, left hand.

Newest Fashions To Be Accessorized

NEW YORK (AP) — For the women who never liked to co-ordinate their own belts, blouses, sweaters, skirts and jackets, designers are offering the complete outfit for spring.

Molly Parnis's dress-and-jacket combinations have a finished look, with ties at the throat and white collars and cuffs for easy cleaning. Her noncrease jacquard cotton prints hold their own and need no more adornment, not even jewelry.

She offers the independent coat dress, in quiet clear stripes.

At Jerry Silverman, day clothes have the same finished look that designer Shannon de Lorenzo has with little dresses, broken with blocks of color or a spray of white stripes at the neck. A woman would be hard-pressed to find a place for jewelry on these.

All Marriages Are Not Like Theirs

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing this letter to the thousands of unhappily married parents who hate each other's guts but are staying together for the sake of the kids. My advice is don't do it.

I grew up in a house where mom and dad thought they were doing us kids a favor, but believe me, we would have been better off if they had split when the trouble started—10 years ago, at least. The only peace we knew was when dad left. When he came back we were miserable because we knew it was just a matter of time before he and mom would be at it again.

My kid brother has an ulcerated colon .My sister has migraine headaches. I have a skin rash that breaks out when I get upset. I am thankful for one thing, however. My parents' marriage has settled something important for me. I'm staying single.—Dayton Victim

Dear Day: You didn't ask for any advice but here's some anyway. Don't throw out the whole crate of eggs because a couple are cracked. All marriages are not like your parents.'

Dear Ann Landers: I have never written to you before and am surprised that I am doing so now, but I couldn't let today's column pass without comment-ing. I refer to the letter from the woman who described psychiatrists as "fakes" and "charlatans."

I have been in therapy for three years and have encouraged other members of my family to get help. I credit therapy with changing my outlook on living. A psychiatrist can save a life if the same dramatic way that other medical doctors can. As in any other profession, you can be lucky enough to get the right doctor. Sometimes it takes shopping, (it did in my case.) It also takes a willingness to work with the doctor at the most difficult job in the world—discarding old ideas and comfortable prejudices. I'd like to see this letter in print. If you publish it I'll tell my therapist I wrote it. —Anonymous

Dear Anon: Here it is. Tell him . . . and just in case any of you less articulate ones out there would like to tell your therapist you wrote it for wish you had—be my guest.

Dear Ann Landers: I am 16 and have never had a date. It's my own fault and I know it. Please help me get my thoughts sorted out.

My dad died when I was eight .Mom didn't know anything about business and within two years she was flat broke. She took a job doing housework for different families because she could make more money as a day lady than if she worked in one place. Many nights she comes home so tired she can barely drag herself to bed. I cook and clean and help her as much as I can. The problem is that our house is awfully shabby and I am ashamed to let anyone see it. It's spotlessly clean, but it needs painting and wallpaper, and the rugs are worn out and the furniture is awful. When the boys get friendly I find myself giving them the freeze before they ask me out. I don't want anyone to come here to live. I have updated some awfully nice pics for this reason and I don't know what's going to become of me if I keep this up. Please give me some confidence —or maybe a kick in the pants. I need something.—Wyoming Nut Wit

Dear Wyo: No girl has to apologize for her home, so long as it is clean. Accept the very next fellow who asks for a date—and if nobody asks within the next two weeks—I suggest that you invite some nice young man over—just to play records and talk. Once you get over this foolish hangup you'll be fine. Get going and good luck.

Several Savagely Beaten, Court Told

KINGSTON, Ont (CP) — The non-capital murder trial of 18 Kingston penitentiary prisoners was told Monday that some of the accused had subjected other prisoners to merciless beatings during a riot at the prison last April.

A witness, paroled from the prison since the riot, testified he had seen a number of the accused slam fellow convicts into helplessness with iron bars and other torture while other prisoners looked on.

"All (the victims) seemed to be dead," the 25-year-old witness told the Ontario Supreme Court trial, now in its third week.

The 13 are charged in the deaths of Guard Peter Brian Ennor, 36, and Bertrand Robert, 39. Witnesses have testified that Ennor and Robert, along with other so-called undesirables, were tied in a circle of chairs and beaten during the four-day riot.

Mr. Justice William Henderson has instructed that names of prisoners or former-prisoners testifying not be made public during the trial.

The witness Monday identified seven prisoners who were in the dome area of the prison at the time of the beatings. He did not name the accused but identified them for the court by describing their physical appearances and location in the prisoners' dock.

He said one of the accused, Glenn Morris, 34, of Staunton, Va., looked as if he was wielding a scythe as he beat a prisoner's skull with an iron bar.

"If you're going to kill a guy, kill him," the witness told the jury. "Well, Joe (Morris) was done area of the prison at the time of the beatings. He did not name the accused but identified them for the court by describing their physical appearances and

He said Ernest Bugler, 24, of St. Thomas, Ont., wore black gloves and swung a bar as heavy "as one inmate," and that David Birt, 24, of Charlottetown, also hit several prisoners on the skull with a bar.

The final prisoner accused was Edward Johnson, 24, of Clarkson, Ont., whom the witness said wore a painter's cap while beating others on the knees and back and side of the head.

The witness said the attackers were circling the ring of chairs "smiling, laughing; just like a bunch having a good time".

The witness, living in British Columbia since his parole, was serving a sentence during the riot for a variety of offences, including robbery, theft and absconding bail.

Besides the seven he identified, the others charged with non-capital murder are: Wayne McGurgin, 23, Toronto; Edward Fowler, 18, Toronto; Donald Ogg, 20, London, Ont; Brian Beaucage, 23, London, Ont; Brian Dodge, Petrolia, Ont; David Shepley, 24, Windsor, Ont.

Capital Gains Tax Opposed If Levied on Family Farms

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition MPs tried in the Commons again Monday to trample government tax proposals dealing with agriculture.

This time the targets were clauses in the tax bill that would introduce a capital gains tax.

They opposed application of the tax to profits gained on the sale or bequest of family farms.

Last week, some opposition MPs talked the government into suspending debate on several other clauses affecting dairymen and ranchers, by making it clear they were prepared to debate the provisions indefinitely.

Opening the capital gains debate, Conservative finance critic Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) offered an amendment that would exempt farmland entirely from the new tax on profits from investments.

The amendment would permit farmers to sell, give away or will their land without incurring a tax on the increased value of the land when it is transferred.

David Lewis, New Democratic leader, agreed that family farms needed a break from the proposed tax, but disagreed on how to get it.

He said the Conservative amendment would lead to speculation in farmland, driving young farmers out of reach of farmers who wanted to stay in business.

He recommended a three-part alternative: Exempt from the tax any land passed on to heirs who continue farming; exempt money earned from the sale of farmland that is used to buy another farm, and exempt money earned from the sale of land that is put into a pension fund.

Mr. Lewis also differed with Mr. Lambert on the general question of the capital gains tax.

Mr. Lambert said now is the wrong time for a new tax which he said could be inflationary.

But Mr. Lewis wanted to go farther than the government bill, which would apply tax to only half a taxpayer's gains from property or stock-market shares.

He said all capital gains should be taxed, the same way wages and salaries are taxed.

If the wealthy don't pay their share, Mr. Lewis said, the less wealthy and the less powerful have to carry an extra burden.

On the issue of the capital gains tax on farms, Finance Minister E. J. Benson said the tax would be based on the increase in value between the fair market value on valuation day — to be set for sometime this fall — and the date of transfer.

The so-called "day" value would be set by the owner and checked by the revenue department.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the tissues inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved. And actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Opening lead—jack of clubs.

The secret of good dummy play is the ability to read how the unseen cards are divided. If you could see all four hands instead of just two, you would practically always achieve the best result.

This knack of figuring out the opponents' cards is available to anyone willing to examine all the clues and put them together to form a composite picture consistent with the bidding and plays that have taken place.

For example, consider declarer's problem in this deal after West leads a club against five diamonds doubled. Declarer ruffs and plays a diamond to the ten, losing to the ace. Back comes a club, ruffed again by declarer, and, after cashing the king of trumps, South arrives at the crucial point of the hand.

To make the contract he must avoid losing two heart tricks. He can accomplish this easily enough if West has the ace, by leading hearts twice towards the K-Q. But if East has the ace, this method of play will fail, since a second heart trick would eventually be lost to the jack or ten.

The first thing South does at this point is to try to figure out where the ace is located. Actually, this is not a difficult task, for East could not sensibly double five clubs without the ace of hearts.

Accordingly, South leads a heart and finesses the nine. This play proves to be sensationally successful because West has the J-10 and the nine forces the ace.

The nine is clearly the right play—even though it requires considerable luck for the play to succeed. Once East is assigned the ace of hearts, South has no chance unless he relies on the deep finesse.

Davis Says He Has Support For Selecting Economic Goals

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier William Davis said Monday that other provinces appear to be warming up to his proposal for a federal-provincial committee to recommend national economic goals.

But federal reaction was not exactly enthusiastic, he said after presenting the proposal at the opening session of the federal-provincial conference on the economy and inter-government fiscal relationships.

"I am encouraged by the increasingly positive response from other provinces," he said in an interview after the conference adjourned today.

The federal response "was not completely enthusiastic but they will give it consideration."

He expected a decision before the conference ends Wednesday and said officials from all governments would be discussing the proposal today.

Mr. Davis said the committee would "recommend" rather than "determine" economic goals.

There were no heated disputes as the closed conference Monday, Mr. Davis said.

"I don't want to take the excitement out of this but there just weren't any."

Premier Allan Blakeney of Saskatchewan said in an interview that the proposed economic committee could not go as far as divulging provincial taxation and budgetary measures. But he agreed with the principle. So did Premiers Robert Bourassa of Quebec and Ed Schreyer of Manitoba.

Ontario made 16 other specific requests to the federal government and Mr. Davis said he expects "more answers to some of our questions, but I can't say what form they will take."

He did agree that the Ontario and Quebec submissions were "quite similar."

Courting Reds Threat To U.S. Jobs--Meany

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — President George Meany of the AFL-CIO accused President Richard Nixon Monday of making overtures to world Communist leaders in an effort to open new trade markets for American corporations that would subject United States workers to cut-throat wage competition.

Meany also repeated his attack on new wage controls imposed over labor's objections by Nixon's pay board.

"I don't see anyone around here or anywhere around the labor movement who is ready to buy the swindle they're trying to impose on us in Washington," he said.

Meany's comments in two speeches to labor conventions broke his week-long silence since originally denouncing the wage limits.

"The president is going all-out to cultivate Communist China and almost any other place in the world where freedom no longer exists," Meany told the labor groups meeting in advance of Thursday's main AFL-CIO convention of some 1,000 delegates representing nearly 14 million workers.

"The thing that concerns me in this new approach is a further threat to American jobs," he said.

U.S. labor unions have been complaining for several years that American corporations were setting up more branches overseas to take advantage of cheap foreign labor at the expense of jobs for workers here.

Amchitka Damage Disputed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the United States Atomic Energy Commission said Monday environmental damage to Amchitka Island from the underground nuclear blast Nov. 6 was minimal. He also said it is not likely that nuclear material in the test zone will ever seep into the ocean.

Dr. James R. Schlesinger told a congressional subcommittee he is firmly convinced that whatever damage has taken place to date will be the extent of the damage."

He said the AEC will continue to monitor the waters around Amchitka in Alaska's Aleutian Islands, to measure any leakage "if any should occur."

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Alaska's commissioner of fish and game says his department's preliminary observations at Amchitka Island indicate from 300 to 800 sea otters may have been killed by the five-megaton Canaikin underground nuclear blast.

Wallace H. Noerenberg said Monday a department biologist responsible for studying the Aleutian island discovered "quite a credibility gap" in reports on animal kills emanating from the Atomic Energy Commission.

Biologist Karl Snyder told the Anchorage Daily News the blast also "obviously killed hundreds of birds and probably thousands of fish."

Reusable Beer Case Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government moved Monday to standardize the shape of all beer bottles packaged in the province to pave the way for a standard, reusable beer case.

Heidelberg Brewing Co., the firm most affected because of its keg-shaped bottle, announced it will comply with the government request and use a standard bottle.

A statement from Premier David' office said Monday the government wants all companies to use the standard-shaped bottle to allow the introduction of a returnable beer carton on which the customer would pay a deposit.

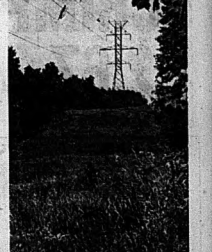
Jack Winter looks at trees with an eye to your future.

Jack Winter, Chief Forester for Ontario Hydro, is a Bachelor of Science of Forestry. He heads a staff of 17 professional foresters who plan and co-ordinate the work of 100 forestry crews across the province. Their work ranges from landscaping at new power developments to beautifying hundreds of miles of land along power lines.

Here at De Cew Falls (photo above), where extensive planting was undertaken by Hydro from 1948 to 1953, Jack inspects Scotch Pine needles for any evidence of disease or infestation—a routine phase of the continuous maintenance being carried on. The treed acreage at De Cew provides a year-round haven for birds and wildlife, while offering hikers and picnickers a parkland retreat.



Currently, over 100,000 tree seedlings are planted each year as part of Hydro's continuing reforestation program. Since 1932, over 2,000,000 trees have been planted. Cleared areas have been restored and improved, dead and diseased trees have been replaced with sturdy, disease-resistant stock.

Experimental research is another important undertaking. At Hydro's 75-acre demonstration nursery at Pickering, for example, studies are being conducted on 39 different tree species to confirm which varieties, when planted along Hydro power-line routes, are most compatible with their surroundings.

"We're breaking ground in many ways," explains Jack. "Testing . . . planting . . . improving . . . When it comes to protecting the countryside for future generations, you have to look ahead and do the job right."

Hydro has embarked on a program to improve the appearance of land under power lines. Tests in biological control are underway to provide the most suitable combinations of grasses for ground cover that will grow quickly in cleared areas, retard unwanted weed and brush growth and give cover for wildlife. Also, the possibilities are being explored for extending use of these properties to include public parklands in both urban and rural areas.

Jonas Unanimous Choice as Western CFL All-Star

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg Blue Bombers—led by Don Jonas as the unanimous choice at quarterback—dominate the offensive team chosen by the Football Reporters of Canada in their ballot for the 1971 Western Football Conference all-star squad.

In a selection announced today, Calgary Stampeders—with middle-linebacker Wayne Harris making it for the 11th consecutive year—got the majority of positions on the defensive team. Harris was one vote short of being a unanimous choice.

Bombers, who had the best offensive record and the second-seven defensive record in the Canadian Football League this year, placed seven men on the offensive team. British Columbia Lions, Saskatchewan Roughriders and the Stampeders won two spots each with Edmonton Eskimos shut out. There was one tie.

Stampeders, with by far the best defensive record in the CFL, won a similar seven spots on the defensive team with Edmonton and Saskatchewan picking up three each and Winnipeg, B.C. did not place a man and there were two ties.

There were only two other unanimous choices—Jim Evenson, running back for B.C., and Dick Dupuis, defensive halfback with Edmonton.

The teams:

OFFENCE

—Running backs—Jim Evenson, B.C.; George Reed, Saskatchewan; Mack Herron, Winnipeg.

Flanker—Bob LaRose, Winnipeg.

Quarterback—Don Jonas, Winnipeg.

Centre—Bob Swift, Winnipeg, and Basil Bark, Calgary, tied.

Guards—Jack Abendschan, Saskatchewan, and Bob Lueck, Winnipeg.

Tackles—Bill Frank, Winnipeg, and Ken Sugimoto, B.C.

Tight End—Herman Harrison, Calgary.

Split End—Jim Thorpe, Winnipeg.

DEFENCE

Tackles—John Helton, Calgary, and John LaCroix, Edmonton.

Ends—Bill Baker; Saskatchewan, and Dick Suderman, Calgary, and Craig Koiman, Calgary, tied.

Middle Linebacker—Wayne Harris, Calgary.

Outside Linebackers—Wayne Shaw, Saskatchewan, and Dave Gasser, Edmonton, and Bob McLaren, Winnipeg, tied.

Backs—Dick Dupuis, Edmonton; Frank Andruski, Calgary; Larry Robinson, Calgary; Bruce Bennett, Saskatchewan, and Howard Starks, Calgary.

Jonas, traded by Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Conference to Winnipeg in a pre-season deal, scored four touchdowns himself and passed for 27 others. He kicked 40 converts, 15 field goals and 12 singles for 121 points to lead the country in total scoring.

One of his favorite targets was Jim Thorpe, also traded to Winnipeg by the Argos, who led the league in receiving

Leo Remembers '61 Comeback

TORONTO (CP) — Leo Cahill is trying awfully hard to make his Toronto Argonauts think about 1961 rather than 60 minutes to Grey Cup.

The Argos overpowered Hamilton Tiger-Cats 22-8 in the opening game Sunday of the Eastern Football Conference's two-game, total-point final.

However, the Ticats are veteran playoff performers and the 15-point spread enjoyed by Toronto for next Saturday's finale here doesn't impress coach Cahill.

"We're not celebrating anything yet," he was heard mumbling later in the Argo dressing room. True to his word, he had his warriors watching game films Monday.

Asked whether he thought 15 points was a big enough spread for the second game, Cahill replied: "Hell, I can remember when 18 points wasn't enough for Argos."

Cahill was an assistant with Montreal Alouettes in 1961 when the Boatmen, who last represented the East in the national final in 1952, bombed the Ticats 25-7 in the opening game of their two-game Eastern final.

Hamilton rebounded to even the count at 27-27 in regulation time of the second game, then squashed the Argos with 38 more points in overtime.

One player looking forward to the Grey Cup in Vancouver Nov. 28 is Argo captain Mel Profit. The rangy tight end limited after the game in Hamilton Sunday he was considering retirement.

"The only reason I'm playing now is to have the opportunity to win the Grey Cup, if we win it," added the 30-year-old veteran, "then I'll have fulfilled my obligations to myself at Toronto."

Short Share For Kison

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Kison, the hero of the first night game in World Series history, was given only a three-quarter share by the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates, baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced today.

The 21-year-old right-hander, who was called up by the Pirates in mid-season and compiled a 6-5 record before his World Series heroics, was voted $13,623.44 by his fellow players. A full share was worth $18,164.58. The vote was taken before the Series.

Kison relieved starter John Walker in the first inning of the fourth World Series game against Baltimore on Oct. 12 and blanked the shutting Orioles on one hit over 6 1-3 innings. He left in the seventh inning for reliever Hitler Mill May, who delivered the game-winning hit in a 4-3 Pittsburgh triumph.

Kison was credited with the victory, tying the series 2-2. Pittsburgh then went on to win the championship in seven games.

Over-all, the Pirates voted 21 full shares from their pot of $627,237.11 of the 1971 World Series and championship series receipts. They went to 23 players, manager Danny Murtaugh, five coaches, trainer Tony Bartirome and clubhouse manager John Hallahan.

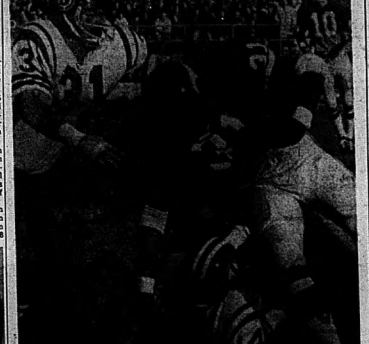
They also voted several smaller shares, but did not give any money to their ground crew. The ground crew had received a full share to split last year when the Pirates won the National League's East Division title.

Meanwhile, the Orioles also voted 31 full shares of $13,906.45 from their total earnings of $470,427.84. They gave a one-month share to Jay Matusson, their crippled batboy whose hands were burned off in a childhood accident. The 16-year-old Maxtone retired after the 1971 season. He had held the batboy's job for four years.

Picard Fractures Ankle

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues, away to their poorest start in the National Hockey League since 1967-68, received another jolt Monday with the loss of veteran defenceman Noel Picard.

A Blues announcement said Picard, who has scored one goal and five assists, suffered multiple fractures of the right ankle when fallen on by a horse during an accident near Ironton, Mo., south of here.



Dr. J. G. Probstein, team physician, performed surgery on Picard Sunday night and his condition Monday was listed as satisfactory.

The national team has gone to the detail of recreating "Sapporo snow" on French mountainsides in its preparation for the Olympics.

Rangers Deal Connelly

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers traded four players to St. Louis Blues Monday in exchange for veteran Wayne Connelly and two others in a National Hockey League swap.

Moving to the Blues were left wing Jack Egers, defenceman Andre Dupont and right wing Mike Murphy along with a player to be named later.

The key man from New York's standpoint was Carr, a 20-year-old who was the Blues' No. 1 junior draft choice last summer. Carr has 36 goals and 104 points last season for Flin Flon Bombers of the Western Canada Hockey League and had three goals and two assists in 14 games this season with the Blues.

"We had Carr rated right at the top of our list last June," said Emile Francis, New York's general manager-coach.

Connelly, 31, had come to the Blues last February along with Gary Unger in the trade that sent Red Berenson to Detroit Red Wings. He had five goals and 10 points for St. Louis this season and has seen prior NHL service with Minnesota North Stars and Boston Bruins.

Lorentz had 19 goals and 40 points for St. Louis last year and was a member of Boston's Stanley Cup champions in 1969-70. He first appeared in just 12 games with only one point so far this year.

Egers had two goals in 17 games for the Rangers this season while Dupont had been with Providence Reds of the American League and Murphy, a Rangers camp holdout, was with Omaha Knights of the Central League.

Cards Lose 20-17

Sunk in Last Second

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Dennis Partee's 45-yard, last-second field goal lifted San Diego Chargers over St. Louis Cardinals 20-17 in their national television National Football League game Monday night.

The kick that made the Chargers 4-5 in the American Conference West and the Cardinals 3-6 in the National Conference East was Partee's longest of the season.

"I didn't know how far it was," Partee said, "and I didn't think about distance or anything —I was determined not to miss this one."

He said he felt his chance was one in three of succeeding from such a distance.

Partee's boot followed a game-saving St. Louis touchdown with 17 seconds left when Cid Edwards plunged for a yard. The Cardinals then attempted an onside kick, but they didn't recover and San Diego, with John Hadl throwing a 16-yard pass to Gary Garrison, got field goal position and stopped the clock with a last time out.

The onside kick plus an all-purpose effort by San Diego running back Mike Montgomery in his first NFL start, two interceptions from rookie safety Bryant Salter were factors in San Diego's victory.

Rookie St. Louis coach Bob Hollway said he called the onside kick "to regain possession of the football" and go for winning points. He also hoped the ball would travel to the San Diego 30 or 35 if the Chargers recovered, force them to use their last time out and wind up with a tie.

But Charger rookie Lee Thomas fell on the ball at the San Diego 47.

Montgomery, who ran for 98 yards, passed for 33 and caught passes for 77—total offence of 208 yards—was a Charger hero.

After Bobby Howard intercepted a Jim Hart pass to seemingly kill the Cardinals for the night, Montgomery fumbled the ball to Cardinal linebacker Jamie Rivers and St. Louis marched to its game-tying score.

Salter's second interception led to San Diego's score that brought a 10-10 tie in the fourth quarter.

Hadl completed 20 of 28 passes with one interception. Hart was 17 of 35 with three, but Hart had two passes dropped in the end zone by John Gilliam.

Harris Key Stampeder In Bid for Cup Berth

CALGARY (CP) — For a 210-pounder, Wayne Harris makes a big impression on offensive running backs.

When they get the ball, they usually find the veteran Calgary Stampeders middle linebacker in the way, waiting to knock them off their feet.

Considering all the traffic through the centre of the line, Harris' weight is not formidable, but agility and power more than compensate.

When the Stampeders take on Saskatchewan Roughriders Wednesday night in an attempt to wrap up the best-of-three Western Football Conference final in two straight games, Harris says he will have to be at his best.

In his 11 years as a professional he has shown he is seldom bad or even mediocre.

Each year he has been named to an all-star team and three times, in 1966, 1968 and 1970, he has been Canada's outstanding lineman.

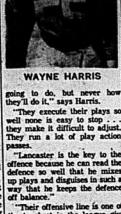
His name is up for the award again this year.

Despite the frequency of past awards "I still get the same thrill . . . my feel lucky you've been nominated," considering Calgary has "some outstanding linemen."

"If you make a mistake you know one of them will cover up, but they tend to make you hustle more."

"Your job is to make tackles and you have to hustle or one of them will make it first."

That's the kind of competition which makes a "good defensive team."



In the first game of the WFC final, which the Stampeders took from Saskatchewan 30-21, Harris said Roughriders full-back George Reed ran strongly. But to stop their ground game, the defence also has to keep an eye on Silar McKinnie and Bobby Thompson; the latter can be devastating if he gets outside on a sweep.

"They can do so many things. We've played them so many times we know what they're going to do, but never how they'll do it," says Harris.

"They execute their plays so well none is easy to stop . . . they make it difficult to adjust. They run a lot of play action passes.

"Lancaster is the key to the offence because he can read the defence so well that he mixes up plays and disguises in such a way that he keeps the defence off balance."

"Their offensive line is one of the toughest in the league giving good pass protection, strong blocking on running plays and handling blitzes well.

WAYNE HARRIS

"We are basically not a blitzing club but they can pick it up and Lancaster reads a blitz fast and can beat it."

In the last couple of years, says Harris, his job has been tougher and compounded a little by injuries to his 33-year-old anchor.

But what really bothered him was revised blocking techniques, aimed specifically at the middle linebacker.

He usually gets double-teamed on running plays with the offensive centre and a tackle coming at him.

One hits him straight on and the other comes in a blind-side angle to knock him out of the play.

The play is effective, he says, and has forced adjustments. But with two men on him it leaves someone else with less to handle.

Although Harris has contributed much to Calgary's success in the last few years, there's one other thing he would like to do for the Stampeders—score a touchdown.

"I guess it's always a linebacker's dream.

The closest I came was in Edmonton a couple years ago when I ran a ball back to the one-yard line then was knocked out of bounds."

And it's doubtful the graduate of Arkansas College would ever be asked about the National Football League. He came to Calgary because they offered more money than the United States team which drafted him.

Petty Clinches NASCAR Title

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Richard Petty has clinched his third NASCAR Grand-National driving championship and 200 Winston Cup with his victory in Sunday's Capital City 500 at Richmond, Va.

With two races remaining at North Wilkesboro, N.C., Nov. 21, and Bryan, Texas, Dec. 5, the Plymouth driving Petty holds a 225-point lead over James Hylton of Inman, S.C., who drives a Ford.

Petty won $20,000 from the $100,000 Winston Cup program. He already had won the first two legs of the competition worth another $20,000.

The Randleman, N.C., native, who has won a record $274,180 this year, will also receive approximately $20,000 from NASCAR to win more than $300,000 in one season.

Dear Clarence:

Don't Tell Canucks About Dilution in NHL

NEW YORK (AP) — Boston Bruins downed 11 goals against Los Angeles Kings, a 1967 National Hockey League expansion team, Sunday night.

New York Rangers stored six goals and ousted Vancouver Canucks, a 1970 NHL expansion team, 33-18 Sunday night.

The NHL is adding two more expansion teams next season and has plans for two more in 1974.

Question: What's going on here?

Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL, has said that the quality of play since the league started expanding has been diluted. And after Sunday night, he was getting no argument—certainly not from the Vancouver people.

"There all about parity," chuckled Babe Pratt, a former NHL defenceman who now is an assistant vice-president with the Canucks.

"Well, I'll tell you something," Pratt continued. "Parity is a joke. You'll never see parity in sports."

Pratt and Canucks' coach Hal Laycoe were still feeling the sting of the Ranger assault.

HAL LAYCOE

"That wasn't hockey last night," noted Laycoe, "but you know, I think the fans enjoyed it. They wanted more."

"They all say, 'Look, we were in the cellar for 10 years, be patient,'" said Laycoe. "But do you think the people who paid $6 million for the franchise and the 15,000 fans in Vancouver have to be patient.

"It wasn't their fault that those older teams were in the basement."

Laycoe thinks part of the parity answer might be to make free agents out of all professional hockey players except those already in the National League. That would make topnotch minor leaguers now owned by powerhouse NHL teams like New York and Boston, available to the have-nots.

"I've got an idea," piped up Pratt. "When they realign the teams into four divisions of four teams each, they ought to put New York, Boston, Montreal and Chicago in one division and have only one of them make the playoffs."

"That would make things more interesting, wouldn't it?"

Laycoe realizes that will never happen and his idea of a square break for the new teams has an even more remote chance.

"Let them protect eight men in the draft next summer instead of 15," said Laycoe, a glint in his eye.

Laycoe and Pratt both go back to the days when the NHL had just six teams and the playoff berths were a major accomplishment for the Rangers. In fact, Pratt played defence for the last Ranger team to win the Stanley Cup back in 1939-40.

"That's right, and the day after we won the Cup, do you know what the headline was on the back page of the papers?" Pratt asked.

No, his audience replied. What?

"Dimaggio Signs."

In tonight's NHL action, California Golden Seals are at Montreal Canadiens, Detroit Red Wings visit St. Louis Blues and Pittsburgh Penguins entertain Minnesota North Stars.

Rangers Double Up But Can't Catch Espo

MONTREAL (CP) — How do you cope with a team that scores one goal for every one scored by the opposition?

That's the question being asked by the other 12 teams in the National Hockey League today about New York Rangers.

Combining the scoring efforts of linemates Vic Hadfield, Rod Gilbert and Jean Ratelle with the goaltending of Gilles Villemure and Ed Giacomin, the Rangers, with three victories again last week, stretched their winning streak to six games and their undefeated string to 14.

The last New York loss was Oct. 13 when Boston Bruins defeated them 6-1 at New York. Since then the Rangers have won 11 of 14 games while outscoring the opposition 69-27.

In their best six games the Rangers allowed only seven goals against while scoring 36. This lowered New York's goals-against average to 2.23 from 2.81. In 17 games so far the Rangers have scored 77 goals while allowing the opposition 38.

The Rangers are off to the best start of any team in the last 30 years. However, Boston holds the records for both the longest undefeated and longest winning streaks, going 23 games without a loss in 1940-41 and winning 14 consecutive contests in 1929-30.

PHIL ESPOSITO

But despite all the heroics by the Rangers, Boston's Phil Esposito is once again the NHL's scoring leader.

Esposito, who picked up nine points last week—including five in the Bruins' 11-2 romp over Los Angeles Kings Sunday—for a total of 36, one more than Hadfield and two more than Gilbert. All three have 13 goals.

Ratelle is fourth with 28 points, one more than Boston's Bobby Orr. Orr had a six-point game against the Kings, including the second three-goal game of his career. He leads in assists with 18.

Left winger Rick Martin of Buffalo Sabres remains the hottest scorer among the rookies. Martin, fifth overall in the scoring race, has 22 points—twice as many as Marcel Dionne of Detroit Red Wings and Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens.

Chicago Black Hawks, leaders in the NHL's West Division, have recaptured the lead in the Vezina Trophy race from Minnesota North Stars.

Chicago goalies Gary Smith and Tony Esposito now have a combined goals-against of 1.64. Cesare Maniago and Gump Worsley of the Stars have a combined mark of 1.75.

Toronto Midgets Get Hockey Lesson

MONTREAL (CP) — A midget hockey team from the Toronto suburb of Aurora, which returned to Canada Monday after a 10-day tour of Sweden, likes Swedish hockey even though they lost four of their five games there.

Bill Dinsmore, 16-year-old team captain, said he wished the Canadian game was more like the Swedish one because "there was a lot more skating and passing and a lot less of the rough stuff and cheap shots like here."

The 21 members of Aurora Toyota Midgets and team officials, who left for Sweden Nov. 5 with some 90 fans, liked the wide rinks, ice skating, passing and physical conditioning of Swedish hockey.

The team made up of 14- 15-year-olds who play in the North York league of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association won their first game 7-3 against Sodertalje, played in the Swedish capital of Stockholm.

But they lost the four other games. Six players were suffering from the flu in one of their losses and team captain Dinsmore was out for two games with a knee injury.

Coach Bob Hookings was particularly impressed with the conditioning of the Swedes who, he said, spend two to three hours exercising for every hour they are on the ice

Although there are not as many rinks, he said, the Swedes were good skaters largely because there is lots of natural ice there during the winter

He said skating was important in their game because the rinks are much wider than in Canada. A Swedish rink is usually 110 feet wide and at least as long. The Montreal Forum is 200 feet by 85 feet.

Because of the wide rinks, the Swedes emphasize skating more than checking But they "know how to throw a body check," he added The refereeing was good but while they called slashing, elbowing and boarding closely they were lax on interference calls which bothered the Canadians "because the Swedes followed our players everywhere and skated beside them holding their arms"

Another strong part of their game, Hookings said, was their passing

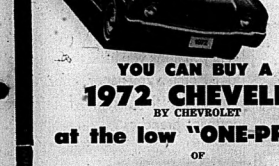
"They concentrated on getting a player open and once when we had a penalty, they controlled the puck for more than a minute in our end but made no one shot. They passed and passed trying to get someone set up in front of the net"

Equestrians Get More Gold Medals

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's gold-medal winning equestrians collected more gold medals in ceremonies at the National Equestrian Federation's annual luncheon Monday.

Veteran riders Tom Gayford and Jim Elder, who have led Canadian teams to gold medals in several international competitions, were decorated with the federation's gold medal award.

"We have presented this award only once before," said federation president George Jacobsen of Montreal. "In 1963 we honored Colonel Louis Pedrajski, commandant of the Spanish Riding School in Vienna, for horse masterships."



"They (Gayford and Elder) are being honored not only for their ability as athletes, but for their leadership, enthusiasm and persistence in building up the Canadian team and leading of countless times into competition."

Gayford, a 42-year-old stock broker from Gormley, Ont., won gold medals with a three-day event team at the 1959 Pan-American Games and with jumping teams in the 1968 Olympics, the 1970 world jumping championships and the 1971 Pan-Am Games.

Elder, 37, from Aurora, Ont., was on those same medal-winning teams.

The federation also announced its first gold medal horse awards, a new form of recognition for owners who loan their horses for use by the Canadian equestrian team.

Owners of 17 horses which had performed with gold-medal teams in Olympics, World or Pan-Americans competitions, were given the new award.
